(2) whether he intends to keep intact the Nature Conservancy Council's chief scientist's directorate.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Detailed discussions are now taking place to determine the organisation, complement and geographical location of the bodies which will succeed the Nature Conservancy Council. The Government will ensure that each of the bodies has access to appropriate scientific expertise and hopes that it will be possible for all members of NCC's existing permanent staff to be offered posts by the successor bodies.

Community Charge, Nottingham

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of what the community charge in Nottingham will be in May 1990.

Mr. Gummer: The level of the community charge in Nottingham in 1990 depends on the expenditure levels set by both Nottingham city council and Nottinghamshire county council. I have made no estimate of these and cannot forecast what the community charge might be. Illustrative estimates of charges had the new system been in operation this year were placed in the Library on 19 July.

Consultative Council on Local Government Finance

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in respect of smoking by participants at meetings of the consultative council on local government finance.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: My policy is freedom within the law.

Departmental Working Hours

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment during what hours his office is normally open to inquiries from hon. Members and others.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: My office is always open to inquiries during normal working hours —and often well beyond.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why the office of the Minister for Housing, Environment and Countryside was unmanned on Friday 14 July from 12 noon until 3.30 pm.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: I understand that my noble Friend is writing to my hon. Friend.

Royal Parks

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the numbers of applications for permission to use royal parks property for filming, photography and sound recordings which are dealt with each week by the press office facilities officer of his Department.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: My Department's press office facilities officer—in consultation with the parks and police authorities—deals with about 14 requests a week to use the royal parks, Trafalgar Square, Parliament square and Grosvenor square for the purposes of filming cinema and television dramas, documentaries, commercials and outside broadcasts; and about 30 applications a month for fashion and advertising photography which includes requests for annual passes.

Major news companies, based in London, hold annual passes for frequent news features and commentaries on camera, mainly on Abingdon street gardens.

Sound broadcasts are infrequent.

Bottle Banks

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the proportion of bottle banks per head of population for each London borough.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: I understand from the British Glass Manufacturers' Confederation that at the end of March the position was as follows:

| | Population per bottle bank (000) |

Clinical Hospital Waste

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department has taken any action on the recommendation by the Environment Select Committee's second report on toxic waste that landfill sites no longer be used to dispose of clinical hospital waste.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government response (Cm. 679 April 1989) to the Environment Committee report indicated that clinical wastes should be managed in accordance with guidelines in waste management paper No. 25 which advises that landfill is suitable for only a restricted range of clinical wastes. This advice is currently under review.

African Elephants

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the intention of Her Majesty's Government as regards entering a reservation on behalf of Hong Kong at the CITES meeting in October when consideration is given to appendix I listing of African elephants.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The Government support the case for the transfer of the African elephant to appendix I. We are in discussion with Hong Kong on the effect of such listing. All relevant issues will be discussed at the conference of the parties to CITES at Lausanne in October.

Inland Waters (Jet-skis)

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation he has had with the Nature Conservancy Council, the Countryside Commission, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, the National Anglers' Council and other interested bodies on the environmental impact of the use of jet-skis and similar devices on rivers and other inland waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 July 1989]: No consultation has taken place with these bodies on the use of jet-skis.

Housing Starts

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing housing starts in each region in the quarter to April, showing the percentage change in starts from the quarter ended April 1988.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: Housebuilding starts for regions in England in the three months to April 1989 and the corresponding period a year earlier are given in the table.

Housebuilding starts in thousands

| | February to April 1988 | 1989 | Percentage change |

Housing Action Trust (Southwark)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the policies of the proposed housing action trust in Southwark on rent arrears.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on Wednesday 19 July at column 213.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if the proposed housing action trust in Southwark would be able to accept transfer applications from Southwark council tenants;

(2) what effect would the creation of the proposed housing action trust in Southwark have on the rehousing, if places became available, of those tenants of the North Peckham and Gloucester grove estates, currently on Southwark council waiting lists.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: These would be matters for discussion between Southwark council and a trust.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in the event of a housing action trust being created, what requirement would be placed on the trust to accept a share of homeless cases in Southwark.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: Where a local housing authority requested a trust's assistance in discharging certain of its responsibilities towards the homeless, section 70 of the Housing Act 1988 would require the trust to co-operate in rendering reasonable assistance.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the membership of the proposed housing action trust board in Southwark would be tenants from either the Gloucester grove or North Peckham estates.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 19 July, at column 213.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he intends to take to ensure the independence of action of the members of the proposed housing action trust board in Southwark.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: The trust would itself be responsible for day-to-day decisions. Members will also be appointed for a number of years, fixed in advance. I would expect all of them to play a full part in helping to achieve a trust's objectives.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there will be any limitations on the time the proposed housing action trust in Southwark could continue to exist.

Mr. Trippier: Section 88 of the Housing Act 1988 requires a housing action trust to use its best endeavours to secure that its objects are achieved as soon as practicable.

Council Rents

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list the estimated council rent rises assessed by his Department on the formula relating them to local house values.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: The policy announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 14 June concerned a proposed mechanism for determining annual rent guidelines for local authorities by reference to the value of their housing stock. The mechanism does not in itself imply any particular levels of rents.

Gipsy Sites

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many designated gipsy sites there are in England and Wales; and if he will list them by county area.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: The number of local authorities in England which are designated under the Caravan Sites Act 1968 is as follows: 94 shire districts, 10 metropolitan districts and 22 London boroughs. In these areas local authorities currently provide 130 sites for gipsies. There are a further 128 gipsy sites provided by local authorities in areas that have not been designated under the Caravan Sites Act. There are also some authorised privately operated sites in some areas, but information is not available on numbers of these.

My Department publishes a list of gipsy sites provided by local authorities in England and I will send a copy to the hon. Member. Gipsy sites in Wales are the responsibility of the Welsh Office.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Recycled Paper

Ms. Walley: To ask the Lord President of the Council if, pursuant to his answer of 4 July, Official Report, column 154, he will make it his policy to take into account environmental considerations when deciding what is to qualify as first-class stationery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: The Accommodation and Administrative Sub-Committee is already fully aware of the need to take into account the environmental implications of decisions concerning the type of paper used in the House. Apart from its instructions to Her Majesty's Stationery Office and the authorities of the House to be kept informed of developments in relation to the use of recycled paper, the Sub-Committee is also engaged in consultations with the Department of Trade and Industry about the suitability of using paper containing recycled material for first class stationery.

Green Card Requests

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will look into ways of shortening the time it takes for green card requests for personal interviews to reach hon. Members.

Mr. Wakeham: The Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee recently agreed to a revised form of green card which is designed to facilitate speedier handling. Responsibility for the day-to-day management of this service lies, however, with the Serjeant at Arms and if the hon. Member has any specific complaint or suggestion to make he is advised in the first instance to consult the Serjeant at Arms.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Director of Public Prosecutions

60. Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Director of Public Prosecutions; and what matters were discussed.

The Solicitor-General: On 10 July. We discussed a matter of departmental interest.

European Court of Human Rights

61. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Attorney-General when he last visited the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg.

The Attorney-General: I represented the Government at the oral hearing of the Soering case on 24 April this year.

Legal Profession (Reform)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General (1) if he has received any representations from the Leicestershire Law Society concerning the effects on the network of national solicitors' offices of the proposals in "The Future of the Legal Profession"; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has received any representations from the Leicestershire Law Society concerning the takeover rate by insurance companies, building societies and other such institutions of estate agent firms; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor has received representations from the Leicestershire Law Society in connection with his Green Papers on the future of the legal profession. The White Paper "Legal Services: A Framework for the Future" (Cm 740) published on 19 July describes the Government's decisions on the proposals in the Green Papers and its plans for legislation.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the organisations which have responded to the document entitled "The Future of the Legal Profession"; which organisations (a) favour and (b) oppose the proposals; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor's three Green Papers published in January—"The Work and Organisation of the Legal Profession", "Contingency Fees" and "Conveyancing by Authorised Practitioners" —have been treated collectively as his papers on the future of the legal profession. They contained a variety of proposals and options. Over 2,000 responses were received from individuals and organisations. They included comments for and against some or all of the points raised. There would therefore be little benefit to be gained from seeking to construct a list of those for and against them as a whole. The White Paper "Legal Services: A Framework for the Future" (Cm. 740) published on 19 July contains a synopsis of the responses. The Lord Chancellor has also arranged, where authors have consented, for copies of all responses (except those which dealt only with personal cases) to be made available for inspection in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament, in the Supreme Court library and on written application, in his Department's headquarters.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

The Attorney-General: As the Government's principal legal adviser, I should regard it as my duty to provide ministerial colleagues with legal advice relating to small businesses if required. However, my Department, in the nature of its work, has no direct or particular responsibility towards small businesses as such.

Malicious Communications Act 1988

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions were brought under the Malicious Communications Act 1988 in the London metropolitan area; and what was their outcome.

The Attorney-General: I regret that such information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total number and proportion of 16 and 17-year-olds in the northern region and Durham in full-time employment or recognised training schemes or unemployed.

Mr. Cope: Data for each of the groups requested, on a comparable basis, is available only from the labour force survey. Preliminary estimates from the 1988 LFS are shown in the following table:

16 and 17 year olds—Northern region

Spring 1988, thousands and percent

| | 000's | Per cent.[3] |
|---|---|---|
| (i) employees and self-employed in full-time[1] employment | 15 | 16·2 |
| (ii) on government employment and training programmes | 16 | 17·2 |
| (iii) unemployed[2] | 11 | 11·8 |

[1] Based on respondents own assessments, not on the number of hours worked.

[2] ILO/OECD definition.

[3] As percentage of all 16 and 17 year olds.

Source: 1988 LFS, Preliminary results.

The LFS is a survey of private households based on a sample large enough to provide estimates at national and regional level. However, it cannot provide estimates for smaller areas, such as Durham.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report the number and percentage increase or decrease in employment in the United Kingdom and the European Community as a whole between 1979 and the latest year for which figures are available, giving the total, full-time employment and part-time employment separately.

Mr. Lee: Employment estimates are not yet available for many EC countries after 1987. The changes in total civilian employment for the United Kingdom and the EC as a whole between 1979 and 1987 are shown in the table. A breakdown of these figures between full-time and part-time employment is not available.

Change in Civilian Employment: 1979 to 1987

| | Thousand | per cent. |
|---|---|---|
| United Kingdom | −19 | −0·1 |
| EC12 | +701 | +0·6 |

Sources: United Kingdom (ED), Other EC countries (EUROSTAT)

Youth Training Scheme

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give, for Great Britain and each training agency area or employment service or careers service area, the number of people of YTS eligible age, at the latest available date, registered with jobcentres or the careers service who were awaiting an offer of a YTS place.

Mr. Lee: Only local careers services hold information on the total number of young people awaiting the offer of a YTS place. There is no central record.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if training and enterprise councils may vary the financial terms and conditions of trainees on (i) ET or (ii) YTS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The detailed arrangements for ET and YTS under training and enterprise councils are currently under consideration. Announcements will be made in due course.

Construction Training

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the average earnings for construction workers in the various trades in the south-east London area over the last five years.

Mr. Nicholls: Information is not available at the level of detail requested.

Training (Accidents)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the accident rate per 100,000 trainees on employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: The provisional rate for all accidents in employment training is 556 per 100,000 trainees.

TVEI

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has for the expansion of the technical and vocational education initiative scheme.

Mr. Cope: The extension of the technical and vocational education initiative (TVEI) was announced in July 1986, setting aside £900 million over a ten-year period. Since 1987, 48 education authorities have already begun to introduce TVEI into their schools and colleges. Another 32 authorities will join this September and by the early 1990s, all schools and colleges will be participating and all pupils aged 14-18 should be influenced by TVEI.

Tourist Attractions (Cornwall)

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the top 20 tourist attractions in Cornwall in numbers visiting or attending; and if he will indicate the numbers, in each instance, for the previous comparable year.

Mr. Lee: The English Tourist Board's annual survey of visits to attractions gives the following figures for Cornwall in 1987 and 1988:

Number of visits

| | 1987 | 1988 |
|---|---|---|
| Truro Cathedral | 250,000 | 250,000 |

Health and Safety

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he intends to make any regulations to provide for annual reports published under the Companies Act 1967 to contain information about the arrangements for securing the health, safety and welfare at work of employees of a company and its subsidiaries as provided in section 79 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has asked the Health and Safety Commission to advise him whether regulations should be made under section 235 of the Companies Act 1985 which replaced the 1967 Companies Act and section 79 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974.

Employment Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what organisations have been granted ET training agent contracts; what were the planned volumes of trainees between September 1988 and March 1989; what are the planned volumes between April 1989 and August 1989; how many trainees have been referred to ET training agents; and how many action plans have been agreed at the end of each month since September 1989, for each Training Agency area.

Mr. Nicholls [pursuant to his reply, 12 June 1989, c. 285-90]: I regret that there was an error in the original reply. The error is in table 2—Action plans completed by Employment Training training agents: September 1988 to March 1989. The figures provided for Northern region were monthly cumulative figures rather than in-month totals. The correct figures for the table are as follows:

Child Care

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, what measures he is taking to encourage the provision of child care facilities in the work place; and what information he has on how many firms and Government offices currently provide such facilities.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 5 July 1989]: My right hon. Friend takes every opportunity to encourage employers to help employees combine work and family responsibilities. Work place nurseries are one possible way of helping parents with childcare although it will not necessarily be the most appropriate in all cases. Other possibilities include help with childcare costs in the local home area and rearrangement of working hours and holidays to fit in with school hours and terms.

My right hon. Friend does not have comprehensive information on the extent of employer-assisted childcare outside Government Departments but the indications are that such provision is growing. In the Civil Service 15 departments provide holiday play schemes for the children of their staff. Two new inter-departmental schemes began in Westminster during the spring 1989 half-term. In addition two schemes were launched by the DSS during the Easter holidays: one at the Elephant and Castle and one, with the Department of Employment, in Coventry. The Departments of Employment and Social Security have set up "care-parents" schemes and the Ministry of Defence and the Home Office are both developing nursery schemes for the under-fives.

I also take a full part in the ministerial group on women's issues which is currently considering the whole question of childcare provision and which recently issued a five-point plan designed to pave the way for the provision of childcare to suit family needs.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Army-Police Operations

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many helicopter flying hours were available during June in support of army police operations from Newtownbutler and Rosslea Royal Ulster Constabulary stations in south-east Fermanagh.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many helicopter flying hours were required in support of the operation to dismantle the Lacky bridge permanent vehicle checkpoint.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It is not the practice to comment on operational matters of this sort.

Terrorist Activity (Fermanagh)

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have died as a result of terrorist activity in south-east Fermanagh since 1970.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Since 1970, 30 persons are believed to have died as a result of terrorist activity in the south-east Fermanagh area.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many terrorists have been convicted of murders in south-east Fermanagh since 1970.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Two.

Helicopters (Fermanagh)

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if there are any plans to increase the number of helicopter flying hours available for army-police operations to be carried out from Newtownbutler and Rosslea Royal Ulster Constabulary stations.

Mr. Ian Stewart: This is an operational matter for local security force commanders, in the light of the current terrorist threat and security force operations to meet that threat. If the threat increases in any given area, additional helicopter hours can be allocated to that area.

Lacky Bridge Checkpoint

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the opinion of elected representatives or the community leaders in south-east Fermanagh was sought before dismantling the Lacky bridge permanent vehicle checkpoint.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Operational security matters are not normally the subject of advance public consultation but this matter was given careful consideration and consultation between the chief constable and the general office commanding in the light of all available information.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation was carried out with the Royal Ulster Constabulary concerning the dismantling of the Lacky bridge permanent vehicle checkpoint; and what was the Royal Ulster Constabulary's response to the decision to dismantle.

Mr. Ian Stewart: As in all security issues this matter was the subject of careful consideration between the chief constable and the general office commanding. It is not the practice to comment on the details of consultations on security matters.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what was the cost (a) to the Army and (b) to the Royal Ulster Constabulary of the operation to dismantle the Lacky bridge permanent vehicle checkpoint;

(2) what would be, at current prices, the cost of re-establishing the Lacky bridge permanent vehicle checkpoint.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It is not the practice to comment on the cost of security operations. But there was no significant additional cost incurred by the Army during the operation to dismantle the Lacky bridge permanent vehicle checkpoint. The Royal Ulster Constabulary was not involved.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Lacky bridge permanent vehicle checkpoint was dismantled; and which elected representatives in Fermanagh and South Tyrone were notified from the Northern Ireland Office by letter or otherwise of the intention to do so.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The permanent vehicle checkpoint at Lacky bridge was dismantled between 4 and 7 July. It was my intention to speak to the hon. Gentleman prior to this happening but he became aware of it in advance from another source.

Checkpoints (Fermanagh)

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when permanent vehicle checkpoints were erected in south-east Fermanagh; and how many terrorist murders have been committed in that area since that time.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Permanent vehicle checkpoints were erected in the south-east Fermanagh area in October 1980; since that time six murders are believed to have been carried out by terrorists.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Viggers: The Government are committed to maximising the contribution that small firms can make to strengthening the Northern Ireland economy. A major priority is to help the Province's small businesses to prepare for the completion of the single European market. The publicly funded local enterprise development unit (LEDU) offers support to firms employing up to 50 who are establishing or expanding their businesses. For the year ended 31 March 1989, LEDU achieved record levels of activity, surpassing for the eighth successive year the performance of previous years in terms of jobs promoted.

The main performance indicators used, and the results achieved for the past two years, are as follows—

| | 1987-88 | 1988-89 |
|---|---|---|
| Number of jobs promoted | 4,570 | 5,004 |
| Cost per job promoted | £4520 | £4518 |
| Percentage public contribution to total project cost | 36 per cent. | 32 per cent. |

Trading Standards Officers

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many trading standards officers there are in each local authority area.

Mr. Viggers: The trading standards service in Northern Ireland is a central Government function and is the responsibility of the Department of Economic Development.

Branch headquarters are located at Newtownbreda near Belfast and there are local offices in Armagh, Ballymena, Coleraine, Enniskillen, Londonderry and Newry. The inspectorate, known as trading standards officers, comprises 20 qualified staff including the chief inspector. Of these, 13 are located at headquarters and the remainder at the outstations.

Permanent Secretaries (Correspondence)

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the people whom he does not permit to correspond with the permanent secretaries of the various Northern Ireland departments.

Mr. Tom King: None. I should however be grateful if, in accordance with the normal well-understood practice, hon. Members who wish to raise with Northern Ireland departmental headquarters matters for which Ministers are responsible to Parliament would correspond with the appropriate Minister rather than with an official. I have requested permanent secretaries to draw this to the attention of an hon. Member if he is not following the usual procedure and to ask him to correspond directly with the responsible Minister. This will ensure that matters which are raised by constituents through their Members of Parliament receive the most prompt and proper attention.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the past five years, and the figure for the current year to date, of refusals to enter the United Kingdom in which primary purpose is part or the whole reason for (a) husbands, (b) wives, (c) fiancées and (d) fiancés seeking entry to join their partners with existing rights of stay in the United Kingdom, for each immigration post abroad.

Mr. Renton: The information requested is available only for posts in the Indian subcontinent and is given in the following table. Where the numbers are small, the figures for individual posts have been combined. Information on refusals which takes account of successful appeals is not compiled for periods shorter than 12 months.

[1] Data for 1984 relate to person refused initially; data for subsequent years take account of successful appeals.

[2] Five or fewer.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration inspectors are employed by his Department and where each is based; what is the comparable rank of (a) an immigration inspector and (b) officials taking decisions on deportation or leave to remain (i) in Lunar house and (ii) elsewhere within the Home Office; and what grade officer was required to take a decision to make a deportation order before he delegated his deportation decision-making functions to immigration inspectors.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 17 July 1989]: On 30 June 1989, 52 immigration inspectors were in post at the following locations:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Immigration Service Headquarters | 10 |
| Heathrow Terminal 1 | 4 |
| Heathrow Terminal 2 | 4 |
| Heathrow Terminal 3 | 4 |
| Heathrow Terminal 4 | 4 |

| | Number |

The level at which decisions are taken in immigration cases varies according to the complexity of the type of case. However, decisions to issue a notice of intention to deport under section 3(5)(a) of the Immigration Act 1971 may be taken by officials of at least inspector level in the immigration service (whose grade equivalent is senior executive officer) or at least higher executive officer level in the deportation section. Similar decisions under section 3(5)(b) and (c) may be taken at not less than senior executive officer level in the deportation section. Decisions to grant further leave to remain may be taken by officials of at least administration officer level in the Immigration and Nationality Department; and decisions to refuse leave to remain may be taken at not less than executive officer level. The levels at which decisions are taken in the deportation section remain the same as they were before the decision to delegate certain functions to immigration inspectors.

Privacy Committee

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors influenced the decision to limit the Privacy Committee's terms of reference to the problems of privacy caused by the press and media; what areas indicated in his original announcement of the Committee on 21 April, Official Report, column 593, are not included; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: As I made clear in the debate on 21 April at column 593 the precise terms of reference of the committee to review privacy and related matters were then still under consideration. They have been limited to the press because it is the activities of some sections of that industry that have caused such wide concern recently, and because the Government considered that the review should be carried out speedily.

HIV (Prisons)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are known to be HIV positive; and in which prisons they are held.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 30 June 1989, 63 prisoners were known to be HIV antibody positive from tests carried out before or after they came into custody. Of these prisoners, nine were located in establishments in the north region, 10 in the Midland region, five in the south-west region and 39 in the south-east region. For reasons of medical confidentiality, it is not our practice to disclose the number of current cases in individual establishments.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many tests for HIV antibodies were carried out in prisons in England and Wales in the last year for which figures are available; and how many were positive;

(2) what steps are taken to encourage prisoners to volunteer for HIV antibody testing;

(3) what steps are taken to safeguard the confidentiality of the results of HIV positive antibody tests in prisons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: HIV antibody tests are freely available to prisoners, as they are to people in the outside community. Whether a test is advised in an individual case is a matter for the clinical discretion of the prison medical officer. In the 12 months ended 30 June 1989, 30 positive results were reported from tests carried out after the prisoners concerned came into custody. Negative results are not reported. Medical officers and their health care staff apply the normal rules of medical confidentiality to the test results and related diagnoses.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the AIDS videos for (a) prison staff and (b) prisoners have been shown in each prison establishment in England and Wales since they have been available.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information in the form requested is not available. The staff training video is shown to all new entrant prison officers, and governors have been set a target for the training year ending March 1990 of showing it to all operational staff who have not attended a showing previously. The minimum target for the same year for showing the educational video for prisoners to those who wish to see it is to arrange at least one showing to every prisoner who has been or is expected to be in custody for four weeks or longer.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if it is his policy to restrict the location and activities of HIV positive prisoners; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the purpose of current viral infectivity restrictions in Her Majesty's prisons in England and Wales.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our policy is to enable identified HIV antibody positive prisoners who are well to play as full a part in prison life as possible. However, having regard to the responsibilities of the prison service towards other prisoners and to staff, it has been thought right in the circumstances obtaining in England and Wales to enable medical officers to take precautions which may limit access to some regime activity. The main recommended restriction is location in single accommodation or communal accommodation shared with other identified HIV antibody positive prisoners. The medical officer may also restrict participation in activities which run the risk of physical injury such as work with machinery or sharp objects, and physical contact sports.

The system of viral infectivity restrictions (VIR), which is also applied to prisoners with other infective conditions, has a secondary purpose of enabling local management to disclose a prisoner's VIR status, but not the actual diagnosis, to operational staff who are considered to have a "need to know". Experience in England and Wales is that this practice has been valuable in giving psychological reassurance to staff.

Further guidance on the application of VIR is planned to encourage local management to place more VIR prisoners in non-specialised locations and to widen opportunities for participation in normal regime activity.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what arrangements are made for clinical and psychological monitoring and care of HIV positive prisoners in England and Wales;

(2) what arrangements are made for the continuing care of HIV positive prisoners after their release from prison;

(3) what counselling is available for HIV positive and AIDS prisoners.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The health care management of HIV antibody positive prisoners, including arrangements to ensure as far as possible that appropriate health care continues after release, is a responsibility of prison medical officers which they exercise in consultation with appropriate NHS specialists taking account of broad policy guidelines from the director of prison medical services. For the provision of counselling services they have access both to prison service staff who have been trained in HIV counselling and to outside agencies which provide such services.

The director of prison medical service plans to issue further guidance on the clinical care of HIV infected prisoners. The importance of psychological monitoring will be stressed.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy for the provision of care and support units for prisoners with AIDS-related illness.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The need is recognised for medical facilities in each prison service region which will be capable of giving short or longer-term care and support to prisoners with AIDS, AIDS-related illness or other infectious illness, whose condition does not require admission to the specialised facilities of the National Health Service. A purpose-designed unit is planned for Brixton prison. Hospital accommodation with suitable facilities at other establishments will also be used to fulfil the care and support function.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current programme for training of prison staff at all levels in relation to their responsibilities for the care of prisoners who have been diagnosed HIV positive, including those who may have developed AIDS-related illness.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Locally organised training programmes directed at operational staff provide basic health and safety information and ana understanding of the nature of AIDS and HIV infection at a level appropriate to their task of managing infected prisoners with no signs or symptoms of illness. Most training of health care staff is also arranged locally but will often include attendance at external courses and detachments to local NHS hospitals. External AIDS counselling courses have been attended by prison service staff from a variety of disciplines.

The director of prison medical services plans to develop further training programmes for medical officers and other health care staff tailored to their specific needs.

Immigration Offences

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many suspected immigration offenders against whom action was taken by officers in each month since January 1988, at (a) Isis house and (b) Harmondsworth were (i) alleged illegal entrants, (ii) the subjects of deportation orders, (iii) seaman deserters, (iv) overstayers, (v) people working in breach of conditions and (vi) claimed British nationality; and how many in each category were served with notices of intention to deport (1) by officers within the immigration service and (2) by officials within the immigration and nationality department.

No figures are available to show the number of offenders who may have claimed British nationality.

Column (ii) Some of those served with a deportation order may also have been served with a notice of intention to deport previously but no details are available.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times in each month since January 1988, immigration officers at (a) Isis house and (b) Harmondsworth took action as a result of (i) police call-outs, (ii) denunciations, (iii) Home Office file inquiries, (iv) information provided by other Government agencies, (v) information arising from a major or middle tier operation and (vi) information arising as a consequence of another inquiry.

Asylum-Seekers

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often and in what circumstances the immigration and nationality department discloses information held on computer about asylum-seekers and their families to (a) past, current or prospective employers and employees, (b) other members of their families, (c) advisers and advice workers, (d) the Department of Social Security, (e) other Government Departments, (f) police forces, (g) judges, magistrates and the courts, (h) the prison and probation services, (i) education establishments, (j) public libraries, the press and media, (k) the registrar general and (l) hon. Members of the House of Lords; and whether asylum-seekers are told that information collected from and about them is liable to be disclosed in this way.

Mr. Renton: Information on individual asylum seekers is treated in strict confidence. Information which is held on the refugee index is used for statistical purposes and as an aid to case workers in the Home Office's refugee unit. There is no disclosure from it outside Government of information on individual cases.

Toxteth (Policing)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of Merseyside as to what action he is taking in response to the report of Lord Gifford, concerning police involvement in drug trafficking.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No formal allegations concerning the involvement of police officers in drug trafficking are made by Lord Gifford in his report.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends to take in the light of the findings of Lord Gifford's inquiry into policing in Toxteth, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend does not consider that Lord Gifford's report presents an objective and balanced assessment of the considerable progress made in improving police community relations in Liverpool 8 since 1981. Nor does he consider that there is a case for the establishment of an official inquiry into policing of the area.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he expects any prosecutions to arise in the light of Lord Gifford's allegations concerning trafficking of drugs in Toxteth.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The question of whether a prosecution should be brought in any particular case is entirely one for the Crown prosecution service in the light of the evidence obtained by the police.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Over the past 12 months, the Home Office has helped small firms by improving the information, access and opportunities necessary to enable them to tender for our business. We have issued a booklet entitled "Selling to the Home Office", which provides details of our typical purchasing needs and guidance for potential suppliers on where and how to make the initial approach. The purchasing powers of local offices throughout England and Wales have also been increased; minimising procedures and extending opportunities for small firms.

Home Office performance indicators on purchasing are directed at getting better value for the money we spend, and do not differentiate between the size of firms to which contracts are awarded or provide statistical information about business placed with small firms.

Telephones (Prisoners' Access)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at what times of day grant of access to telephones is made at (a) each open prison, (b) each category C prison and (c) designated female and young offender establishments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Cardphones for inmates' use have so far been generally installed only at open establishments. The times at which inmates have access to them are a matter for the governors concerned, but the main periods during which they can be used (a) on weekdays and (b) at weekends are as follows:

HMP Askham Grange (a) 6 pm—9 pm (b) 9 am—9 pm; HMP/YOI Drake Hall (a) 5.45 pm/9.30 pm—(b) 8 am—9.30 pm; HMP/HMYOI East Sutton Park (a) 11.50 am—1.05 pm, 4.30 pm—9.00 pm (b) 8.00 am—9.00 pm; HMYOI Finnamore Wood (a) 6.15 pm—8.15 pm (b) 12 noon—4.45 pm; HMP Ford: all times other than midnight—7.45 am and periods of employment; HMP Foston Hall (a) 5.30 pm—8.30 pm (b) 10.30 am—8.30 pm; HMYOI Guys Marsh (a) and (b) 5.30 pm—8.30 pm; HMYOI Hatfield (a) 6.00 pm—8.45 pm; (b). times differ according to location within establishment; HMYOI Hewell Grange (a) 5.30 pm—8.00 pm (b) (Saturday) 10.30 am—12 noon, (Sunday) 5.30 pm—8.00 pm; HMP Highpoint (a) 6.00 pm—11.00 pm (b) all day; HMYOI Hollesley Bay Colony (a) and (b) 6.00 pm—8.00 pm; HMP Kirkham (a) and (b) 12 noon—12.45 pm, 5.00 pm—8.45 pm; HMP Leyhill (a) and (b) 7.30 am—9.00 pm; HMP Lindholme (a) and (b) all day to 10.45 pm, excluding periods of employment; HMYOI Lowdham Grange (a) 5.00 pm—8.30 pm (b) all day; HMP Morton Hall (a) and (b) 11.30 am—1.15 pm, (Monday—Thursday) 4.30 pm—10.15 pm, (Friday—Sunday) 4.30 pm—11.00 pm; HMP North Sea Camp (a) 5.30 pm—8.30 pm (b) 8.30 am—8.30 pm; HMP Rudgate (a) 5.30 pm—8.30 pm (b) 12.30 pm—4.00 pm, 5.00 pm—8.30 pm; HMP Spring Hill (a) 12 noon—1.00 pm, 5.00 pm—10.00 pm, (b) 9.00 am—10 pm; HMP Standford Hill (a) and (b) 7.40 am—8.20 am, 12 noon—1.00 pm, 4.00 pm—9.00 pm; HMYOI Thorn Cross (a) 6.00 pm—8.00 pm (b) plus (Friday) 9.00 am—12 noon, 6.00 pm—8.00 pm, (Friday only) 2.00 pm—5.30 pm; HMYOI Usk (a) 6.00 pm—8.30 pm (b) 10.30 am—11.45 am.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the maximum value of phonecard permitted for purchase by prisoners, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The maximum value is £2. All inmates may however hold two cards, or more at the discretion of the governor.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the ratio of telephones to prisoners at (a) each open prison, (b) each category C prison and (c) designated female and young offender establishments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Cardphones for the use of inmates have so far been generally installed only at open establishments. The average numbers of inmates to each cardphone is approximately as follows:

HMP Askham Grange 59; HMP/HMYOI Drake Hall 75; HMP/HMYOI East Sutton Park 75; HMYOI Finnamore Wood 293; HMP Ford 89; HMP Forston Hall 207; HMYOI Guys Marsh 145; HMYOI Hatfield 221; HMYOI Hewell Grange 133; HMP Highpoint (Category D only) 71; HMYOI Hollesley Bay Colony 465; HMP Kirkham 168; HMP Leyhill 189; HMP Lindholme 51; HMYOI Lowdham Grange 127; HMP Morton Hall 85; HMP North Sea Camp 220; HMP Rudgate 125; HMP Spring Hill 102; HMP Standford Hill 72; HMYOI Thorn Cross 116; HMYOI Usk 75.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons are eligible to install telephones for prisoners do not yet have them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The following establishments are due to install cardphones for the use of inmates before the end of this year:

Malicious Communications

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been made in the London metropolitan area under the Malicious Communications Act 1988; and what was their outcome.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 13 July 1989 at column 644.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement about publicity given to the effect of the Malicious Communications Act 1988;

(2) what sums he has spent on publicity to draw the attention of the public to the effects of the Malicious Communications Act 1988;

(3) whether he will take steps to increase public awareness of the provisions of the Malicious Communications Act 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We issued a press notice on 29 July 1988, when the Malicious Communications Act 1988 received Royal Assent, drawing attention to the Act's provisions. A Home Office circular was issued on 1 September 1988 to the courts, the police and the Crown prosecution service to explain the provisions of the Act and to advise of its commencement on 29 September. It is not possible to calculate the costs of issuing the press notice and circular without incurring disproportionate cost. The Government continue to take opportunities to keep members of the public informed about developments in the criminal law.

Bail Hostels, Leeds and Bradford

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bail hostels exist in the Leeds and Bradford area; what other forms of accommodation are available for persons on bail; what plans there are for increasing the number of hostels; and what advice is given to magistrates on the use of bail hostels.

Mr. John Patten: There are six approved hostels in the Leeds and Bradford area which take bailees—four in Leeds, one in Cleckheaton and one in Bradford amounting to 113 places in all. We have agreed in principle to outline proposals for two more hostels and additional places at existing hostels in West Yorkshire by April 1990 which will provide a further 50 to 52 beds.

There is a wide range of other housing agency hostels and self-contained accommodation available for bailees including supported lodgings.

The presumption in favour of bail was firmly established by the Bail Act 1976. More recently guidance on bail, including accommodation, was issued to magistrates courts on 11 May 1988 in Home Office circular 25/1988. A list of all approved hostels and their catchment areas is issued to courts by the Home Office from time to time; local probation areas notify courts when a new hostel opens.

We are also encouraging the development of bail information schemes which give courts better information on which to take decisions about bail. A new scheme is due to start in Leeds on 31 July and a feasibility study is under way in Bradford.

Armley Prison

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hospital officers and medical officers work on the hospital wing of Armley prison during the day and during the night as distinct from the total number of staff employed to provide a service, for 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Because staffing levels vary from day to day it is not possible to make comparisons between whole years. The following information gives the situation at the mid-point of each year, that is, 30 June.

On 30 June 1988 four full-time and two part-time medical officers attended during the day, one of the latter also attending in the evening. The same pattern occurred on 30 June 1989 except that five full-time medical officers attended on that day. On both dates one doctor was on call at night.

The number of hospital officers working during the day on both dates ranged at different times between four and 10, and one officer on duty at night.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the staff-prisoner ratio on B wing of Her Majesty's Armley prison; and what training is given to staff in suicide prevention and dealing with young persons now and in 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There were 227 inmates on B wing on 21 July, and 23 staff are generally assigned to work on the wing. Training for prison staff in how best to identify and help suicidal inmates was introduced in 1987. Fifty-one staff at Leeds prison had been so trained by February 1989; 125 staff have now been trained, and weekly training courses are to take place throughout the autumn with the intention of training all staff by the end of the year.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of persons on remand as a percentage of the total number of prisoners in custody in Her Majesty's prison Armley in 1988 and 1989 to date.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information is given in the table.

Remand population as a percentage of the total population of Leeds prison: January 1988 to May 1989

Attempted Suicides, Armley and Hull

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the numbers of incidents classified as suicide attempts and self mutilations at Armley and Hull prisons in 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Five incidents of self-injury were reported by the medical officer at Leeds during the year ending 31 March 1988, and 39 in the subsequent year. The corresponding figures at Hull were 53 and 93.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who is responsible for deciding to classify an incident as a self mutilation or an attempted suicide at Armley prison; and what criteria are used.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At all prison service establishments medical officers are responsible for distinguishing acts of non-fatal self-injury which are considered to have been committed with suicidal intent from those which appear not to have been so motivated. The categorisation of individual cases is a matter for clinical judgment on the part of the doctor.

Suicides (Hull Prison)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many suicides there were in Hull prison among (a) young people and (b) remand prisoners during 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There were no inmate suicides at Her Majesty's prison Hull during the period in question.

Leeds Prison

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the functions of Leeds prison; and how many category A prisoners are held there now and in 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's prison Leeds is a local prison. As such its main function is to keep unsentenced prisoners in custody for the courts and to present them for trial or sentence; and to receive sentenced prisoners from the courts, keeping them in custody until they are categorised and allocated to training prisons or until they become due for release.

Six category A prisoners were held in Leeds prison on 30 June this year, and 10 on 30 June 1988.

Everthorpe

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the proposed plans for the site at Everthorpe; and when it will be completed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is proposed to build a remand centre for 300 inmates next to HM young offenders institute Everthorpe. Detailed designs are now being prepared. Construction is planned to begin towards the end of this year, with the establishment opening early in 1992.

Strip Cells

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is prison policy on the use of strip cells for persons who have attempted suicide; and if counselling is available for those who last attempted suicide.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Guidelines on the use of stripped rooms for suicidal inmates are set out in paragraph 33 of circular instruction 20/1989, a copy of which is in the Library. Counselling is normally available to all inmates from prison staff, particularly medical officers, chaplains and seconded probation officers; the help of Samaritans is also now available to prisoners at a substantial number of establishments.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the usage of strip cells in Armley and Hull prisons in 1988 and 1989; how many cells exist; for what purpose they are used; and how long each person is held.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and deposit a copy of the reply in the Library.

Remand Prisoners, Leeds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans exist for building recreational or other facilities for the exclusive use of young persons on remand at Leeds.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The expansion and modernisation of Leeds prison currently in progress includes the provision of a new sports hall, outdoor sports areas and a library and educational block. Association and education facilities will also be provided in the two new living wings which are being built to house remand prisoners. Work on these wings is due to begin in March 1990. The whole programme of work is scheduled for completion in 1997, but many of the supporting facilities will be in use by the early 1990s. It will be for the governor to decide the arrangements for the use of these facilities by young persons on remand in the light of operational needs.

Armley and Hull Prisons

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average daily intake of prisoners at Armley and Hull, including the maximum and minimum figures for May, June, August, November 1988 and May and June of the current year.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is given in the table.

Her Majesty's Prison, Leeds

| Month | Average daily intake | Daily maximum | Daily minimum |

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is set out in the table.

Dyfed Powys

Prisons (Catering Costs)

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the approximate cost of the daily main meal for prisoners in Her Majesty's prisons; and what is the weekly food budget per prisoner.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The average weekly notional cost of food per prisoner in Her Majesty's prisons, including items supplied from prison farms and gardens, is £6·10; the approximate cost of food for the daily main meal is 44p.

County Fire Service, Wales

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many section 19 applications he has received during each of the last five years in respect of the county fire service in Wales; and what was the outcome in each case.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not immediately available: I will reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Xu Hai Ning

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the entry and resident status in the United Kingdom of Mr. Xu Hai Ning, a citizen of China; and if he has received any information from the immigration services concerning the circumstances of his departure.

Mr. Renton: Mr. Xu applied for asylum in Hong Kong. He arrived in the United Kingdom on 30 June and was given leave to enter for 12 months. On 17 July he contacted his embassy in London and said he wished to return to China. Immediately before his departure on 18 July the immigration service took steps to interview him privately and he told them that he was leaving voluntarily.

Chinese Citizens

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to protect Chinese citizens who are in the United Kingdom from pressure and threats to return to China.

Mr. Renton: Any Chinese national who feels at risk in the United Kingdom should contact the police. If the immigration service has reason to believe that someone is leaving the United Kingdom under pressure it will take steps to offer him a private interview before his departure.

Overseas Students (Vacation Employment)

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Home Department when he expects to be able to give a substantive reply to the hon. Member for Broxbourne in relation to correspondence from Mr. Baxendale of Cuffley, on the subject of paid employment during vacations for full-time overseas students, forwarded to the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) on 30 November1988, 5 January, 7 February, 22 March, 12 April and 17 May; what are the reasons for the delay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. Friend wrote to my hon. Friend on 21 July. I am very sorry for the delay in dealing with this correspondence which was due to oversights on the part of the officials dealing with the matter.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Sir Hugh Rossi: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans exist to ensure the safe disposal of both chlorofluorocarbon refrigerant material and chlorofluorocarbon II in the foam in refrigeration and air-cooling equipment under the control of his Department.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 13 July 1989]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment the hon. Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley), on 13 July at column 631.

Abbey National Shares

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the disqualification of widows from the free allocation of Abbey National shares as a consequence of the terms of section 116 of the Building Societies Act 1962; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for East Lothian (Mr. Home Robertson) on 18 July 1989, Official Report, column 86.

SCOTLAND

HIV (Prisons)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many tests for HIV antibodies were carried out in prisons in Scotland in the last year for which figures are available; and how many were positive.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Comprehensive figures are not available for past years. So far this year, at least 222 inmates in Scottish penal establishments have been tested for HIV antibodies. Of those tests, 18 proved positive.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are made for clinical and psychological monitoring and care of HIV positive prisoners in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Clinical monitoring and care of HIV positive prisoners is in the hands of prison medical officers, who consult outside colleagues and specialists as they judge necessary. If such prisoners require for clinical purposes to visit NHS facilities, appropriate arrangements are made. In some establishments regular clinics for HIV positive prisoners are run by NHS specialists. Full psychological services are provided within prisons, and on the counselling side staff are given specific training in dealing with HIV positive prisoners. Additionally, expert external counsellors are increasingly being made use of in prisons.

Viral Infectivity Restrictions (Prisons)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to introduce viral infectivity restrictions in Her Majesty's prisons in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has not thought it appropriate to introduce viral infectivity restrictions in Scottish penal establishments, nor are there any plans for their introduction.

Births

Forests

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what incentives he is considering to protect the forested areas of the United Kingdom.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The forested areas of Britain are generally well protected. The felling of trees is controlled by the Forestry Commission in exercise of its powers under the Forestry Act 1967; the commission is also active in protecting the health of trees.

The protection of forests in Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Professional Liability

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to announce the conclusion of his Department's study to establish the nature, scope, extent and implications of professional liability problems.

Mr. Maude: We have received the report of the professional liability review under the chairmanship of Professor Andrew Likierman which covered selected professions: auditors, construction industry professions and surveyors. We are making arrangements for it to be published in October, and we shall make a statement at that time.

White Papers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if, for each of the last three White Papers issued by his Department, for which legislation has been started, he will state the time elapsed between their publication and the First Readings of any Bills connected with them; and if he will do the same for the last three White Papers issued by the Department of Trade and Industry prior to May 1979.

Mr. Newton: The last three White Papers published by my Department, in which legislation was proposed and has been subsequently started or completed were: "Intellectual Property and Innovation" (Cm. 9712), "Financial Services in the UK" (Cm. 9432) and "Safety of Goods" (Cm. 9302). These were published on 15 April 1986, 29 January 1985 and 12 July 1984 respectively and the First Readings of the Copyright Designs and Patents, Financial Services and Consumer Protection Bills resulting from them took place on 28 October 1987, 18 December 1985 and 19 November 1986. It is not for me to answer for the record of the last Government in this matter, but the information requested should be available in the Library of the House and the Official Report.

Research Clubs

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) research clubs and (b) research club members there have been in each of the past five years; what has been the extent of Government support to research clubs; and how many (a) clubs and (b) members there are in each standard region.

Mr. Forth: The information is not available in the form requested.

My Department supports a wide variety of research clubs. Some of these are managed by DTI's own research establishments. Currently 44 clubs, with 1,981 members, are associated with DTI research establishments. Of these 15 are run by the national engineering laboratory in Scotland and 29 by laboratories in the south-east region. The members are firms and research organisations from all parts of the United Kingdom and some from overseas.

Last year my Department published an evaluation report covering 104 clubs current in October 1987 which at that time had 2,430 members (including multiple memberships). The report is available from my Department's library. I will send the hon. Member a copy.

Computers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether his Department has investigated the implications for privacy that arise from the itemised billing computer systems of BT and Mercury when they have a warrant from a court; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Provisions about customer privacy are already incorporated in the licences which have been granted by the Secretary of State to British Telecom and Mercury under section 7 of the Telecommunications Act 1984. The licences require each company to observe the terms of a code of practice on the confidentiality of customer information, approved by the Director General of Telecommunications, which regulate the disclosure of information about a customer.

Girobank

Miss Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to review the decision to sell Girobank to the Alliance and Leicester building society in view of the refusal of the Building Societies Commission to permit the Alliance and Leicester to keep Girobank's leasing and commercial lending business.

Mr. Newton: The Government were aware that Girobank's leasing and commercial lending business would be ultra vires for a building society and took this into account in endorsing the Post Office board's decision to grant the Alliance and Leicester a period of exclusive negotiations. Appropriate arrangements in respect of these activities are among the matters covered in those negotiations, the details of which are confidential.

Post Office Counters

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his assessment of by how much the amount which would be realised from the sale into the private sector of Post Office Counters would exceed the book value of its property assets.

Mr. Newton: We have no estimate of the possible sale value of Post Office Counters Ltd. The net book value of its land and buildings at 29 March 1989 was shown as £70·8 million in its 1988-89 accounts.

Beer

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan), 21 June, Official Report, column 177, if he will list those representations he has received in favour and those against the recommendations of the report, "The Supply of Beer," Cm. 651.

Mr. Maude: I have received a considerable number of representations from many different organisations and individuals, including 1,980 letters. Of these, some were in favour of all of the MMC's recommendations; some were against the recommendations; and others were in favour of some recommendations and against others.

In some instances, correspondents have written several times, amending their views following statements in the House and another place. In other cases correspondents have asked that their letters be treated in confidence.

It is not possible, in these circumstances, to give a precise answer.

Trading Standards Officers

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many trading standards officers there are in each local authority area in England and Wales.

Mr. Forth: Information on the number of trading standards officers employed in each local weights and measures authority is contained in "Trading Standards Statistics" published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, a copy of which is held in the House of Commons Library.

Fireworks

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish details of firework injuries for 1988 by type of injury and in each geographical region.

Mr. Forth: The firework injury statistics given in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Hughes) on 20 April, at columns 256-58 included a breakdown by severity of injury and separated eye injuries from the total. No further details of the type of injury involved is available.

The table contains an analysis of fire accidents by type of firework and regional health authority.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations have been made to him by (a) trading standards officers and (b) the Health and Safety Executive concerning proposals to change the procedures to test fireworks.

Mr. Forth: Trading standards officers have complained that there are too few test houses capable of testing fireworks for safety, and that those local authorities doing the most testing will face a financial burden. The Health and Safety Executive is concerned that it is not its proper function to test fireworks and that it is the proper responsibility of trading standards departments. My Department is looking into the arrangements for the testing of fireworks.

Holidaymakers

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his policy towards the recent EEC Commission proposals to provide increased consumer protection for holiday makers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The United Kingdom shares the concerns expressed by many member states at the Tourism Council on 14 December about the draft directive on package travel, particularly the provisions on liability. The Council concluded that the draft needed to be re-examined in the light of the debate and taking into account the views of the European Parliament. We are disappointed that the revised proposals submitted on 6 July do not reflect the concerns expressed at the Council. We will continue to negotiate firmly but constructively in Brussels.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Newton: The Government's general policy towards small businesses is to create a climate in which they can flourish and to provide measures that support and help stimulate their development.

The enterprise initiative was launched by my Department on 13 January 1988 with the aim of encouraging the process of wealth creation by stimulating individual initiative and enterprise. It comprises a number of individual initiatives covering the consultancy initiatives, research and technology, enterprise and education, regional assistance and the recently relaunched export initiative. All share the objectives of encouraging enterprise, developing management skills, promoting best practice and thereby improving competitiveness.

The consultancy initiatives form a major element of the enterprise initiative. They offer financial support to small and medium-sized firms for between five and 15 days of consultancy in the following key management areas: design, marketing, manufacturing systems, quality, business planning and financial and information systems. Independent firms with less than 500 employees in most manufacturing and service sectors in England, Scotland and Wales may benefit from up to two of the consultancy initiatives.

By 30 June 1989, a total of 29,800 applications had been received, 26,600 business reviews had been completed and 20,200 projects for assisted consultancy had been approved.

One of the main objectives of the export initiative is to assist small companies to develop their export potential. New support for small companies includes the introduction of a national network of export development advisers targeted specifically at companies in the £1 million to £10 million turnover range. It is too early to access the impact of these new measures.

Regional enterprise grants (REG) were introduced as part of the regional initiative in April 1988. They are aimed specifically at small businesses in the development areas and South Yorkshire employing fewer than 25 people, and are designed to support their investment and innovation projects. In 1988-89, the first year of the scheme, my Department received 1,637 applications, and made 922 offers of grant with a total value of £7·7 million. The DTI, together with the Welsh and Scottish Offices, has established a rolling evaluation programme for the scheme to assess the cumulative effect on recipient businesses and on the economy of eligible areas.

Yearly figures for the work of the inner cities initiative are not available. However from the time the initiative began in 1986 until the 31 March 1988, it is estimated that the task forces have, in meeting their objective of encouraging enterprise, provided support for more than 3,800 businesses the majority of which are small ones. This assistance has taken a variety of forms including loans and grants from the task force development funds.

The small firms merit award for research and technology (SMART) encourages small businesses to engage in high-risk projects in the fields of advanced manufacturing techniques, advanced materials, biotechnology and information technology.

In 1988 a total of 140 cash awards were made out of a total of 930 applications. It is too early to judge the long term effects of the scheme, but it is hoped that the eventual success rate will exceed 50 per cent. of the firms that have been supported by the scheme.

Our White Paper "Releasing Enterprise" lists nearly 120 deregulation achievements across all Departments, with around 80 new proposals in the coming year. Although not targeted specifically at small businesses, these matters will be of particular benefit to them.

Inner City Regeneration

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the impact of urban development corporations on the regeneration of inner cities, indicating inter alia (a) the amount of grants made, (b) the amount of private investment attracted, (c) the number of acres retained and (d) other benefits achieved in each of the urban district councils in England and Wales.

Mr. Trippier: I have been asked to reply.

Urban development corporations are making a significant impact on the problems of dereliction and decay at the heart of several of our inner cities. The specific figures for each English urban development council, up to 31 March 1989, are as follows:

| | (a) Grants received (external financing limits) (£ million) | (b) Estimated private investment attracted[1] (£ million) | (c) Land reclaimed (Acres) |
|---|---|---|---|
| Black Country development corporation | 25·4 | 99·0 | 104·0 |
| Bristol development corporation | 0·3 | — | — |
| Central Manchester development corporation | 2·5 | 35·0 | 2·5 |
| Leeds development corporation | 2·7 | 0·2 | — |
| London Docklands development corporation | 512·4 | 6,857·0 | 1,571·0 |
| Merseyside development corporation | 189·0 | 44·0 | 704·0 |
| Sheffield development corporation | 8·0 | 0·4 | 5·0 |
| Teesside development corporation | 26·0 | 39·0 | 84·0 |
| Trafford Park development corporation | 25·5 | 201·0 | 44·0 |
| Tyne and Wear development corporation | 28·0 | 45·0 | 54·0 |

[1] In addition to the figures quoted, there are various major investments currently in the pipeline.

English Estates

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will make a statement on English Estates' future development strategy.

Mr. Newton: In his statement of 27 July 1988, my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State set out a new strategy for English Estates' operations in the assisted areas. The statement recognised that English Estates would continue to be an important instrument of Government regional policy, but that the significant improvement in the property market in some parts of the assisted areas meant that a major change of emphasis in the corporation's role was necessary in order to encourage the emerging private sector interest in providing industrial and commercial floor space in those areas. In particular it was envisaged that English Estates' role as a facilitator would assume much greater significance through the marketing of development opportunities, the preparation and disposal of serviced sites, and joint ventures; and that English Estates would itself only provide premises in the areas and of a type where private sector provision remained inadequate and was likely to remain so in the foreseeable future.

The property market in the assisted areas has continued to improve, with rental levels rising strongly in many parts of the country. English Estates will shortly be publishing brochures setting out its future development strategy region by region, with emphasis on proposals to be started during 1989-90.

For the current financial year, I have asked the corporation to aim for an assisted areas programme of up to £44 million. In addition, English Estates has started work on a special programme for the provision in Sunderland of some £7·5 million for factory space over and above its existing commitment in the north-east. We expect £4 million of that special programme to fall within 1989-90, producing a total capital expenditure programme in the assisted areas this year of up to £48 million, compared to £45 million in 1988-89.

Our intention is to give a clear signal to the private sector of the opportunities that exist or are becoming available for private investment in parts of the country which have previously been served by direct provision by public sector agencies, while at the same time reaffirming the Government's commitment to areas where, for the time being, the private sector is not providing the new industrial and commercial floor space needed for the promotion of viable new economic activity and employment opportunities.

In addition to the assisted areas programme, English Estates has reached an agreement with a private sector company, London Industrial, to co-operate in a joint venture for a substantial programme to provide managed work space in inner city areas of London. Other managed work space projects will be undertaken within the assisted areas in Manchester and Rochdale and there is a further project in Derby.

Industrial Location

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what form of monitoring is under way on the net job changes which have arisen or which are projected to arise as a result of the impact of the Channel tunnel and 1992 on industrial location;

(2) what form of monitoring is under way on the relocation of investment by British-based companies in mainland Europe arising out of the impact of the Channel tunnel and 1992.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 11 July 1989]: Changes in unemployment between and within regions are regularly monitored. Information about direct investment by United Kingdom companies overseas is collected annually as part of the overseas transactions inquiry and published in the Business Monitor (MA4 overseas transactions). The latest information available relates to 1987. Information on cross-border acquisitions and mergers is published quarterly by my Department. Figures for the first quarter of 1989 were published on 15 July.

National Engineering Laboratories

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what further steps are to be taken to facilitate the privatisation of the national engineering laboratory.

Mr. Newton: We made it clear on 17 May that, following advice from Touche Ross management consultants and the NEL supervisory board, successful privatisation of NEL required restructuring and a new commercially oriented approach to business. Privatisation of NEL remains the Government's objective so that it can best respond to the needs of its customers in industry.

It is vitally important that a stable management framework be put in place so that the necessary changes to the laboratory can be introduced. To do this as quickly as possible we have decided that the laboratory should become a next steps agency with the objective of achieving commercial viability prior to privatisation.

BAT Bid

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will refer the recent bid for BAT to the Director General of the Office of Fair Trading with a view to an inquiry by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 19 July 1989]: The bid by Hoylake for BAT is currently under consideration by the Director General of Fair Trading who will advise my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in the normal way on whether the proposed acquisition should be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. It would not be appropriate to comment in detail on this case in advance of the director general's advice.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Water Quality

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what dates the last two water quality or pollution checks were made in the Bristol channel; at which locations these were made; and what were the results.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The two most recent shipboard surveys in the Bristol channel carried out by my Department were conducted in October 1987 from the research vessel Clione. On the first of these, 65 stations were occupied over the length of the Bristol channel. The objectives were to study the distribution of trace elements in the waters of the channel and to recover a number of fish from the area for trace metal analysis. The second cruise focused on a grid of 75 stations around the sewage sludge disposal ground. Sediment samples were recovered for trace metal and microbiological analysis as well as investigations of sediment-dwelling organisms.

In addition to shipboard study, my scientists also collected samples of mussels from Minehead, Porthcawl and Lynmouth in 1988 for cadmium analysis.

The results of these surveys wil be published as soon as possible.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had on the issue of access as part of the conditions for farmers receiving grants for designated environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Ryder: I have had no discussions on the matter because access is not a condition for farmers receiving environmentally sensitive area payments. These are paid to encourage the adoption of environmentally beneficial agricultural practices.

Meat Tenderisers

Mrs. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department is conducting into meat tenderisers.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department is funding no current studies.

Cereals Co-responsibility Levy

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement giving details of the operation of the cereals co-responsibility levy for the current year, including the total cost of administration of the scheme and the average length of time taken to make repayments of the levy.

Mr. Ryder: The cereals co-responsibility levy is collected from first buyers of grain, who are required to register with the intervention board for agriculture produce. The first buyers collect the levy from growers and submit it with their returns to the Home Grown Cereal Authority who act as the board's agents for this purpose. All registered first buyers are given full details of the operation of the scheme by the intervention board.

The total intervention board costs of collecting the levy in 1988-89, including £105,000 for the development of a computer system, were £430,000. Administration costs connected with the levy were also incurred by the four United Kingdom Agriculture Departments but these are not identifiable separately from other costs incurred in implementing policy in the cereals sector.

The necessary information is not collected to produce an average period for the time taken to make repayments of part of the additional levy in 1988-89. However, distribution of repayment claims started in mid-December 1988 and the deadline laid down in Community legislation for the repayments to be made is 31 July 1989.

Bovine Somatotropin

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recommendations he has received from the veterinary products committee on Elancom's application for a product licence for bovine somatotropin following its April and May meetings.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received no such recommendations. At these two meetings the Committee considered that it needed further information and the company has been afforded the opportunity to provide it.

Anthrax

Mr. Martin Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of anthrax have been recorded in the last 12 months.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In the past 12 months there have been three outbreaks of anthrax in Great Britain involving a total of 19 animals.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when a product licence was granted for anthrax vaccine; if it is still valid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A product licence for an anthrax vaccine was issued on 21 November 1972; it expired on 31 August 1988, when the company concerned did not seek to renew it.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under what statutory authority anthrax vaccine being produced at his Department's central veterinary laboratory is to be used; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The use of this vaccine would be subject to the terms of an animal test certificate or a product licence issued under the Medicines Act 1968, and to the agreement of the farmer concerned.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 18 July on monitoring procedures for anthrax, how he identifies suspect and non-suspect animals under the Anthrax Order 1938; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Anthrax Order 1938 requires anyone who suspects the presence of anthrax in a carcase or live animal to notify that fact to the Ministry. If, after initial veterinary investigation, anthrax cannot be ruled out, the carcase is destroyed and blood or tissue samples are sent to the central veterinary laboratory for final diagnosis.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 18 July, whether the anthrax vaccine to be manufactured at his central veterinary laboratory is an autogenous one; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The vaccine is not autogenous.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further action has been taken by his Department with regard to the outbreak of anthrax in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have been asked to reply.

The producer has accepted my offer of compensation for the slaughter of the whole herd.

Animal Medicines

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the product licences for animal medicines which have been granted without reference to the veterinary products committee in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Each year a number of licences (174 in 1986, 99 in 1987 and 198 in 1988) are issued for new products. All applications relating to previously unlicensed ingredients, or to ingredients which though previously licensed are proposed for new routes of administration or to treat additional diseases, or which otherwise raise problems of assessment are reported to the veterinary products committee. Others, including applications for licences for products identical to other products already licensed, are assessed by officials. In addition several hundred licences are issued each year to renew expiring licences, without reference to the VPC.

A record of licences issued without reference to the VPC is not maintained separately and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Farm Animals (Deaths)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total number of (a) cows, (b) pigs and (c) sheep which received post-mortem inspections to investigate the cause of death for each year since 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Yes. Information is as follows:

| | Cattle | Sheep | Pigs |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1982 | 3,044 | 6,366 | 3,992 |
| 1983 | 3,376 | 7,052 | 3,868 |
| 1984 | 3,253 | 7,413 | 3,578 |
| 1985 | 3,404 | 7,141 | 3,272 |
| 1986 | 3,264 | 7,568 | 3,014 |
| 1987 | 2,871 | 6,293 | 2,417 |
| 1988 | 2,891 | 6,057 | 2,107 |

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce a requirement to record the deaths of farm animals and the movement thereof, in the animal movement book; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have no plans to do so.

Veterinary Products Committee

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many members there are on his veterinary products committee; and if he will give the numbers attending each of its last 12 meetings.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The numbers of VPC members fluctuates as appointments are made and resignations occur. Including the chairman, the numbers of members at the times of each of the last 12 meetings and the members which attended are as follows:

| | Number of members | Number attending |
|---|---|---|
| June 1988 | 21 | 14 |
| July 1988 | 21 | 14 |
| September 1988 | 14 | 14 |
| October 1988 | 14 | 9 |
| November 1988 | 14 | 11 |
| December 1988 | 14 | 9 |
| January 1989 | 17 | 14 |
| February 1989 | 17 | 16 |
| March 1989 | 17 | 15 |
| April 1989 | 17 | 15 |
| May 1989 | 16 | 13 |

Nuvan

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for how long a product licence was granted by the veterinary products committee in respect of Nuvan's use on fish farms.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In accordance with the veterinary products committee's recommendation, a product licence for one year has been issued for Aquagard sea-lice treatment.

Cauliflower Florets

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the number of plant trials and tests carried out in each year since 1982 into the colour and solidity of cauliflower florets.

Mr. Ryder: I understand that trials were first carried out by the National Institute of Agricultural Botany in 1984. The number of trials undertaken by the institute in each year is as follows:

| Year | Autumn harvest | Spring harvest |
|---|---|---|
| 1984 | 2 | 1 |
| 1985 | 2 | [1]0 |
| 1986 | 2 | 2 |
| 1987 | 1 | 2 |
| 1988 | 1 | 1 |
| 1989 | 1 | 1 |

[1] Trial failure.

The colour, as such, of florets is not recorded, only off-colours.

Plant Testing

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of State for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what are the sources of funds for plant variety testing and seed certification in each year since 1982 both gross and net of fee income, and in both current and standard prices;

(2) if he will list the sources of finance for the National Institute of Agricultural Botany in current and standard prices for each year from 1982 to 1988-89 distinguishing between Government grants for statutory work and grant-in-aid.

Mr. Ryder: Details of public funding for the National Institute of Agricultural Botany (NIAB) and other bodies engaged in plant variety testing and certification work are published in the appropriation accounts, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Final outturn figures for 1988-89 are not yet available—provisional figures are given in supply estimates. The relevant references are:

Pre-packed Salads

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) in which year charges were introduced for tests on pre-packed crisp salad; and what income is derived from such charges;

(2) what is the number of tests carried out on pre-prepared packs of crisp salad, together with the numbers of test failures in each year since 1983.

Mr. Ryder: Charges for microbiological and other laboratory tests undertaken by ADAS farm and countryside service were introduced in 1972. The results of such tests and the testing criteria are confidential to the customer paying for such work. There are no specific composition standards or definitions of "pre-packed crisp salad material". It is for the customer therefore to specify the material he wishes to be tested under this description and the tests to be applied. Information on the number of tests and the income from them cannot be reliably estimated in view of the range of materials and tests which could be involved.

Seed Standards

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food at what date Britain became the technical co-ordinator for Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development work on seed standards; and at which agency this work is carried out.

Mr. Ryder: The National Institute of Agricultural Botany has acted since 1954 as co-ordinating centre for the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development seed certification schemes. The service is provided under direct contract.

Post-mortems

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the animals, farmed, domestic and wild on which his veterinary investigation centre will carry out post-mortem examinations, giving for each type of animal the current cost of each examination and whether the cost is borne by (a) farmers, (b) the Ministry or (c) some other party; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 21 July 1989]: The Ministry's veterinary investigation service carries out post-mortem examinations for a range of animals for different purposes. The cost of examining a particular carcase varies according to its size and the detail of the examination required. Indicative costs, however, can be taken as those shown in the table for chargeable laboratory diagnosis.

(a) Chargeable Laboratory Diagnosis

A diagnosis service is provided for veterinary surgeons in private practice. Species covered include any farmed species of bird, fish or mammal. Charges are made to the veterinary surgeon or, in the case of fish or birds, the owner. Current charges, based on average costs and excluding VAT, are:

| | Per carcase £ | Per batch £ |
|---|---|---|
| Birds, small mammals and fish | 10·00 | 15·00 |
| Calves, sheep, goats and pigs | 17·00 | 25·00 |
| Yearling and adult cattle | 30·00 | — |

Other animals would be charged according to size.

(b) Statutory measures to protect the health of livestock

This covers the Ministry's work in preventing and controlling disease. Species examined could include any bird, fish or mammal except man. Costs are borne by the Ministry.

(c) Measures to protect public health

As part of our work in protecting public health from zoonoses, examinations may be carried out on any kind of mammal (except man), any four-footed beast which is not a mammal or birds of any species. Costs are borne by the Ministry.

Under the wildlife incident investigation scheme any free living bird, mammal (except man) or companion animal (that is, dogs, cats etc.) may be submitted for examination for the presence of chemical residues. Costs are borne initially by the Ministry and recovered from chemical manufacturers from fees paid for pesticide registration.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

China

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to make it clear to the Chinese ambassador that citizens of China now in the United Kingdom are not to be subject to any pressure or threats to return to China.

Mr. Eggar: As I informed the House on 16 June, we have already raised with the Chinese chargé d'affaires press reports of harassment of Chinese students in this country. The chargé assured us that these reports were a complete fabrication. We would be concerned at any evidence of attempts to induce Chinese citizens here to return to China against their own free will. If such evidence is available, we would of course raise the matter with the Chinese authorities.

Mr. Salman Rushdie

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will issue instructions to all British posts overseas that no questions concerning Mr. Salman Rushdie or "The Satanic Verses" should be put at interviews with those, including priests, applying for visas to visit the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. Entry clearance officers must have discretion in establishing the purpose and bona fides of those applying to visit the United Kingdom.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Eggar: In 1988-89, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office continued to place a part of its requirements for goods and services with small businesses. The value of this business over the last two financial years was:

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| 1987-88 | 15·06 |
| 1988-89 | 16·38 |

These figures represent 15·9 per cent. of the total expenditure in the last financial year compared to 12·5 per cent. the previous year.

A number of FCO departments are involved in the purchasing function. Each department monitors and records its own expenditure with small firms. New systems are being introduced into the main purchasing centres to enable the information to be recorded by computer.

The FCO director of purchasing disseminates to purchasing departments information and guidance on procurement from small firms. He ensures that, whenever possible, such firms are included in invitations to tender and that they are awarded contracts if their offer is the best on a value-for-money basis.

The FCO also provides assistance to small firms through the export promotion services available at posts overseas.

HEALTH

Leukaemia Clusters

47. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has on alleged links between instances of leukaemia clusters and nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Two studies have been published which looked at leukaemia and cancer rates in the vicinity of nuclear power stations (as well as other nuclear installations) in England and Wales. The first study[1] was published in 1987 by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. The second study[2] was published earlier this year. Copies of this material are in the Library.

Both studies have been referred to the independent committee on medical aspects of radiation in the environment (COMARE), which provided a preliminary assessment of this work in its third report to Government[3] published last month, a copy of which is in the Library. For a summary of COMARE's findings, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Newbury (Sir M. McNair-Wilson) on 21 June 1989 at column 151-52.

NHS Funding

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the figure in real terms for the increase in funding (a) for the National Health Service as a whole and (b) for the Harrogate district health authority since May 1979.

Mr. Freeman: Harrogate health authority was established on 1 April 1982. Prior to that date Harrogate formed part of the North Yorkshire area health authority and district based figures were not collected centrally.

The table shows the real terms increase in gross revenue expenditure between 1982-83 and 1987-88 (the latest year for which figures are available):

| | 1982-83 | 1987-88 | Real terms percentage increase[1] |
|---|---|---|---|
| All RHAs and SHAs | 8,141·2 | 10,243·5 | 10·1 |
| Harrogate health authority | 20·1 | 25·3 | 13·2 |

[1] Using the GDP deflator.

Since then health authorities have received further real terms increases bringing the total estimated increase over the period 1982-83 to 1989-90 nationally, and in Harrogate health authority to over 14 per cent.

Small Shops (Licensing)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to introduce a licensing system aimed at smaller shops, to ensure that they are fit and responsible enough to sell eggs and other produce.

Mr. Freeman: The Government have been consulting a large number of organisations on a thorough review of food legislation, including proposals for the registration of food premises. We shall be bringing forward legislation as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reviews or surveys are being carried out or planned into community health councils in England and Wales; with what terms of reference; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No such review is being carried out or planned by the Department. I understand that the Association of Community Health Councils in England and Wales has recently endorsed a report from a panel of inquiry into the role and organisation of community health councils, and we will be considering the report carefully.

Child Migrant Schemes

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were sent to New Zealand and Australia by voluntary organisations under the child migrant schemes in each year since 1964.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

Community Care

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, in drawing up his White Paper on community care, he will take account of the views expressed to him by CARE, Kibworth, Leicester, about funding an individual when a local authority declines to top up its proportion of the cost involved.

Mr. Mellor: We are pleased to receive views from all interested parties about our proposals for community care and will take them into account in preparing the White Paper to be published in the autumn. I am afraid that we are unable to trace the correspondence from CARE in Kibworth referred to by my hon. Friend, and I would be grateful if he could arrange for a copy to be sent to me.

Swimming

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fatalities have occurred in each of the last 10 years as a result of members of the public swimming in reservoirs and other waters not designated for recreational use in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) North West England, and (c) Bolton; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested based on details recorded at time of death registration could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nurses and Midwives (Grading)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will break down the information given in his answer to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Mr. Janman), on 11 July at column 468, about bids by district health authorities for additional financial allocations from the sum available in 1988-89 for flexible pay settlements for nursing and midwifery staff to show the number of bids in respect of midwifery staff, the grades of the posts concerned, and the number of such bids which were accepted.

Mr. Mellor: Four bids were received in respect of posts clearly designated as midwifery, covering 152 staff. Of these three were accepted, covering 146 staff graded at D, E and F, and one was rejected, covering six staff at grade I.

A further 10 bids were received in respect of units related to maternity where the greater proportion of the posts may be filled by midwives. These were all accepted, and covered 267 staff at grades C to G.

Cholesterol Tests

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidelines his Department issues for the use of over-the-counter tests for blood cholesterol levels;

(2) if his Department has any plans to regulate the sale and use of over-the-counter cholesterol tests.

Mr. Freeman: We have not issued any guidelines on the use of over-the-counter tests for blood cholesterol levels and there are no current plans to regulate the sale and use of such tests.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken to establish the accuracy of over-the-counter tests for blood cholesterol levels.

Mr. Freeman: The Department is funding an evaluation of the two most commonly used machines for measuring blood cholesterol levels in the United Kingdom, involving testing both under laboratory conditions and in GP clinics. The work is being carried out by Mr. Peter Broughton of Wolfson research laboratories in Birmingham, and includes accuracy testing, and investigation of performance variation when carried out by skilled and non-laboratory trained operatives. The final report will be available by the end of the year.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to introduce nation wide blood cholesterol level screening for adults; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We have invited the Standing Medical Advisory Committee to advise on the cost-effectiveness of wider cholesterol testing in the prevention and treatment of heart disease.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this session up to 1 July.

Mr. Freeman: The Department received 1,165 letters from, and despatched 1,176 letters to, hon. Members in January. In the whole of this session up to 1 July 14,348 letters were received and, by that date 10,615 replies sent.

NHS Reform

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community health councils have made representations to his Department opposing the Government's White Paper "Working for Patients"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have received a number of representations from community health councils. These generally welcome the proposals in the White Paper aimed at enhancing standards of patient care. Some express support for other proposals or raise questions on specific issues. I regret that it is not possible to quantify the representations in the way the hon. Member requests.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his proposals for medical audit announced in "Working for Patients" will be extended to professional groups other than doctors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 July 1989]: Obviously in the care of the patient a number of professions are involved and it is important that work on developing audit measures is complementary. Whilst "Working for Patients" focused mainly on the care and treatment provided by doctors, work to establish audit in other health professions is taking place. For example, an important part of the Department's project "Making Best Use of Nursing Skills" is concerned with developing a nursing audit package.

Waiting Lists, Hampstead

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the waiting list figures for June 1988 and June 1989 in respect of the Hampstead health authority.

Mr. Mellor: The latest published figures, for September 1988, show 4,386 patients on Hampstead health authority's waiting list. The figure for September 1987 was 3,706. Provisional figures for March 1989 suggest a substantial reduction, to below the September 1987 level.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of botulism, salmonella enteriditis, salmonella typhimurium, listeriosis and other types of food poisoning have been detected and reported since 1983 for each month of each year.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not readily available in the form requested. Annual figures for 1983 to 1988 are given in the tables. It is not known how many of the campylobacter infections are food-borne.

| | 1983 | 1984 | 1985 | 1986 | 1987 | 1988 |

Regional Secure Units

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he intends to seek to amend section 66(1) of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 in order to include visitors to patients in regional secure units.

Mr. Freeman: There are no plans to amend this section of the 1968 Act.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Freeman: A booklet has been produced and a series of seminars held on how to do business with the NHS. Other initiatives include the issuing of a mission statement on electronic data interchange which encourages small firm involvement and progress has been made on harmonisation of European standards of equipment, which will assist small businesses in their future trading in Europe. Equal opportunity to trade on a value for money basis underpins all contracts with non-NHS organisations, the details of these are not collected centrally.

Cigarette Advertisements

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether cigarette advertisements which contain only the warning that smoking when pregnant can injure the baby and cause premature birth, and not a more general health warning linking smoking to lung cancer and other respiratory illnesses, are treated as being in breach of the current code of practices in relation to cigarette advertising; whether he has any plans to strengthen the current arrangements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The warning "Smoking when pregnant can injure your baby and cause premature birth" is one of the six agreed warnings included in the voluntary agreement with the tobacco industry on tobacco products' advertising and promotion, and health warnings. This warning contains important information and we have no plans to discontinue its use. It is used in rotation with five other warnings which highlight the other health risks associated with cigarette smoking. On the question of re-negotiating the current voluntary agreements with the industry, officials have had some preliminary discussions with the Tobacco Advisory Council, and we are considering the way forward.

Salomons Science Theatre

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that the covenants concerning the Salomons Broomhill estate are being fully honoured, and that the science theatre and its fixtures, fittings and contents are being properly maintained and protected against vandalism.

Mr. Freeman: These are matters for which the South East Thames regional health authority is responsible.

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when Mr. Frank Holland, MBE, director of the British Piano Museum Educational Charitable Trust, may expect a reply to his letter of 27 April to Mr. K. Lau, regional liaison division of his Department, about the David Salomons science theatre.

Mr. Freeman: A letter was sent to Mr. Holland on 22 May. Officials will write again to Mr. Holland, enclosing a copy of this, in case he did not receive it.

Scientific Staff

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the extent of current shortages of National Health Service physicists, biochemists, other scientists and clinical psychologists;

(2) what is the latest available information on the turnover of National Health Service physicists, biochemists, other scientists and clinical psychologists.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold the information centrally.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set up an independent inquiry into the determination of the salaries of National Health Service physicists, biochemists, other scientists and clinical psychologists.

Mr. Mellor: No. The negotiation of pay for these groups is a matter for the appropriate Whitley Council.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the re-establishment of the link between the pay of scientific civil servants and that of National Health Service physicists, biochemists, other scientists and clinical psychologists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have received numerous letters from hon. Members enclosing letters from constituents who make reference to the pay of scientific civil servants.

Cook-chill Catering

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission an independent study of the comparative nutritional values of cook-chill methods of hospital catering and the implications for the diet and health of short-stay and long-stay hospital patients and make public the results.

Mr. Freeman: No. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 10 July at column 372.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy on the size of portions of food to be served to patients when district health authorities are introducing cook-chill meals.

Mr. Freeman: The provision of catering services is the responsibility of local health authorities.

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions were performed under ground 6 of the Abortion Act 1967 in each year since 1968.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is shown in the table.

Abortions performed under ground 6 of the 1967 Abortion Act, which allows an abortion in an emergency to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman, 1968-88

Mental Health Act Commission

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many special hospitals there are in the area covered by the Liverpool office of the Mental Health Act Commission; and if he will list them.

Mr. Freeman: Two; Moss Side and Park Lane hospitals.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has any plans to close the Liverpool office of the Mental Health Act Commission;

(2) if he has plans to review the work of the Mental Health Act Commission; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what plans he has to centralise the work of the Mental Health Act Commission.

Mr. Freeman: We shall be considering shortly the Commission's review of its functions, organisation, staffing and finance. Centralisation is one of the issues being considered as part of that review. We expect to reach decisions well before the end of the year.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last held discussions with the Mental Health Act commissioners in the north-west; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Freeman: We are in regular contact with the Commission chairman and secretariat, but it has not been the practice to meet commissioners on a regional basis.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why no Mental Health Act commissioners in the north-west were re-appointed this year; and what is the position with regard to re-appointments in other regions.

Mr. Freeman: The normal length of appointment as a commissioner is now four years, though some are invited to serve for longer because of the exceptional contributions they make. Twenty-nine commissioners appointed by my predecessors complete at least four years in office this autumn, and five have been invited to serve for a further period because of their individual contributions. Two of these are based in the southern region and three in the north eastern region.

Child Protection Registers

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial resources have been made available to local authorities in the last five years for which figures are available to alleviate the problem of unallocated cases on child protection registers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The overall level of central Government's contribution to expenditure by local authorities takes into account services authorities are required to provide. It is however for the authorities themselves to determine how to allocate the funds available to them in the light of local circumstances and overall legislative requirements.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to the number of children on the child protection registers of each London borough and the number in each London borough who have not been allocated to a social worker.

Mr. Mellor: The available information is in the table.

Foster Care Placements

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to the number of foster care placements by each London borough which are outside the boundaries of those boroughs; and whether any local authorities have reported to him any difficulties in recruiting foster carers.

Mr. Mellor: The latest available information is as follows:

Children in care at 31 March 1987[1] boarded out by London authorities in the area of other authorities who were not boarded out with a relative or friend and were not living in a relative's household

| Local authority | Number[3] |

[1] Figures for 1987 are provisional and subject to revision.

[2] Figures for Islington and Lewisham were not available.

[3] Children in care who were boarded out in the area of another local authority and were not boarded out with a relative or friend.

We understand that some local authorities are not successful in recruiting within their own areas a sufficient number and range of foster parents for children requiring placements.

Indicative Prescribing Budgets

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what means general practitioners will monitor their indicative prescribing budgets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Government indicated in working paper 4 of the NHS review series ("Indicative Prescribing Budgets for General Medical Practitioners") that the ideal way of providing information at all levels to operate the indicative prescribing budget scheme was an enhancement of the existing prescribing analyses and cost system known as PACT.

Our feasibility studies have confirmed that PACT can be speeded up, and made more frequent and more comprehensive. I have therefore asked the Prescription Pricing Authority and my Department to develop PACT to provide all general practitioners with monthly budgetary statements from April 1991. These budgetary statements will normally be provided no more than four weeks after the month in which the relevant prescriptions were dispensed. Existing PACT reports will continue to be provided.

I will continue to hold discussions with interested parties before deciding upon the detailed content and format of these reports and other associated improvements to PACT. I shall also be making available PACT data aggregated at family practitioner committee level to all family practitioner committees and regional health authorities from 1 August 1989 to enable them to prepare for indicative prescribing budgets.

My decision will take away from general practitioners the burden of paperwork which might otherwise be associated with the introduction of indicative prescribing budgets. An enhanced PACT will also provide regional health authorities and family practitioner committees with information they need both to set and to monitor budgets.

Indicative prescribing budgets will take full account of the fact that some patients and groups of patients, for example elderly people, diabetics and patients on home dialysis, need a greater volume of drugs or more expensive drugs than others. The scheme will ensure that budgets fully reflect these costs. There will be no disincentive to practices to accept such patients or to begin to prescribe expensive medicines to existing patients, if there is a clinical need to do so.

Overseas Visitors (Fees)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances British citizens may be charged fees as overseas visitors for treatment within the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Residence in the United Kingdom, not citizenship, is the measure of qualification for hospital treatment without charge under the National Health Service. British citizens not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom will be charged as overseas visitors for NHS hospital treatment.

General practitioners have the discretion whether to accept a visitor as a NHS patient. If a visitor is unable to find a GP willing to accept him onto the GP's list, he can apply to the family practitioner committee which will allocate him to a GP who must then accept him as a NHS patient.

Disability

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions in 1989 meetings to discuss the implementation of section 7 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 have been held between his Department and (a) the local authority associations and (b) the National Association of Health Authorities; on how many occasions meetings have been arranged but subsequently cancelled at the request of his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 July 1989]: Officials had arranged to meet representatives of the local authorities associations and the National Association of Health Authorities in February but this was deferred to March to allow further preparatory work to be done. The National Association of Health Authorities was invited but did not send a representative. At that meeting it was agreed that officials would work on identifying the processes likely to be required for assessment purposes and costings before another meeting is held. No further meeting has yet been arranged.

Magnetic Resonance Scanners

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the locations at which nuclear magnetic resonance scanners are available within the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Nuclear magnetic resonance scanners are located on the following National Health sites in the United Kingdom:

Royal Infirmary, Aberdeen
Southern General, Glasgow
Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh
Queens Medical Centre, Nottingham
Hammersmith Hospital, London (RPMS)(2)
National Hospital, London (2)
St. Bartholomew's, London
National Heart, London
Mount Vernon, London
Guy's, London
Camden Children's, London
John Ratcliffe, Oxford
Addenbrookes, Cambridge
Frenchay, Bristol
Walsgrave, Coventry
Royal Marsden, Sutton

Castle Hill Hospital, Cottingham

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from where the proposed finishing kitchen at Castle Hill hospital, Cottingham, will receive its supplies of prepared food.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 20 July 1989]: This is a local matter and not for me. We have no doubt however that the district health authority will seek to use the most cost effective and efficient source of supply available. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the East Yorkshire health authority for such information as may be available at this time.

Cyclotron Machines

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if, before making funds available for the purchase of a cyclotron machine for St. Thomas's hospital, he took into account evidence of the use and success rate of cyclotron machines in other European Economic Community countries;

(2) what evidence he had about existing cyclotron machines' performances in the United Kingdom before providing funds of the purchase of the cyclotron for St. Thomas's hospital.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 20 July 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 17 February 1989 at column 419.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Inland Revenue (Relocation)

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to announce a decision on the proposal to relocate over 2,000 Inland Revenue head office posts to Nottingham; and whether there are any plans to relocate the remaining pay-as-you-earn tax work currently carried on in tax offices in the London area.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Following an internal review of its London headquarters accommodation, the Board of Inland Revenue published on 21 April this year a working party report which recommended that, in view of the continuing problems which faced the Department on its accommodation and staffing in the London area, over 2,000 posts in headquarters and other specialist officers should be relocated from south-east England.

After full consultations with the appropriate Civil Service unions, with senior management and with staff, the board has concluded, with my agreement, that some 2,100 posts should be relocated. The great majority of these posts will move to Nottingham provided that a suitable site for a new office development can be obtained on satisfactory terms. As well as headquarters staff, it is envisaged that the capital taxes office, the superannuation funds office and the office of the inspector of foreign dividends will be included in the move to Nottingham. Depending on progress, it is hoped that the main relocation of work to Nottingham will take place from 1992.

As for the PAYE tax work, my hon. Friend will be aware that the majority of this work in the London area was transferred to offices in other parts of the country in the 1960s and 1970s. It has now been decided to move the PAYE work of some further 400 clerical and executive staff in late 1989 to Cardiff, Bootle, Edinburgh, Glasgow and Livingston, and the Department is looking at the possibility of moving the work of a further 1,200 or so PAYE posts, including all of the remaining London posts, away from the London area in the period from mid-1990 to mid-1992.

While work is being moved the Department will try to ensure that any inconvenience to the public is kept to a minimum. For the longer term, in order to maintain a service for those who need to make a personal visit to discuss their tax affairs, the existing network of local inquiry offices in the London area will be strengthened and enlarged where necessary.

The moves will secure a good and cost-effective service for the taxpayer. Better recruitment prospects outside the south-east will result in a more experienced and stable work force.

Life Assurance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what respects investment-linked life assurance policies are taxed differently from endowment-linked mortgage policies; and what would be the saving to the revenue from treating the latter on the same basis as authorised unit trusts.

Mr. Norman Lamont: For the life office, in no respects. For the policy holder, no distinction is drawn between investment-linked policies, as such, and endowment policies associated with mortgages. For any sort of policy, the tax treatment will depend on the terms of the policy (in particular, whether it is a "qualifying" policy); the circumstances in which policy benefits are paid out; and the overall tax position of the policy holder. Most endowment policies associated with mortgages are not investment-linked and therefore cannot be treated on the same basis as unit trusts: no estimate can accordingly be made of the revenue effect of doing so.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate for 1989-90 of the figures quoted in paragraphs 6.9 and 5.16 of the recent consultation paper on the taxation of life assurance.

Mr. Norman Lamont: There is no paragraph 5.16 in the consultative document to which the hon. Member refers. Information required to update the estimates to 1989-90 in paragraph 6.9 is not available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the aggregate value of single premium life assurance policies; what is his estimate of the amount of tax collected per £1,000 of single premium over the life of a single premium life assurance policy in terms of constant prices; and what is his estimate of the gain to the revenue per £1,000 of premium from a tax regime meeting the criteria set out in paragraph 3.3 of the consultative document on the taxation of life assurance issued by the Inland Revenue in June.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No estimate is available for the total value of single premium policies. None can be made for the lifetime tax yield per £1,000 of premiums paid on such policies whether under the current tax regime or under any alternative regime. This would vary widely depending on the future performance of each policy, on future tax rates, on the overall tax position of the life offices and policy holders concerned, and on the length of time for which each policy holder chose to retain his policy.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated revenue yield in the current financial year from fully implementing each of the options listed in paragraph 7.9 of the recent consultation paper on the taxation of life assurance; and if he will publish in the Official Report the charge falling on the policy holders and shareholders in the case of investment-linked and other life assurance, distinguishing where appropriate between qualifying and non-qualifying policies, current charges, exit charges and capital gains.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The options to which the hon. Member refers set out in broad outline possible alternative approaches to the reform of life assurance. The extra yield, if any, to be expected from implementation of these options would depend on the precise measures assumed to be adopted. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in the Budget the Governments' proposals for implementation along the lines of "Option C" in the consultative document: estimates of the initial effect of these proposals on tax yield, and indications of their possible long-run effects, were published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" (HC 235).

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated revenue yield in the current financial year from taxing pension schemes on the basis of the first and last of the principles set out in paragraph 7.3 of the recent consultation paper of the taxation of life assurance.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The first principle in paragraph 7.3 of the consultative document "The Taxation of Life Assurance" is that income earned for policy holders should be taxed as it arises and that capital gains should be taxed, at the latest, as they are reflected in benefits paid out. To apply this principle to funded occupational pension schemes would require that tax relief on the investment income of the funds should be withdrawn. It would be for decision whether pensioners would be allowed a tax credit to set against the tax due on the pensions paid to them to reflect the tax which had been borne by the fund on its investment income. The net revenue cost or yield would depend upon the precise proposal, on the nature of any transitional provisions and on the behavioural responses of investors and institutions. Any estimate of revenue would almost certainly involve disproportionate cost.

The last principle is that tax effectively borne by policy holders and that actually reaching the Exchequer should as far as possible be in line. For occupational pension schemes, this already applies.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated share and estimated value of the pension and annuity business referred to in paragraph 6.23 of the recent consultation paper on the taxation of life assurance; and what is the amount of the disparity referred to in paragraph 6.25.

Mr. Norman Lamont: On the basis of a sample of companies for 1986, pension and general annuity business liabilities at the end of that year amounted to about half of total life assurance liabilities, amounting to some £110 billion, of offices authorised to do life assurance business in the United Kingdom.

The disparity referred to in paragraph 6.25 of the consultative document "The Taxation of Life Assurance" will be eliminated once relevant measures in the current Finance Bill come into full force from 1 January 1990.

Savings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the various forms of institutional saving the estimated gain to the revenue in the current financial year from disallowing commission etc. as an expense.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information on which to base a reliable estimate is not available centrally.

Engagements

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list his engagements when he expects to make a major speech on the economy.

Mr. Major: My right hon. Friend will be speaking on a number of occasions over the next few months, including the IMF/IBRD meetings in Washington (26-28 September), the Conservative party conference (10-13 October) and at the Mansion house (19 October).

Charitable Donations

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what basis Customs and Excise assess liability for value added tax on the whole of a donation by a commercial company towards an advertisement by a charitable organisation, rather than on the value of that part of the advertisement which might be deemed to be promoting the company.

Mr. Lilley: There is no VAT liability on unconditional gifts of money, but where payments are conditional on a charitable organisation supplying clearly identifiable benefits in return, for example, advertising or publicity, such supplies are liable to VAT, and have to be accounted for at the standard rate by any charitable organisation whose taxable turnover exceeds the registration limits.

TSB Scotland

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the text of the letter of assurance about the future of TSB Scotland which he received from the then chairman of the TSB Group at the time of privatisation.

Mr. Lilley: The letter written when the Trustee Savings Bank Act 1985 was under consideration was published in Hansard on 4 July 1985 at cols. 261-63.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will institute an inquiry into the TSB before its proposed restructuring takes place, with a view to ensuring that pledges of autonomy for its Scottish operations, which were given at the time of flotation, are fulfilled.

Mr. Lilley: The future structure of the TSB is a matter for the TSB. I note that the TSB has recently confirmed that the assurances made at the time of its flotation will be honoured.

Interest Rates (Mortgages)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters he has received from members of the public on the level of interest rates or their impact on the cost of mortgages.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has received a number of letters on this subject.

"Official Report" (Sales)

Mr. Cran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average daily sale of daily parts of the Official Report in 1988 and in each of the preceding nine years.

Mr. Lilley: The estimated average number of copies sold per issue for each year since 1980 is given in the table. I regret that figures for 1979 are no longer available.

| | House of Commons Daily | House of Lords Daily |
|---|---|---|
| 1980 | 6,169 | 3,855 |
| 1981 | 5,812 | 3,688 |
| 1982 | 5,391 | 3,295 |
| 1983 | 5,221 | 3,234 |
| 1984 | 5,005 | 3,290 |
| 1985 | 4,925 | 3,038 |
| 1986 | 4,713 | 3,030 |
| 1987 | 4,638 | 2,930 |
| 1988 | 4,535 | 2,669 |

Inflation

Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current level of inflation.

Mr. Lilley: The all items RPI inflation rate in the year to June 1989 was 8·3 per cent. the same as in May. A better indication of underlying inflation is given by the increase in the RPI excluding mortgage interest payments; it rose 5·9 per cent. in the year to June 1989, down slightly from the 6 per cent. figure in May.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Major: The Government's economic policies are designed to maintain a vigorous economy in which business and enterprise can flourish. Over the last 12 months we have continued our commitment to this goal. Among the specific measures helpful to small businesses introduced in the last Budget were:

for the small companies' lower corporation tax rate of 25 per cent. profit limit raised by 50 per cent. to £150,000 and the limit for receiving transitional relief raised to £750,000; simplification of pensions rules and substantial increases in personal pension contribution limits; improved tax reliefs designed to encourage employee participation in PRP and employee share schemes (including ESOPS); abolition of close company apportionment rules;
introduction of the receipts basis of schedule E (a simpler system for the assessment of earnings).
extended relief for pre-trading expenditure;
VAT registration threshold raised broadly in line with inflation;
CGT gifts relief retained for business assets.

We are continually looking at ways of reducing the burdens on small businesses. In addition to the continuous review of forms, explanatory notices and leaflets with the aim of providing guidance which can be easily understood, the following changes have been achieved in the last 12 months:

The completion of the computerisation of PAYE and extension throughout the country of computerisation of the tax affairs of the self-employed.
From 1 July 1989 the scope of the Community carnet was extended.
Development work has taken place for the introduction on 1 August 1989 of two fast lane systems which will speed up the clearance of certain EC imports.
Development work is proceeding on a new computerised system for the handling of import export freight which will speed up the clearance of goods.
We have also carried out thorough examinations of:
The VAT cash accounting scheme;
Default surcharge;
VAT bad debt relief;
Export data capture;
VAT second hand schemes; and
PAYE communications between employers and the Inland Revenue

The results of these reviews are under consideration

Debt Repayment

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the exchanges between his officials and Sir Kit McMahon and the team of Midland bankers who visited Brazil in February to consider debt repayment problems.

Mr. Peter Lilley [holding answer 17 July 1989]: It has been internationally agreed that it is not for the Government to intervene in negotiations between commercial banks and debtor countries, and the United Kingdom fully supports this policy. Accordingly there have been no discussions on Brazil's debts to commercial banks between my officials and Sir Kit McMahon or other members of the Midland bank team which visited Brazil.

EC (Tax Relief)

Mr. Lester: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures of the information he has for wage and salary earners in each of the member states of the European Community showing (a) which allow income tax relief against social security contributions, (b) which allow income tax relief against specified travel to work costs, (c) which have a non-specific earned income tax relief and (d) which allow income tax relief for work-related child care costs.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 19 July 1989]: According to our latest available information, these reliefs are allowed in the EC member states as follows:

(a) In all member states, except the United Kindom and Ireland, social security contributions are generally an allowable deduction in the computation of taxable income from employment.

(b) In Luxembourg and Netherlands specified travel to work costs are allowed as a deduction in the computation of taxable income from employment. Certain other countries, eg. Belgium, Denmark, France and Federal Republic of Germany grant a flat-rate expense deduction for employment income, which is intended to cover, inter alia, the cost of travel to work..

(c) A general deduction in the computation of taxable income from employment, at varying percentages or flat-rates, is allowed in Belgium, Denmark, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Luxembourg, Netherlands and Spain. A flat-rate credit against tax due is allowed in Italy.

(d) Certain reliefs in the form of deductions in the computation of taxable income from employment, with varying provisions regarding, for example, the marital status of the taxpayer and the age of the relevant children, and usually up to a specified maximum deduction, are allowed in Belgium, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Luxembourg and Netherlands.

Family Deeds of Covenant

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will reproduce in the Official Report the text of the Inland Revenue press release sent out following the 1988 Budget regarding the date by which notification of family deeds of covenant executed before 15 March 1988 had to be intimated to the Inland Revenue; and to which newspapers and periodicals this press release was sent;

(2) what information he has regarding the newspapers and periodicals in which there was publication of a reference to the Inland Revenue press release issued after the 1988 Budget and relating to the 30 June deadline by which intimation had to be made to the Inland Revenue of family deeds of covenant executed before 15 March 1988.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The text of the Inland Revenue press release issued on 15 March 1988 was as follows:

"The Chancellor proposes in his Budget to abolish tax relief for payments made by individuals under non-charitable Deeds of Covenant made on or after today. Recipients will be exempt from tax on the payments. This will greatly simplify the existing system.

The change will apply to covenants made to students by their parents, as well as to other covenants. Parental contributions to student grants will, however, be reduced for new students. Full details will be published by the Department of Education and Science tomorrow.

Details

1. Non-charitable covenants made by individuals on or after 15 March 1988 will have no effect for tax purposes. This means that:

payers should not deduct tax from covenanted payments and will not get tax relief on them, and recipients will not pay tax on them or be able to claim repayment.

2. The present rules will continue to apply to all covenants in favour of charities;

other covenants made by individuals before 15 March 1988 provided they are received by the tax office by 30 June 1988.

Deduction of tax

3. The effect of the reduction in the basic rate of income tax on charitable covenants, and on other covenants made before today, is set out in a separate Press Release.

NOTES FOR EDITORS

Present tax position

1. A deed of covenant is a way of legally transferring income from one person to another. It can be effective for tax purposes under present law if it is capable of running for more than 6 years (or more than 3 years if it is in favour of a charity).

2. On making each payment under the covenant the payer deducts basic rate tax and so gets basic rate relief. If the recipient is not liable to tax he can claim the tax deducted from the payment back from the Inland Revenue.

Effect of the Budget proposals

3. The payer will not be entitled to deduct tax from payments made under a new covenant (unless it is to a charity). If he covenants to pay £100, that is the amount he will pay and the recipient will receive. The Inland Revenue will not be involved. A separate Treasury Press Release explains the background to the proposals. Details will be available from tax offices shortly.

Students

4. Student covenants made on or after 15 March 1988 will be treated in the same way as other new covenants. But since the payments will no longer be taxable, students will have the whole of their personal tax allowances to set against other income, such as vacation earnings. Furthermore, for new students there will be a new and more generous scale for assessing parental contributions to their maintenance grants.

A word of warning

5. A Deed of Covenant is a legal document and it is not permissible to put a date on it earlier than the date it is executed. This will result in refusal of any tax refund. It can also result in prosecution by the Inland Revenue for attempted fraud.

Other transfers of income

6. Covenants which transfer income from one person to another are "annual payments". The proposals will also apply to other "annual payments" which transfer income in a similar way from an individual to someone else; but they will not apply to interest payments or to payments made for commercial reasons in connection with the payer's business.

Copies of the press release were sent to all national newspapers, over 200 other periodicals and local newspapers, and over 3,000 individuals and organisations which receive copies of Inland Revenue press releases on subscription. A leaflet was also available from local tax offices shortly after 15 March 1988.

There were many articles in the press about various aspects of the 1988 Budget measures, including the changes in the tax treatment of non-charitable covenants. Comprehensive information about press reports is not available, but the particular point about the 30 June 1988 deadline which the hon. Member has in mind was specifically mentioned in a number of publications, including the Financial Times, The Daily Telegraph, Which?, Taxation and the New Law Journal. The point was also covered in the BBC radio programme "Money Box".

Freelance Journalists

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about Inland Revenue procedures over taxing the earnings of freelance journalists.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 20 July 1989]: None in recent months.

Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown of the articles derived from endangered species by (a) type, (b) animal and (c) country of origin seized by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the year to 31 March.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The detailed information sought will not be available for some time. As soon as it is, I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West of 26 May, Official Report, column 810, if he will now give the finalised record of articles derived from endangered species seized in 1988.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The detailed information sought is not yet available. As soon as the necessary collation has been completed, I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Freelance and Self-employed People

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will seek to introduce legislation to provide consistent treatment for tax purposes for all freelance and self-employed persons.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 20 July 1989]: No. I am not aware of any inconsistency in the legislative treatment, for tax purposes, of people in business on their own account.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1988-89.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 21 July 1989]: The amount spent by my Department on official hospitality was £56,451 in 1988-89.

Dangerous Substances

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on compensation of industry for restrictions imposed on the use of dangerous substances.

Mr. Chope I have been asked to reply.

I assume the hon. Member is referring to my Department's consultation paper of 17 May, inviting comments on draft regulations introducing controls over hazardous substances. There is no intention to provide a general system of compensation where restrictions are imposed on the location and use of such substances. This follows the principle that compensation is not normally payable for a refusal of planning consent, or for making a consent subject to conditions. The new regulations will, however, provide for deemed consents to be automatically available for established uses.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Interceptions

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Soviet Backfire aircraft have penetrated the United Kingdom air defence region since 1979;

(2) how many unidentified aircraft entered the United Kingdom air defence region in 1988; how many of these were (a) Soviet military aircraft, (b) non-Soviet military aircaft and (c) civil aircraft.

(3) in what year the Royal Air Force first intercepted a Soviet Backfire aircraft; and what was the approximate location of the interception;

(4) what was the average number of Soviet military aircraft intercepted per week by Royal Air Force aircraft in the United Kingdom defence regions in 1988; what are the trends in the level of activity since 1979; and what are the reasons for these trends;

(5) what was the average number of scrambles of Royal Air Force interceptor aircraft to locate and identify unidentified aircraft approaching the United Kingdom air defence region in 1988; and what proportion of these scrambles resulted in interception of an intruding aircaft.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by my predecessor to him on 3 May 1988 at column 384, and to the hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Macdonald) on 14 December 1987 at column 412. The average number of Soviet aircraft intercepted in the United Kingdom air defence region each week in 1988 was 2-3. Details of such interceptions, including numbers of scrambles and types of aircraft intercepted are classified. I am not prepared to speculate about the reasons for fluctuations in Soviet aircraft activity.

Training (Kenya)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many training man-days were carried out by the Army in Kenya in each year since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is not held in the form requested. However, since 1979, Army training in Kenya has comprised the following:

(a) Infantry Battalion Group training exercises—involving approximately 600 men for six weeks, tri-annually since 1979;

(b) Royal Engineer construction training—involving approximately 120 men for two and a half months, annually since 1979;
(c) Royal Engineer survey training—involving approximately 35 men for four to six weeks, annually since 1979 with the exception of 1982 and 1984;
(d) Royal Signals training—two exercises, involving approximately 120 men and lasting for two and a half months, one in 1983 and one in 1984;
(e) Infantry Company training—five exercises involving approximately 120 men, for six weeks, in 1979, 1981, 1983 1985 and 1987;
(f) Adventurous Training—since 1986 there have been 27 expeditions of various types and for various lengths of time involving 418 people; information for the years prior to 1986 is not available.

No. 3 Squadron, RAF Regiment

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the date of formation, operational base, equipment, staffing and role of No. 3 Squadron, Royal Air Force regiment.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. 3 Squadron Royal Air Force regiment, which is equipped with a variety of vehicles and infantry equipment, was formed in 1987. It is stationed at RAF Aldergrove, with a peacetime role of ground defence and general security duties. It is not our practice to publish detailed information about personnel numbers in operational units.

HMS Trenchant

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes have occurred in the projected in-service date of HMS Trenchant since 1987; and what are the reasons for the changes.

Mr. Sainsbury: HMS Trenchant was delivered by the contractor in February this year. The delivery date forecast in 1987 was September 1988. The delivery date changed because of industrial action at VSEL during 1988.

HMS Upholder

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes have occurred in the projected in-service date of HMS Upholder since 1987; and what are the reasons for such changes.

Mr. Sainsbury: HMS Upholder is planned to be delivered by the contractor around the end of 1989. The delivery date forecast in 1987 was August 1988. This change was due, first, to industrial action at VSEL during 1988 and, secondly because of a number of technical problems with new-to-service equipment on this the first of a new class of diesel-electric submarines.

Sharp Spear

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the nature and purpose of the forthcoming North Atlantic Treaty Organisation exercise Sharp Spear; when and where it will take place; and how many ships, submarines, aircraft and personnel will take part.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Sharp Spear 89 is a major NATO maritime exercise which will take place from 7 to 21 September 1989 in the Baltic, Baltic approaches, the North sea, and waters surrounding the British Isles, including the Channel. It will demonstrate and improve the ability of NATO maritime forces to conduct shallow seas operations and protect reinforcement and merchant shipping in the waters off north-west Europe. Over 270 ships and submarines and 320 aircraft, and their associated personnel from 10 NATO countries will take part in the exercise.

Low Flying

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the number of military jet flights at less than 1,500 ft over the Federal Republic of Germany in 1988.

Mr. Neubert: Ministry of Defence records of flights over the Federal Republic of Germany are maintained only for Royal Air Force aircraft. In 1988 RAF Germany carried out some 16,000 fixed-wing low-level sorties over the Federal Republic of Germany.

No. 1 Squadron, RAF Regiment

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the reason for the redesignation of No. 1 Squadron, Royal Air Force Regiment as a light armour squadron.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. 1 Squadron Royal Air Force Regiment was redesignated as a light armoured squadron in 1982 when it was re-equipped with combat vehicles reconnaissance (tracked).

Contracted-out Services

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records are kept by his Department of employment levels in companies providing services to his Department on contract in areas where these services were previously provided by Ministry of Defence civilian personnel.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not our policy to maintain detailed records of employment levels in companies who provide equipment or services to the MOD. It is a matter for the companies concerned.

Euclid Programme

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Euclid programme for European collaboration on defence technology research; and what role and financial contribution will be made by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sainsbury: Defence Ministers, at their meeting in Portugal in June, agreed to launch a joint programme of research and technology in defence which will be called EUCLID (European co-operative long-term intitiative in defence). The programme which it is envisaged will start in 1990, enjoys full United Kingdom support and will be based on the IPEG's work to establish a European technology plan for a number of technology areas important to defence. More detailed proposals—including funding plans—will be submitted to IEPG Ministers at their next meeting in February 1990. Present plans envisage IEPG nations spending about 120 million ECUs (£80 million) per year on this initiative with a United Kingdom contribution in the order of £15 million. European industry will, in due course, be invited to put forward proposals to meet the research priorities identified in the programme.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West of 11 July, Official Report, column 495, if he will give details of the animals used in experiments by his Department or undertaken on a contract basis for each year since 1985 by (a) animal, (b) numbers and (c) type of experiment or test.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The number of Ministry of Defence animal experiments recorded by the Home Office under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 and the subsequent Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 between 1985 and 1987 (the last full year for which figures are available) is as follows:

|---|---|
| 1985 | 6,900 |
| 1986 | 6,600 |
| 1987 | 9,200 |

It is not our practice to provide further breakdown of these figures. Such information could enable an informed observer to gain a useful insight into the scope and direction of MOD's work, to the detriment of national security.

Contractors have the same reporting responsibilities as MOD under the act and their procedures are reported to the Home Office, not to MOD.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr Sainsbury: To assist in obtaining better value for money, the Ministry of Defence has implemented a number of measures to broaden its competition base, In particular, in November 1986 my noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement launched the small firms initiative which particularly sought to encourage small firms to bid for MOD business. The success of the initiatives can be measured by the degree of involvement of new companies in our competitions.

Over the last three years the MOD has made total payments each year to small firms of about £1,000 million. The number of small firms receiving payment on direct contract has increased from some 4,000 in 1986-87 to over 7,000 in 1988-89. In 1987-88 some 1,500 firms sought advice from the newly formed small firms advice division, and in 1988-89 the figure was more that 2,500. In recognition of the division's success, in November 1988 my noble Friend relaunched it as the new suppliers service, with the aim of making the benefits of this service available to potential new suppliers of all sizes (including foreign companies).

The small firms initiative is still a key element in encouraging competition and the new suppliers service retains a cell dedicated to dealing with small firms. In 1988-89 about 3,000 companies of all sizes approached the division for advice, either direct—by telephone or letter —or at the 60-odd sessions involving seminars or "meet the buyers" held throughout the United Kingdom last year. The seminars allow MOD's procurement policies and procedures to be explained to a large audience, and the "meet the buyer" sessions enable a wide range of individual queries to be dealt with at one forum; such events have been held, increasingly, in association with regional development agencies, the CBI and other interested bodies.

The new suppliers service is responsible for producing the booklet "selling to the MOD" which offers important guidance on MOD's policies and procedures, useful background information and contact points. The fourth, much expanded, edition was published last autumn, containing much new information, not only on selling directly to the MOD but to our prime contractors. A fifth edition is planned for later this year.

The service is also responsible for promoting the small firms research initiative (as part of the small firms initiative) aimed at encouraging small firms to bid for research work. In 1987-88, 32 firms won business totalling £1·1 million. In 1988-89, 38 firms won business worth £1·3 million. The trend is encouraging and the level of interest by small firms remains high.

Registration of new companies on the defence contractors list remains high. In 1988, 300 new small firms were registered, the same as in 1987.

The tangible results of the SFI show that a high level of interest continues, and that the demand for briefings and advice remain high as well. We shall continue to encourage small firms and monitor their response, and the contributions which this makes towards better value for money.

Warships

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much time warships spent on average at sea in 1988, 1978, 1968, and 1959 or for the nearest comparable 10 year intervals back from the latest available date.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Comprehensive information is not available in the form requested from 1968 or earlier. However, the average time spent at sea by warships in 1988 and 1978, expressed as a percentage of operational time, was 41 per cent. and 42 per cent. respectively. The Navy is well aware of the possible consequences on morale of long periods spent at sea, and aims to set the optimum sea/shore ratio in its fleet programme.

RAF Upper Heyford

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leyton, (Mr. Cohen), 18 April, Official Report, column 112, what information he now has on the nature and purpose of the proposed additions to the flight simulator facility, the engine shop and the avionics maintenance shop at RAF Upper Heyford.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 13 July at columns 589-90.

Ordnance Explosions (Deaths)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many deaths have occurred to service personnel as a result of controlled explosions of ordnance in the last 10 years for which information is available.

Mr. Neubert: Apart from the three deaths in the tragic accident at Kineton on 17 July this year, which are to be the subject of a board of inquiry, over the past 10 years there have been no fatalities as a result of the controlled demolition of ordnance.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to be able to publish the results of the inquiry into the deaths of three Army personnel at Kineton on 18 July.

Mr. Neubert: A board of inquiry into the incident at Kineton on 17 July will be established, following the submission, as evidence, of the RMP report on the incident, and will be completed as quickly as possible. It is not our practice to publish board of inquiry reports but I will write to the hon. Member once the board's findings are known. Additional precautionary safety guidelines have been issued pending the outcome of the inquiry.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to make an announcement about the selection of the command and control system for the type 23 frigate.

Mr. Sainsbury: Shortly.

Service Personnel

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many men and women hold non-commissioned officer rank in each of the forces; and what percentage of the total in the forces this represents by rank and sex;

(2) how many persons there are in Her Majesty's forces, by Navy, Army and Air Force and by men and women;

Recruits (Pay)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the level of pay for a new recruit in each of the forces by men and by women.

Mr. Neubert: For male recruits in the Army and RAF the annual rate of pay on joining is:

Junior (aged under 17½)—£3,321·50 to £4,500·45, depending on age

Basic Trainees (aged over 17½)—£5,953·15 to £6,226·90, depending on the length of their initial commitment.

Officer Cadets—£6,781·70.

Rates for the Royal Navy are similar except that all basic trainees start on £5,935·15. The Royal Navy also employs apprentice artificers at a starting salary of £4,387·30 per annum.

For femal recruits in all three services the annual rate of pay on joining is:

| | £ |
|---|---|
| Under 17½ | 4,460·30 |
| Basic trainees | 5,898·40 |
| Officer Cadets | 6,719 |

Overseas Postings

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of Army non-commissioned personnel who live abroad on accompanied postings and own homes are accompanied on such postings.

Mr. Neubert: The proportion of service men united with their families whilst serving overseas on accompanied postings is 95·6 per cent. It is not possible to identify what percentage of these are home owners, without incurring disproportionate costs.

Nuclear-powered Warships Safety Committee

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, further to his reply of 6 July to the right hon. Member for Swansea, West, Official Report, column 263, the seven Ministry of Defence officials who are not full-time members of the nuclear-powered warships safety committee have voting rights; who is on the committee specifically to represent environmental or community viewpoints; and if there are any representatives from the Departments of the Environment, the Welsh Office, the Scottish Office or the Northern Ireland Office.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No vote is taken at meetings of the nuclear-powered warships safety committee (NPWSC). Only unanimous advice is put forward. It is a committee of technical experts whose terms of reference are confined to public safety. The Department of the Environment is represented on the committee by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution (HMIP), and Scottish Office by Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate. Although HMIP is part of the Department of the Environment, it also advises the Welsh Office, and where appropriate represents that Department on the NPWSC. The membership of the NPWSC includes experts from several other bodies which have environmental and public safety responsibilities: the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Department of Health and the nuclear installations inspectorate; and the National Radiological Protection Board. The Northern Ireland Office is not represented as there are no berths or facilities for nuclear-powered submarines in Northern Ireland.

Equipment Exhibitions

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many visitors are expected to attend this year's Royal Navy equipment exhibition.

Mr. Sainsbury: Based on previous exhibitions, a total of some 25,000 people are expected to attend RNEE between 24 and 29 September.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now make it his practice to publish the names of countries invited to British forces equipment exhibitions.

Mr. Sainsbury: No. It has been the consistent policy of this and previous Administrations not to release details of invitation lists to British forces equipment exhibitions. Invitations are issued on a confidential basis and it would be a breach of trust to release names.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the total cost of this year's Royal Navy equipment exhibition.

Mr. Sainsbury: The cost of the Royal Navy equipment exhibition is estimated to be £2·4 million. As is usual practice, the costs incurred will be fully recovered from the participating companies.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and where the next Royal Navy equipment exhibition will be held; and on which dates it will be open to (a) overseas customers, (b) the press and (c) the British public.

Mr. Sainsbury: The next Royal Navy equipment exhibition (RNEE) will be held at Whale island, Portsmouth between 24 and 29 September 1989. Sunday 24 September will be the press day and the exhibition will be open to VIPs and overseas customers on 25 to 27 September. The remaining two days are trade days although overseas customers will still be welcome. The exhibition is not open to members of the public.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who will perform the opening ceremony at this year's Royal Navy equipment exhibition.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence is planning to perform this ceremony.

Environmental Pollution

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much intermediate-level nuclear waste produced by submarine refits was dumped at sea prior to 1983.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 13 July 1989]: Sea dumping of intermediate-level nuclear waste prior to 1983 was carried out under a licence issued by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. No differentiation was made between ILW produced by the Ministry of Defence as a result of submarine refits and that arising from other sources.

IUKADGE Command and Control System

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many changes were made to specifications for the IUKADGE command and control system between 1980 and 1988.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 17 July 1989]: There have been no changes to the IUKADGE command and control system operational requirement since the development contract was awarded to UKSL in 1980. However, as is usual practice, provision is made in the contract for changes to be made, by agreement between the parties, to the detailed specifications, or for necessary additions to be made which were not foreseen at the time of the contract. Such changes are promulgated by means of specification change notices, of which 28 have to date been agreed at prime contract level and 267 at lower levels. the majority of these were requested by the prime contractor.

Electromagnetic Interference

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether electromagnetic interference has been a contributory factor in any accidents involving ground-based, seaborne or airborne weapons systems.

Mr Archie Hamilton [holding anwer 20 July 1989]: Electromagnetic interference has not been a contributory cause of any accident involving ground-based, seaborne, or airborne weapons systems in the United Kingdom.

(b) and (c):

The forecast of the surplus and increase in revenue to the national insurance fund for the purposes of the Autumn Statement are provided by the Government Actuary's Department. The Government Actuary provided in his report on the drafts of the 1988 Benefits Uprating and Contributions Rerating Orders (Cm. 537) the following figures in respect of the tax year 1989-90:

|  | £ million |
|---|---|
| Increase in total income to the national insurance fund over 1988-89 | 197 |

Equivalent estimates for the 1989 autumn statement will be published by the Government Actuary's Department when the uprating and rerating orders for 1990-91 are laid before Parliament towards the end of the year.

(d) The national insurance fund pays for all contributory benefits; the fund is administered so that contributions collected and paid into the fund are paid out as benefits. The fund has no borrowing powers, so that it must have a balance to insure against unexpected contingencies. The minimum target balance recommended by the Government Actuary is not intended to be a fixed target, but a prudent limit below which the balance should not be allowed to fall continually.

Disability Benefits Review

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will announce the proposed timetable for the disability benefits review; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, following the publication of the final Office of Population Censuses and Surveys report he will make a statement on (a) the timescale for a review of the conclusions, (b) the terms of reference of such a review body and (c) the likely membership of the review team.

Mr. Nicholas Scott: The sixth and final OPCS report on disability in Great Britain was published on 17 July. This marks the point at which both the Government and organisations of and for disabled people can begin to look at the survey findings in the round. Once we have done so, I hope to be able to announce a timetable for further action.

Departmental Press Releases

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that when his replies to letters sent to him are issued as his Department's press releases, copies of such letters are included in the press releases.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: When issuing press releases, we will continue to include any information that we judge to be appropriate in the circumstances.

Benefits (Children)

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Bournemouth, West (Mr. Butterfill) of 3 July, Official Report, column 41, if he will give a breakdown of his figure of 3 million children getting an extra 50p a week, showing how the figure is split between recipients of income support and of family credit, how it is distributed between England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, and giving the percentage of children in each region who are affected.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: On the basis of the assumptions underlying the Government's expenditure plans (Cmnd. 615), it is estimated that in the year 1989-90, 0·8 million children in families in receipt of family credit and 2·2 million children in families in receipt of income support in Great Britain will receive an extra 50p per week in their child allowances above the normal uprating increase. I regret that it is not possible to provide statistically reliable estimates of how these children are distributed among families in England, Scotland and Wales.

Lone Parents

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the number of lone parents; how many are in paid work; how many are on income support; how many are on other out-of-work benefits; and how many are receiving family credit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The most recent estimate of lone parent numbers is for 1986 and the income support and family credit schemes did not commence until April 1988. Information for 1986 is as follow:

|---|---|
| Estimated numbers of lone parents | [1]1,010,000 |
| Estimated numbers in paid work | [2]440,000 |
| In receipt of supplementary benefit | [3]602,000 |
| In receipt of Family Income Supplement | [5]85,000 |

Notes:

No information is held on number of lone parents receiving unemployment benefit.

There were 722,000 lone parents in receipt of income support at [4]May 1988 and 108,000 in receipt of family credit at March 1989.

[1] OPCS estimate see Population Trends 55 Spring 1989.

[2] FES 1986, includes those in receipt of Supplementary Benefit with part-time earnings.

[5] February.

Means-tested Benefits

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the public expenditure savings as a result of the low take up of means-tested benefits.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my right hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 7 February 1989 at columns 628-29. Estimates of the take-up of the main income-related benefits for 1985 will be published before the summer recess.

Mortgage Interest

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures giving the disposable incomes, after taking into account means-tested benefits of single-wage married couples with two children under five years and mortgages of (a) £20,000, (b) £30,000, (c) £40,000 and (d) £50,000, firstly when out of work and receiving income support and secondly when in work earning £100, £150, £200, £250 and £300 a week.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No precise figures are available. There are a variety of different mortgages, and mortgage interest fluctuations mean that mortgage interest payments can vary during the course of any given year. Social security provision for income support claimants with mortgages varies with the period benefit has been in payment.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the maximum amount of mortgage interest payable with income support; and whether he will consider aligning the family credit regulations to take account of mortgage interest.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There is no maximum amount of mortgage interest which can be met in income support, but the amount can be restricted in certain circumstances. We have no plans to allow for mortgage interest in the assessment of family credit.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Moore: The Government's general policy towards small businesses is to create a climate in which they can flourish and to provide measures that support and help stimulate their development. Over the past 12 months my Department has continued to identify ways to help small businesses. Specific measures which have been introduced included:

(i) In February 1989 we issued a new communications package for employers which provided guidance on the collection of national insurance contributions and the payment of statutory sick pay. We enlisted the help of external consultants and in line with their recommendations, the structure and design of the guidance was completely revised. The aim was to make our instructions easier for employers to understand, in particular for the small employer who may have to carry out payroll functions personally.

At the end of February 1989, immediately after the dispatch of the new guidance material, a small survey was undertaken to sample initial reactions to the new material. The survey showed that 83 per cent. thought that the updating was a good idea and 69 per cent. agreed that they would be more likely to use the new guides than the old ones. A larger survey is currently under way to examine reactions to the material in use and to seek further improvements. The results are expected by September 1989.

(ii) We have produced a video, specifically aimed at small employers, which outlines the basics of the calculation and payment of statutory sick pay, and which has been available since March 1989. Copies can be obtained from CFL Vision, PO Box 35, Wetherby, Yorkshire, LS23 7EX, price £14·50.

(iii) In October 1988 we embarked on a series of experimental seminars for employers which provided instruction on the administration of statutory sick pay and statutory maternity pay. The pilot seminars were based in Scotland and found to be of value to both small and large employers. We intend to extend the service nationally and are currently selecting the staff to do this.

(iv) We have worked with the Department of Employment in producing a starter pack for the newly self-employed and those who may be contemplating self-employment. The pack, "Working for Yourself: What You Need to Know" became available in July 1989.

(v) We have undertaken a comprehensive review of all the inquiries local and central DSS offices make of business. Implementation of the report's recommendations will result in a lessening of the burden departmental inquiries place on business.

We are continuing to take positive steps to give small firms opportunities to do business with the Department. Local purchasing staff are encouraged to make contact with small firms and they are doing a substantial proportion of their business with them.

As yet we have not designed performance indicators specifically for monitoring achievements in this area, but my Department has a system to monitor proposals which impact on business to ensure the needs of small businesses are fully taken into account. We attach particular importance to action taken to help small firms and will continue to explore further ways of doing so.

Community Charge

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by each charging authority in England the income level at which (a) a single person aged under 25 years, (b) a single person aged over 25 years, (c) a single pensioner, (d) a pensioner couple and (e) a couple with two children all with no savings would lose entitlement to community charge rebate assuming the Department of the Environment's illustrative community charge figures for 1989-90.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Benefits (Dundee)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how much was spent on community care grants and social fund loans by the Dundee, East and Dundee, West offices of his Department in 1988-89; what proportion of their budgets for these benefits this represents; and how much they have been allocated for these benefits for 1989-90.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Such information is available from the details held in the Library.

Pensioners

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners in receipt of less than full basic national insurance retirement pension, because of insufficent contributions (a) also receive income support, (b) are living with partners whose income added to their own, takes them as a couple up to or beyond the basic income support level.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information collected centrally on retirement pensioners in receipt of income support does not indicate the rate of basic state pension in payment to those individuals.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security why leaflet NP1 advises only pensioners not receiving income support or housing benefit to read on and decide whether to claim income support; and whether he will take steps to amend the leaflets so as to avoid giving the impression that pensioners receiving only housing benefit cannot gain by claiming income support.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The leaflet does not refer to

> "only pensioners not receiving income support or housing benefit"

but to people who do

> "not at present get either benefit".

I do not consider that this gives the impression suggested, particularly as the next column of the leaflet sets out clearly the conditions of eligibility to income support.

Elderly People (Evictions)

Mr. Madden To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make arrangements to collect information about elderly people who are evicted from residential homes for the elderly in the private/voluntary sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no plans to do so.

Women Pensioners and War Widows

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any information concerning the current average income of (a) women pensioners and (b) war widows.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 13 July 1989]: The average weekly gross income of all single[1] women pensioners in 1986 was £73.30 (at 1986 prices). Comparable information is not available for war widows.

Source: Family Expenditure Survey 1986.

[1] Information on the gross income of all women pensioners is not given because the available data on this group includes the income of the husbands of married women.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any information concerning the percentages of all women pensioners which fall into different total income brackets; and if he will give comparable figures for war widows.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 13 July 1989]: The proportion of single[1] women pensioners in gross equivalent[2] income quintiles is as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Quintile 1 (lowest) | 26·8 |
| 2 | 49·5 |
| 3 | 13·7 |
| 4 | 5·4 |
| 5 (highest) | 4·6 |

Comparable information is not available for war widows.

Source: Family Expenditure Survey 1986.

[1] Information on the income distribution of all women pensioners is not given because the available data on this group includes the income of the husbands of married women.

[2] Equivalisation is a method of adjusting incomes to allow direct comparisons to be made between different family types, for example single and married people, those with and without children, householders and non-householders.

ENERGY

EC Energy Policy

16. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on progress towards the development of a European Community energy policy.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Commission has recently drafted instruments on price transparency, transfrontier trade in gas and electricity, and on notification of certain energy investments.

Fast Breeder Reactors

19. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the future of fast breeder reactors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend announced the results of the Government's review of fast reactor policy to the House on 21 July last year at column 1288.

Renewable Energy

24. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he intends to review the non-fossil fuel quota in the light of the study of renewable electrical energy potential in the north-west of England carried out by NORWEB and the energy technology support unit, Harwell.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government recently announced their intention to reserve a privileged place for renewables within the non-fossil fuel obligation. This will be done by setting special extra tranches of capacity which can be filled only by renewable forms of energy. The proposed levels of the tranches will be kept under review to ensure that when the obligations are laid they take fully into account the potential availability of renewable capacity. There is no need for further review at present.

27. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish the recently completed study of the renewable energy resource potential in the north-west of England carried out by NORWEB and the energy technology support, unit, Harwell.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The report and the accompanying overview report were published on 6 July. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

44. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the next regions to be studied by the energy technology support unit at Harwell for renewable electrical energy potential.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The potential for the use of renewable energy was assessed for the country as a whole and published in "Energy Paper 55". Since then two further studies considering electricity generation have been published; the "Cornwall Energy Project" by Cornwall county council and "Prospects for Renewable Energy in the Norweb Area" by the North Western electricity board and the energy technology support unit. No other specific proposals are in hand at present, but it is hoped that other electricity boards will follow Norweb's lead.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has evaluated which renewable energy projects currently being developed or studied by the energy technology support unit at the Atomic Energy Research Establishment, Harwell, might prove suitable for export to (a) the Indian sub-continent and African states and (b) European Economic Community member states.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department's programme on renewable energy is focused primarily on the development of commercially viable and environmentally acceptable renewable technologies for the United Kingdom. Although at an early stage of development, many of the Department's projects could lead to products suitable for export to both industrialised and less well-developed countries. The United Kingdom is already involved in collaboration or information exchanges in a number of areas.

Many of the technologies being examined as part of the Department's R and D programme should offer considerable export potential for United Kingdom industry.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the energy technology support unit, Harwell's, medium-term and long-term projects for renewable electrical energy generation in the North West of England.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney) earlier today.

Combined Heat and Power

26. Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consideration is being given to enabling electricity generated through combined heat and power schemes in the home to be fed into the national grid.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Our privatisation proposals are specifically designed to encourage competition in generation and to ensure that all economic sources of electricity supply have access to the market. Any surplus electricity generated by CHP schemes is however more likely to be used locally than to be fed into the national grid.

Coal and Oil Combustion (Tax)

28. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals exist for international negotiations on the taxation of coal and oil combustion in advanced western countries.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am aware of no formal proposals for such international negotiations, although several ideas have been floated for a carbon tax or levy as a way to discourage $CO_2$ emissions. The proper forum for consideration of such ideas is the intergovernmental panel on climate change, which is examining strategies for responding to the greenhouse effect.

Insulation

29. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the proposal by the Select Committee on Energy of a target of 250,000 low-income households to be insulated in a year.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to set a target of a minimum of 250,000 low-income households to be insulated in the current financial year.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Gateshead, East (Ms. Quin) earlier today.

38. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest estimate of the number of low-income households which will be insulated under neighbourhood energy action programmes in the current financial year; and what are the resulting energy savings.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment announced on 10 February a package of special measures to help boost the project network. The most recent quarterly monitoring returns relate to the period before those measures took effect, so we are not yet able to produce reliable estimates of the number of households which will be treated in the current financial year.

51. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will hold urgent discussions on ways of stepping up the number of low-income households to be insulated over the next three years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Secretary of State for Employment announced on 10 February a special package of measures designed to boost the network of community insulation projects which provide practical help to low-income households. Officials from my Department and the Training Agency are now discussing ways of maintaining and building upon the improvement which stemmed from those measures.

52. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the progress being made to date in insulation schemes for private dwellings in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Amendments to the Building Regulations were laid before the House on 11 July. These will require improvements in insulation standards for new housing (and other new buildings) which should achieve a saving of about 20 per cent. in heating requirements compared with standards under existing regulations. The amendments will come into operation on 1 April 1990.

Community insulation projects, which provide a low-cost insulation (mainly draughtproofing) service for low-income households, have so far insulated over 600,000 homes, about half of which are in the private sector. Over 3·5 million grants have been paid under the homes insulation scheme for loft, tank and pipe insulation. Over 90 per cent. of homes with accessible lofts now have some degree of loft insulation.

Coal Liquefaction

30. Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects the coal-to-oil liquefaction pilot plant at Point of Ayr to be commissioned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The commissioning phase of British Coal's liquefaction project has already commenced, and I would expect this phase to be completed next year. My Department has offered to contribute up to 9 per cent. of the project cost up to a maximum contribution of £3 million, and is contractually committed to support the commissioning phase.

Coal Orders

31. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce the level, duration and tonnage of coal to be ordered from British Coal by (a) National Power and (b) PowerGen from January 1990 onwards.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The negotiation of new coal purchase arrangements is primarily a commercial matter for the industries. The announcement of the details of such arrangements, once concluded, will also primarily be a matter for them.

Coal Mining (Nottinghamshire)

32. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the impact of electricity privatisation on employment in mining in the Nottinghamshire coalfield.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Negotiations between the generators and British Coal are continuing. Following the conclusion of these negotiations, it will be for British Coal to estimate what effects there may be on its operations.

Fossil Fuels (Levy)

33. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent representations he has received seeking a levy on the combustion of any fossil fuel.

Mr. Michael Spicer: None.

Nuclear Power (Privatisation)

34. Mr. James Lamond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the cost of transferring nuclear power stations to the private sector.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce the discount on present net replacement cost value of £9·3 billion of the nuclear power stations of England and Wales, required to achieve a transfer to the private sector.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. Smith) earlier today.

Gas Tariffs

35. Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to meet the Director General of Gas Supply to discuss tariffs proposed by British Gas.

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to meet the Director General of Gas Supply to discuss the gas price tariff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I regularly meet the Director General of Gas Supply and discuss a range of matters of mutual interest.

Electricity Generation

36. Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the industry forecast for future electricity generating capacity before the year 2000.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The final year of the load forecast which the electricity supply industry (England and Wales) adopted in October 1988 is 1997-98. The forecast of unrestricted demand for that year is 56·5 GW.

Coal Imports

37. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he next expects to meet the chairman of British Coal regarding coal imports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Electricity Privatisation

39. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has fully evaluated the value for money to be obtained from the £26·5 million allocated for advisers fees on electricity privatisation and the expenditure on departmental staff of comparable skills.

42. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he is taking to ensure that value for money is being obtained from the £26·5 million to be spent on advisers' fees to promote electricity privatisation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department carefully evaluates the costs and benefits associated with each item of expenditure and seeks to negotiate the best possible price with advisers before entering into a contractual relationship.

45. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received from environmental or conservation organisations on the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have received a number of representations.

Fluidised Bed Combustion

40. Mr. Allen MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement on the Grimethorpe fluidised bed combustion proposal.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department is currently working with British Coal to put together a substantial financial package involving both private and public sector funding, to carry forward the proposed experiments at Grimethorpe as part of the programme to develop the topping cycle concept. Once the outcome of these discussions is known, I will make a further statement.

Energy Efficiency

41. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what priority he proposes to give to the encouragement of energy efficiency and conservation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Government attach high priority to the promotion of energy efficiency through the work of the Energy Efficiency Office. Our proposals for the electricity supply industry will give further impetus to the promotion of energy efficiency, in particular through the duties they place on the Director General of Electricity Supply.

Greenhouse Effect

43. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the total number of nuclear reactors operating worldwide and the total amount of electricity demand met by them; and if he will estimate the total quantity of greenhouse gases that would be produced as a result of replacing them with coal-fired power stations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I understand from the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) that at the end of 1988 there were 429 nuclear reactors operating worldwide. Comprehensive figures for electricity generation are not yet available for 1988, but, in 1987, nuclear power generated 1,625 billion kw hours of electricity, equivalent to the output from 211 pressurised water reactors (PWRs) of the Sizewell B type.

It is difficult to be precise when estimating the increase in greenhouse gas production if nuclear power is replaced by coal worldwide but, on current figures, carbon dioxide ($CO_2$) output would increase by about 1·3 billion tonnes per year, or 35 per cent. of the present global contribution due to coal-fired electricity generation.

Thermal Efficiency

46. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what improvements in thermal efficiency have been achieved in the past 10 years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The efficiency of the nation's energy use has improved greatly over the past 10 years. In 1978 the United Kingdom consumed 1·23 tonnes of coal equivalent per £1,000 of GDP (at 1985 factor cost). In 1988 this had fallen to 1 tonne of coal equivalent per £1,000 of GDP in the same price terms, a reduction of 18·7 per cent. over the period.

Nuclear Power Stations (Decommissioning)

47. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received about the decommissioning of nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have received a number of representations relating to various aspects of the decommissioning of nuclear power stations in recent months.

British Coal

48. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the issues he expects to raise when he next meets the chairman of British Coal.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Power Stations

49. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the power stations now being built in the United Kingdom.

Landfill Gases

50. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretaryof State for Energy what recent assessment his Department has made of the possibilities for the generation of electricity from landfill gases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: There is great uncertainty about projections for renewable sources of energy. Based on data given in "Energy Paper 55—"Renewable Energy in the UK: The Way Forward", it has been estimated that by the year 2025 up to 4·5 per cent. of current energy requirements might come from a wide range of biomass sources if the diverse technologies involved can be successfully developed and applied.

It is not yet possible to assess with any certainty the contribution which electricity generation from landfill gases will make towards this proportion. However, there are indications that approximately 200 MW of landfill gas-fired generating capacity would be operating by the turn of the century.

Oil Production

53. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the volume of United Kingdom oil production in 1988 and his estimate of production in 1989, 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The figures requested are set out in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's report to Parliament, "Development of the Oil and Gas Resources of the United Kingdom" (the Brown Book), published in April 1989.

Coal-fired Generation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretaryof State for Energy if he will bring forward proposals to require that a proportion of electricity be generated by coal-fired power stations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the steps he is taking to promote energy conservation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend for Devon, North (Mr. Speller) and the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 15 May, Official Report, column 105.

$CO_2$ Emissions

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his Department's estimate of the contribution that nuclear power will make to the required halving in United Kingdom $CO_2$ emissions by the year 2025.

Mr. Michael Spicer: There is no requirement on the United Kingdom to reduce the future emissions of carbon dioxide or any other energy-related greenhouse gas. The course of any necessary future action should become clearer when the intergovernmental panel on climate change (IPCC) reports in autumn 1990. Until then it would not be wise for the United Kingdom to act unilaterally in such a global matter.

In the meantime, current policies in the energy field are pointing in the right direction to curtail the growth of these gases. The encouragement of cost effective energy efficiency measures, the development of renewable energy resources, the support of diversified supply options such as nuclear (which emits almost no $CO_2$) in the Electricity Bill, are a firm basis for any future action. The United Kingdom's call for the strengthening of the Montreal protocol on CFCs will spur action on the most powerful of greenhouse gases.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of the United Kingdom's carbon dioxide emissions is caused by coal and oil-fired power stations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Emissions from coal and oil-fired power stations account for about one third of the total United Kingdom emissions from non-biological sources.

Least-cost Options

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to increase support for least-cost options to meet energy demand.

Mr. Parkinson: The Government believe that, provided market barriers are removed, market forces are the best way to meet energy demand at least cost. Our proposals for privatisation of the electricity supply industry, and the work of the Energy Efficiency Office, are designed to tackle and remove market barriers.

Efficiency and Conservation

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had recently with the director designate of the Office of Electricity Regulation on the priority to be given to energy efficiency and conservation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State discussed energy efficiency issues with Professor Littlechild specifically on 6 June and generally on subsequent occasions. They agreed that the Office of Electricity Regulation and the Energy Efficiency Office would establish mechanisms for close co-operation on matters of common interest, both at national and regional level. I welcome these arrangements, which will reinforce the important work which both organisations will be doing to promote energy efficiency.

Sulphur Emissions

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what will be spent in the next financial year in overcoming the problem of sulphur emissions from electricity power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is an operational matter for the CEGB. I have asked the chairman of the board to write to my hon. Friend.

Nuclear Generation

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of electricity is generated by nuclear power in (a) France, (b) Belgium, (c) Sweden, (d) Switzerland, (e) Finland, (f) West Germany, (g) Spain and (h) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The latest available published information (1987) is as follows:

(a) France 70·1 per cent.; (b) Belgium 62·2 per cent.; (c) Sweden 45·9 per cent.; (d) Switzerland 38·4 per cent.; (e) Finland 36·7 per cent.; (f) West Germany 31·2 per cent.; (g) Spain 30·9 per cent.; (h) the United Kingdom 18·2 per cent.

Source: "Energy Statistics 1986-87" (OECD/IEA).

Mr. Graham Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has any proposals to require that a minimum percentage of electricity distributed by the electricity boards will come from electricity produced by nuclear generation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Clause 34 of the Electricity Bill permits the Secretary of State to make orders to require public electricity suppliers to have available to them a certain minimum amount of non-fossil generating capacity. This is intended to encourage all economically viable and environmentally acceptable non-fossil sources. There is no intention to restrict such orders solely to nuclear generation.

Uranium

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will request the Euratom safeguards authorities to re-designate all N-coded uranium imported to the United Kingdom since 1978 with a P code.

Mr. Michael Spicer: In compliance with the terms of the Euratom treaty, it is not for the Government to seek to change the coding placed on imported nuclear materials by the Euratom safeguards authorities.

White Papers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, for each of the last three White Papers issued by his Department, for which legislation has been started, he will state the time elapsed between their publication and the First Readings of any Bills connected with them; and if he will do the same for the last three White Papers issued by his Department prior to May 1979.

Mr. Parkinson: Only one such White Paper has been issued by my Department since 1979. This was the White Paper "Privatising Electricity" (Cm. 322, 25 February 1988). The Electricity Bill had its First Reading on 30 November 1988. It is not for me to answer for the record of the last Government in this matter, but the information requested should be available in the Library of the House and the Official Report.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the magawatt equivalent of the 15 per cent. to 20 per cent. range of electricity to be provided by nuclear power, as specified in the Official Report, 5 April, column 275; and if each area electricity board will have to accept this range.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The non-fossil fuel obligation will be set for each public electricity supply company in England and Wales later this year, taking into account its size and pattern of demand.

Mines (Capital Investment)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the capital investments in the following mines for the year 1989-90 (a) Murton, (b) Easington, (c) Dawdon, (d) Vane Tempest, (e) Wearmouth, (f) Westo and (g) Ellington.

Mr. Michael Spicer: These are matters for British Coal. I have asked the chairman to write direct to the hon. Member.

Coal-fired Power Stations

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list by year for the last 10 years, the tonnage level of purchases from (a) British Coal and (b) other sources of coal suppliers for use at power stations to be allocated to (i) National Power and (ii) Power Gen.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Deliveries of coal to individual power stations are a matter for the CEGB. I will ask the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Energy Sources

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment his Department has made on the question of environmentally comparable energy sources; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The chief scientist group at the energy technology support unit have carried out for my Department a number of appraisals of energy sources and their environmental impact is one of the range of factors assessed.

A wide-ranging appraisal of most energy sources and technologies relevant to the United Kingdom was reported in "Energy Paper 54" and specific assessments of alternative energy resources such as "Hot Dry Rocks" ETSU-R-34, "Bioethanol as a Transport Fuel" ETSU-R-44 and "Synthetic Fuel Options for Road Transport Applications" ETSU-R-33 have been published.

Mining Subsidence

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish in the Official Report, for each year for which figures are available, the cost of compensation and repairs for coal mining subsidence damage.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Actual cash expenditure by British Coal during each of the last three financial years is as follows:

|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 54·5 |
| 1987-88 | 48·9 |
| 1988-89 | 43·1 |

Desulphurisation

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects the first power station in the east midlands will be equipped with flue gas desulphurisation equipment; and when such equipment will be available for use in power stations in the Trent valley.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is an operational matter for the CEGB. I have asked the chairman to write direct to my hon. Friend.

Low-wattage Light Bulbs

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether his Department has made any estimate of the level to which the unit price of electricity to the private consumer would have to increase to make it economic for all consumers to switch to low-wattage light bulbs.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Low-energy light bulbs already offer worthwhile savings to domestic consumers at current electricity prices. Their extra initial cost is more than compensated for by much longer lifetimes and lower electricity consumption.

Landfill Gases

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many landfill sites have been identified by his Department where biodegradable wastes could produce significant volumes of biogas for commercial exploitation; how many sites are currently extracting biogas commercially; and what is the volume in coal tonnes equivalent he estimates can be exploited from British landfill sites.

Mr. Michael Spicer: A recent estimate, made on behalf of my Department, has identified 438 sites where landfill gas from biodegradable wastes could be exploited commercially. Of this total, some 24 sites are already extracting and exploiting landfill gas and producing an energy equivalent of 0·16 million tonnes coal equivalent (mtce) annually. While there is great uncertainty about projections for renewable sources of energy, it is possible that this amount could more than double by 1992, and reach around 1·5 mtce by the turn of the century.

Gas Prices

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will take remedial action to alleviate the rise in interruptible gas prices following the removal of the ability of users to negotiate individual contracts, consequent upon the implementation of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's recommendation to publish gas price schedules.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Director General of Gas Supply is responsible for ensuring that British Gas plc operates within the terms of its authorisation, as modified to give effect to the MMC's recommendations. Mr. McKinnon is at present in discussion with British Gas on a number of points concerning the structure and operation of the gas price schedule. However, the level of interruptible gas prices is a matter for British Gas.

Petrol Prices

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the percentage change in the average pump price of four star or premium petrol, net of retailers' margin, duty and taxes, between 1959 and 1988, measured against the retail prices index and in constant money terms.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The percentage changes in the price of four star petrol (that is, premium), net of duty and taxes, over the period between 1959 and 1988, are as follows:

| | Per cent. |
|---|---|
| Petrol price (money of the day) | 407 |
| RPI | 769 |
| Petrol price deflated by RPI | −42 |

The Department of Energy does not have data on retailers' margins.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the percentage change in the average price of four star and premium petrol, net of duty and taxes (a) between 1960 and 1988, (b) between 1970 and 1988 and (c) between 1980 and 1988, measured against the retail price index and in constant money terms.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The percentage changes in the price of four star petrol (that is, premium), net of duty and taxes, over the relevant periods, are as follows:

| | Petrol price (in money of the day) Per cent. | RPI Per cent. | Petrol price deflated by RPI Per cent. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1960 to 1988 | 414 | 756 | −40 |
| 1970 to 1988 | 453 | 478 | −4 |
| 1980 to 1988 | −19 | 60 | −49 |

Flow Charts

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy(1) if he will indicate when the last flow chart showing United Kingdom energy flows was produced; and if he intends to issue a new chart with the latest figures; (2) if he will provide 1988 figures for the information which was provided by the 1983 energy flow chart.

Mr. Parkinson: The last chart showing United Kingdom energy flows was produced in 1987, and was based on data for 1986. The flow chart is produced every three years; the next chart is scheduled for publication in mid-1990. and will be based on data for 1989. The chart is prepared from data published in the annual "Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics." The 1989 edition of the digest, containing data for 1988, is scheduled to be published by HMSO on 27 July, and a copy will be available in the House of Commons Library.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Cecil Parkinson: My Department's activities in support of small businesses remain essentially as stated in my reply to my hon. Friend on 14 July 1987 at columns 414-15. In the development and implementation of my Department's policies full account is taken on their impact on small businesses. In particular over the last 12 months, Government funding for British Coal Enterprise has risen to £60 million and new job opportunities, many of which are in small businesses, now total 41,041 in 2,600 individual projects; I am seeking to encourage the development of small licensed coal mine operations and I am considering proposing an early increase in the statutory limits on the size of licensed mines; the Energy Efficiency Office has published booklets giving advice on energy efficiency in hotels, offices, factories and warehouses and high street banks and agencies; The Offshore Supplies Office has held a seminar on the export opportunities for smaller companies which examined ways to help them carry out economical market research and encouraged them to share the costs of doing so in carefully targeted areas.

Nuclear Materials (Safeguards)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) Official Report, 20 June, column 91, where the statement of interpretation on regulation 3227/76 is published.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 5 July 1989]: The statement on quantity and quality of nuclear substances was made by Commissioner Mosar during the debate on transport of dangerous goods and substances in the European Parliament on 5 July 1988 and is contained in "Official Journal (Special Series) Annex No. 2-367" pages 89-90, which is available for inspection in the Library of the House.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Misleading Advertisements

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints he has received concerning misleading advertisements; and if he has any plans to amend the Control of Misleading Advertisement Regulations 1988.

Mr. Forth: My Department does not keep records of such complaints. Anyone complaining to the Department about an advertisement whether in respect of misleadingness or otherwise is referred to the appropriate advertising control authority: usually the Advertising Standards Authority or local trading standards department. Complaints about misleading advertisements which cannot be satisfactorily resolved by the authorities may be referred to the Director General of Fair Trading under the Control of Misleading Advertisements Regulations 1988. I will ask the director general to write to the hon. Member about the number of complaints he has received.

I have no plans to amend the regulations.

Vehicle Mileage

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has had discussions concerning clocking and the possibility of requiring notification of a car's mileage to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre when relicensing, acquiring, or disposing of a car.

Mr. Forth: I have seen the recommendations to which the hon. Member refers, which were made by the working group led by the Director General of Fair Trading. As my hon. Friend the Minister for Roads and Traffic told the House on 16 March, the Government do not believe that the expensive system proposed for collecting and storing data in order to deter clocking would be sufficiently reliable to warrant the cost and bureaucracy involved. There are already mileage verification services available from private sector companies, and we believe that motor manufacturers could do much to solve the problem by developing tamper-resistant odometers.

Second-hand Cars

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints he has received concerning the failure of garages to carry out pre-sales inspections of second-hand cars; and what discussions he has had concerning the improvement of consumer protection in this area.

Mr. Forth: I am not aware of any complaints from consumers received by my Department specifically about the failure of garages to carry out pre-sales inspections of second-hand cars. I receive representations from time to time about various aspects of consumer protection in relation to used cars, but I have had no discussions specifically about pre-sales inspections.

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received any recent representations about pilot or permanent workplace creches and similar incentives further to encourage the return to employment of women in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Department of Trade and Industry uses the joint management and union arrangements which exist within the Whitley machinery to discuss workplace child care. The Department has received no recent representations outside this forum.

The DTI is keen both to retain female staff and to encourage women to return to its employ. With other Departments, the DTI has contributed funds to a play scheme in London for employees' children aged five to 12 years. We have also initiated a programme of action to promote part-time working, and have increased flexible working hours. We are shortly to announce details of a career break scheme.

NESL

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter written to him by the European Commissioner Sir Leon Brittan on 12 July regarding NESL.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is not usual practice to publish correspondence of this kind between the European Commission and the Government of a member country. In the particular circumstances of this case, however, a copy of Sir Leon Brittan's letter of 12 July has, with his agreement, been placed in the Library appended to a note by the Department on exchanges between the Government and the Commission concerning NESL.

Summer Time

Miss Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what assessment has been made of the impact on quality of service for letter deliveries by the Post Office if there is an extra hour of winter morning darkness due to the implementation of single/double summer time;

(2) what information he has as to what extra costs the Post Office forecasts it will incur if there is an extra hour of winter morning darkness due to the implementation of single/double summer time.

Mr. Forth: Quality of service is a matter for the Post Office Board. I understand the change would increase lighting and heating costs and require some changes in staffing arrangements at post offices.

Astra Satellite

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster at what power levels the Astra satellite is authorised by international regulatory agreements to broadcast signals to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Atkins: The power level for which the ASTRA (Transmitting space station GDL-6) satellite has been co-ordinated with the United Kingdom under the procedures of the ITU/IFRB (International Frequency Registration Board of the International Telecommunication Union) is 53 dBW eirp (Effective isotropic radiated power).

Eutelsat

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what payments from public funds have been made in each of the last five years to British Telecom International in respect of its involvement in the Eutelsat organisation and for what purpose.

Mr. Atkins: No such payments have been made to British Telecom International (BTI). The following payments have, however, been made to EUTELSAT by the British National Space Centre in respect of United Kingdom membership of EUTELSAT:

|---|---|
| 1984 | 513,523 |
| 1985 | 1,389,568 |
| 1986 | 1,843,321 |
| 1987 | 903,063 |
| 1988 | 3,342,463 |

These payments are a contribution towards the subscription payable to EUTELSAT by BTI, as United Kingdom signatory, in recognition of the costs associated with demonstrating the commercial applications of the ECS series of experimental telecommunications satellites. The payments will cease by the end of 1994.

Information Technology

Mr. Michael Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he is now in a position to give his Department's considered response to recommendations Nos. 24-26 of the Select Committee on Trade and Industry's report on information technology concerning the zero rating of value added tax on donations of information technology equipment made to educational institutions for research purposes.

Mr. Forth: The issues governing the zero rating of value added tax and taxation matters generally are complex and range beyond my Department. I can, however, state that I have taken note of the Select Committee's recommendation and can confirm that my Department remains committed to maintaining and improving the climate for investment for research and technology within the existing legislative framework. It is within this context that my officials have been liaising with the Treasury, but the policy regarding all fiscal matters is determined by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mortgage Arrears

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Attorney-General (1) how many actions for repossession as a result of mortgage arrears were begun in the Coventry county court in each year since 1979;

(2) how many county court actions for mortgage repossession occurred in the Coventry county court; how many of these actions resulted in an order for possession of the property; how many of these orders for possession were suspended; and how many warrants for eviction were issued, in each year since 1979.

The Attorney-General: The number of mortgage actions for possession entered and orders made for possession in Coventry county court in each year since 1983 (the first year for which figures are available) are as follows. No information is collected on how many of these orders were suspended nor how many resulted in evictions.

| Year | Number of mortgage possession actions entered | Number of mortgage possession orders made |
| 1983 | 550 | 476 |
| 1984 | 545 | 446 |
| 1985 | 471 | 404 |
| 1986 | 505 | 497 |
| 1987 | 560 | 385 |
| 1988 | 454 | 536 |

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Adult Illiteracy

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish his current estimate of the number of adult persons in the United Kingdom unable to read or write.

Mr. Jackson: Few adults are totally unable to write, but a substantial number have some problems with reading, writing and spelling. Research sponsored by the adult literacy and basic skills unit (ALBSU) and the Training Agency suggests that of the cohort of 23-year-olds who were interviewed in 1981 as part of the national child development study survey, 13 per cent. said that they had some problems with reading, writing or numeracy, and 3 per cent. said that their problems caused difficulty in everyday life. If this were typical of all adults in England and Wales, an estimated 5·5 million people could have some difficulties with literacy and numeracy, of whom about 300,000 might experience serious difficulties with reading and writing.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mrs. Rumbold: This information is not readily available in the form requested. Between 1 December 1988 and 30 June 1989 the Department received 9,985 letters designated for ministerial reply, and 9,385 replies were issued. During January 1989, 1,352 letters for ministerial reply were received, and 1,041 replies issued. Approximately two thirds of this correspondence was from hon. Members.

Personal and Social Education

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many hours the subjects of personal and social education will occupy in the national curriculum; and what will be the format for teaching these studies;

(2) how many hours the subject of alcohol education is to occupy in the national curriculum.

Mrs. Rumbold: Under section 4(3) of the Education Reform Act, national curriculum orders may not prescribe the time to be allocated to teaching any subject or topic. How the different programmes of study are taught will be a matter for each school to determine.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what recommendations he intends to make on alcohol education in the draft orders to be laid before Parliament on that subject;

(2) when the draft orders on the study and attainment targets for alcohol education to be contained in the national curriculum will be laid before Parliament.

Mrs. Rumbold: The order for science education within the national curriculum was laid before Parliament in March 1989. This includes attainment targets and programmes of study concerning the effects of alcohol on the way in which the human body functions.

"Fun Eating at School Today"

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the response in the Doncaster area to the Fun Eating at School Today campaign.

Mrs. Rumbold: The FEAST campaign is run by individual local education authorities. Information on its results in particular areas is not collected by the Department.

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to encourage education authorities and school governing bodies to establish work place or shared facility creches and similar incentives further to encourage the return of mothers to teaching.

Mrs. Rumbold: Under the education support grant programme for 1990-91, support is available for up to £2 million to boost the local recruitment of former teachers and mature entrants. Provision of creche and other child care facilities will be relevant expenditure for this activity.

Higher Education (Funding)

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will ensure in the future that universities and polytechnics receive the same level of funding.

Mr. Jackson: Decisions on the public funding of the universities and the polytechnics will continue to reflect differences in their circumstances, of which universities' research role is part.

Ethnically Based Statistics

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about ethnically based statistics on school pupils.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department is today issuing a circular to local education authorities and others, instituting from September 1990 a national scheme for the collection of ethnically based statistics on school pupils. I shall be placing copies of the circular in the Library.

The scheme's objective is to assist schools, parents, LEAs, the Department and others in ensuring that education meets the needs of all pupils, thereby helping to secure equality of opportunity. The great majority of those who commented on an earlier consultative circular welcomed the principle of collection of ethnically based data. The national scheme has been designed in the light of experience of pilot schemes in four LEAs.

LEA maintained and grant-maintained schools will be expected to collect ethnically based information on pupils entering either the primary or secondary phase of schooling in September 1990, and thereafter. Parents will be asked to provide, on a voluntary basis, information on their children's ethnic origin, religion and the language spoken in their home. The circular emphasises the need for care and sensitivity in the collection and handling of this information. Information supplied to the DES will be aggregated and will not permit the identification of individual pupils.

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about ethnically based statistics on students in further and higher education.

Mr. Jackson: The Department and the Welsh Office issued a consultation document raising the issues and options involved in the collection of ethnically based statistics for students in further and higher education last March. Comments were received from 100 bodies. There was general support for the proposal that the national data collection on ethnicity for each and every student/enrolment should be obtained via the incorporation of a question in the further education statistical record. Accordingly, we have agreed that a question to elicit this information using the agreed OPCS classification of ethnic groups will be included in the November 1990 FESR return.

With regard to the collection of data on applications for higher education, both the University Central Council on Admissions and the Polytechnic Central Admissions Systems have agreed to include an ethnicity question in their admission material for full-time first degree courses relating to the academic year 1990-91 and subsequently. UCCA data will then be transferred to the university statistical record in respect of those students enrolled at university.

The collection of these data will provide a valuable measure to inform forward planning and provision and alert decision-makers to issues and areas requiring further investigation.

Motor Neurone Disease

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the projects on motor neurone disease funded by his Department.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 14 July]: The Medical Research Council, which receives a grant in aid from this Department, is currently supporting the following projects on motor neurone disease:

| Investigator | Department | Project title |
|---|---|---|
| Dr. C. R. Slater | Neurology, University of Newcastle-upon-Tyne | Structure and function of motor innervation in mice with an inherited disease of the motor neurones |
| Dr. P. J. Harrison | Physiology, University College and Middlesex School of Medicine, London | The segmental and functional connectivity of group 1B muscle afferents |
| Dr. F. S. Walsh | Neurochemistry, Institute of Neurology, London | Molecular recognition events in nerve-muscle co-cultures |
| Prof. M. F. Scanlon | College of Medicine, University of Wales, Cardiff | Investigation of the serum factor(s) in motor neurone disease which increase TRH production by rat brain stem cells |
| Dr. K. R. Mills | Clinical Neurology, University of Oxford | Mechanisms of muscle weakness in central nervous system disease: a study using magnetic brain stimulation |
| Prof. T. A. Sears | Sobell Department of Neurophysiology, Institute of Neurology, London | Tropic regulation of protein synthesis in motorneurones |
| Dr. R. Navarrette | Anatomy and Developmental Biology, University College, London | The role of nerve-muscle interaction in motorneurone functional development |
| Prof. G. Vrobova | Anatomy and Embryology, University College, London | Restoration of muscle function by regenerated embryonic motorneurones |

The Medical Research Council also supports a range of basic research which may be of relevance to motor neurone disease. In addition, university departments and medical schools support research from block grants from the Universities Funding Council, some of which may also be of relevance.

WALES

Anthrax

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the measures that he has taken since April, together with dates of implementation, to protect people from infection from anthrax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Restrictions made under the Anthrax Order 1938 prohibiting the movement of animals and carcases to and from the premises, and of other potentially infected materials from the premises, were imposed by the local authority.

The community health physician, Wrexham, was notified on 19 April 1989. Where pigs had been licensed to be moved they had been inspected by a veterinary officer prior to leaving the farm; by a veterinary officer at the point of slaughter; and again by a qualified meat inspector after slaughter. Animals dying from anthrax were cremated and their surroundings cleansed and disinfected. Clwyd county council made appropriate arrangements to disinfect and dispose of the slurry.

Opera (Llandudno)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when officers of his Department last met representatives of local authorities in Gwynedd concerning the establishment of an opera venue at Llandudno; and what is the latest position with regard to this project.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Welsh Office officials met representatives of Aberconwy borough council and Gwynedd county council on 21 June. An application for the scheme to be considered as a project of regional or national importance has since been received from Aberconwy borough council and is being considered.

Local Authority Finance

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the figures by which an individual would be protected by the safety net against the full effects of the poll tax in each local authority area in Wales, showing against each the equivalent figure based on his written answer on 12 June, Official Report, columns 304-6;

(2) whether, further to his written answer on 12 June, Official Report, columns 304-6, he will list the community charge he estimates will apply to each local authority area in Wales (a) without safety net and (b) with safety net.

Mr. Peter Walker: No. The review of standard spending assessments has yet to be completed and the precise details of the safety net have yet to be settled. I agree with the Welsh local authority associations that it would be misleading to produce illustrative figures until consultation on these matters has been concluded.

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) whether his Department has submitted to the European Commission any plan, project or programme in respect of aid from the European regional development fund for any project within the Cardiff bay development corporation area;

(2) whether his Department has conducted any negotiations with the European Commission or others on any plan, project or programme in respect of aid from the European regional development fund for any project within the Cardiff bay development corporation area.

Mr. Peter Walker: Projects in the Cardiff bay area have been submitted individually for ERDF assistance in the past. Developments in the Cardiff bay area are included in a proposal for an integrated development operation for industrial south Wales submitted to the European Commission in May last year. A linked reconversion plan for industrial south Wales, submitted to the European Commission earlier this year also referred to developments in Cardiff bay. Discussions are currently under way between officials of my Department and of the European Commission.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the properties and facilities and their cash values of the Welsh Development Agency and facilities that have been sold in each of the years since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker [holding answer 5 July 1989]: Details of industrial property sales in 1987-88 and 1988-89 are shown in the tables. Similar information for other years since 1979 is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRANSPORT

DRIVE Project

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British organisations are involved in the European Community DRIVE project.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: British organisations are playing a major part in the DRIVE initiative and are involved in more than two thirds of the contracts let so far.

Up to now, some 60 DRIVE contracts have been awarded: 27 British organisations are involved in 42 of them and are taking the lead in 19. Bearing in mind the EC has had 189 DRIVE proposals, this is an impressive hit rate and illustrates the depth of technology available in Britain.

The Government's transport and road research laboratory has been awarded 12 contracts and is lead contractor in one. The local value of these contracts is £12·7 million, of which the TRRL share is £870,000. Work on most of these projects has started and will take two or three years.

With a budget of 50 million ecu (£32 million), DRIVE aims to create an integrated pan-European road transport environment, mainly using electronic systems to convey information to drivers and for controlling traffic.

Motor Cyclists

Mr. David Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the latest statistics he has available on the death rate of motor cyclists in relation to the overall population in (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) the United States of America, (iii) France, (iv) the Federal Republic of Germany and (v) Japan; and what were the comparable figures 10 years ago.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information is as follows:

| | 1977 | 1987 |
|---|---|---|
| United Kingdom | 21·6 | 13·0 |
| USA | 19·3 | 18·6 |
| France | 53·0 | 29·1 |
| FRG | 35·0 | 17·8 |
| Japan | 16·7 | 25·5 |

The figures are published in the transport statistics report entitled "International comparisons of transport statistics; Part 2". They do not give an indication of the size of the motor cycle population in each country. The trend in the United Kingdom towards reduced casualties among motor cyclists is a heartening one.

Driver Testing and Training

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the driver testing and training business plan for 1989-90.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Copies of the driver testing and training division's 1989-90 business plan have been placed in the Library.

Road Safety

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will report on progress in implementing the recommendations of the interdepartmental review on road safety; and if he will indicate his future priorities for work on reducing road casualties.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Good progress has been made in implementing the recommendations of the road safety review. I have placed a full progress report in the Library of the House. This includes a summary of the areas of work on which we shall be concentrating for the next 18 months. Casualty figures suggest that we are making reasonable progress towards the target of reducing casualties by one third by the year 2000. It is also clear that there is no room for complacency and that we shall have to step up our efforts even more in the future.

Drink-driving

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many drivers involved in accidents were found to have been drinking over the limit in 1988; how this number has changed over the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Drivers involved in accidents who are not seriously injured may be breath-tested following the accident. In 1988, it is estimated that 75,000 drivers were so tested, of whom nearly 14 per cent., or just over 10,000, failed. In addition, coroners' reports on drivers who die in road accidents show that about 20 per cent. in 1988, or about 400, had a blood alcohol content above the legal limit.

The following tables show (a) the numbers tested following injury accidents each year since 1979 and the numbers failing; and (b) the percentages of drivers killed in accidents who had a high blood alcohol content.

Table A
Drivers and riders in accidents
Numbers breath tested, and failing

| | Numbers tested | Numbers failing |
|---|---|---|
| 1979 | 41,000 | 14,100 |
| 1980 | 41,600 | 13,400 |
| 1981 | 41,000 | 12,300 |
| 1982 | 43,300 | 13,500 |
| 1983 | 42,300 | 12,400 |
| 1984 | 43,500 | 12,600 |
| 1985 | 44,700 | 12,600 |
| 1986 | 61,200 | 11,900 |
| 1987 | 65,000 | 11,000 |
| [1] 1988 | 75,000 | 10,200 |

Table B
Percentage of drivers or riders killed in road accidents, whose blood alcohol level is above the legal limit

| | Killed | Per cent. over limit |
|---|---|---|
| 1979 | 2,700 | 32 |
| 1980 | 2,500 | 31 |
| 1981 | 2,500 | 30 |
| 1982 | 2,500 | 33 |
| 1983 | 2,200 | 28 |
| 1984 | 2,200 | 26 |
| 1985 | 2,100 | 26 |
| 1986 | 2,200 | 24 |
| 1987 | 2,100 | 23 |
| [1] 1988 | 2,100 | 21 |

[1] Provisional.

As the figures show, both the numbers of drivers failing the breath test, and the proportion killed who have a high blood alcohol content have been falling. This indicates a real fall in the amount of drinking and driving that occurs, although the levels are still too high.

We must continue our efforts to change public attitudes so as to accelerate this fall in drink-drive levels, and so reduce the number of accidents on our roads.

Passenger Aircraft

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list in the Official Report the numbers of passenger aircraft, in service with United Kingdom operators, which exceed 75 per cent. of their economic design life objectives according to model type and as defined by (a) total number of flights, (b) total number of flying hours and (c) age; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report the numbers of passenger aircraft in service with United Kingdom operators, by airplane model type, showing how many of each model type have exceeded their economic design life objectives in terms of (a) total number of flights or (b) total number of flying hours or (c) age; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: These data are not held by the Department though some may be available to the Civil Aviation Authority, which has the statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of civil aviation.

I shall ask the chairman of the authority to respond direct to the hon. Member.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many licences for passenger aircraft were issued to United Kingdom operators by his Department under arrangements known as wet leasing; if he will list, according to each model type, the numbers of such aircraft which have (a) exceeded their economical design life objectives in terms of either (i) total number of flights, (ii) total number of flying hours and (iii) age, or (b) reached 75 per cent. or more of their economic design life objectives in terms of either (i) total number of flights, (ii) total number of flying hours and (iii) age; if he is satisfied with the safety standards of aircraft which are wet leased; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In 1988, the Department approved 19 wet leases of foreign registered passenger aircraft by United Kingdom airlines. A breakdown of the types of aircraft is as follows:-

| Type | Number |
|---|---|
| BAC 1-11 (500) | 1 |
| B727-100 | 1 |
| B727-200 | 4 |
| B737-200 | 5 |
| B737-300 | 4 |
| Convair CV-580 | 3 |

| Type | Number |
|---|---|
| Total | 19 |

The other statistics requested in relation to these aircraft are not kept.

Dartford Crossing

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects construction of the third Dartford crossing to be completed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Good progress continues to be made on the new bridge. It is expected to be open early in 1991.

Vessels

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in the Official Report the names, number of fatalities and port of registration of United Kingdom-registered cargo vessels and passenger ferries lost in each of the past five years; if each loss was the subject of an inquiry; how many masters of such vessels were [illegible] responsible; what was the range of sanctions imposed upon them; and to which regulations do these penalties refer.

Mr. Portillo: The names and port of registry of cargo vessels and passenger ferries registered in the United Kingdom lost in the five years 1984-88 are listed, with the number of fatalities. Inquiries were carried out by the Department of Transport in all cases. The remaining information requested is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate expense.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow on 11 July, Official Report, columns 458-59 he will indicate in how many of the subsequent inquiries into such losses the master was held responsible for the loss of his vessel; what were the penalties imposed upon those deemed to be offenders; and under which regulations those sanctions were imposed.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be compiled at disproportionate expense.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow on 11 July, Official Report, columns 458-59, he will indicate how many of these losses of fishing-vessels were subjects of inquiry; how many were lost as a direct result of collisions with submarines; and, of those which foundered following such collisions, how many were fishing at the time with (a) demersal gear and (b) pelagic gear.

Mr. Portillo: The Department of Transport made inquiries into the large majority of the losses, including all where fatalities occurred. None of the vessels was lost so far as is known as a direct result of collision with a submarine.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow on 11 July, Official Report, columns 458-59, he will indicate the number of inquiries where no judgment or assessment was made concerning the reason or reasons for the loss of a fishing vessel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: In all cases where an inquiry is carried out, an attempt is made to assess the possible causes of the accident. A full list of all cases with information as to the extent to which cause remains uncertain could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Manchester Airport (Far East Flights)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many additional international flights to and from the far east at Manchester airport have been approved this year; which airlines and destinations are involved; and if he will list all similar applications still to be considered.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: So far this year, arrangements have been made allowing new scheduled services from Manchester to be operated to Malaysia and to Hong Kong, and for additional services to Singapore. United Kingdom airlines can seek licences for these routes from the CAA (at present, only British Airways has one, from Manchester to Hong Kong). Airlines at present designated by the authorities at the other ends of the routes are MAS, Cathay Pacific, Air Hong Kong and SIA. It is for each of these airlines to decide whether or not to take advantage of the opportunities. Apart from a licence application by Virgin Atlantic for services between Manchester and Singapore under consideration by the CAA, there are no outstanding requests for services between Manchester and the far east.

Airtours and Orion

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends taking about the time-keeping and maintenance performance recently of the Airtours company and Orion airlines.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: It is the United States Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) that is responsible for ensuring that all United States carriers, including Orion Air, operate their aircraft in accordance with safety and airworthiness standards set by the FAA pursuant to their obligations under the Chicago convention. Our Civil Aviation Authority has already drawn the FAA's attention to the recurring maintenance difficulties experienced on Orion Air's services to and from Manchester.

Fuel Efficiency

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether there are any plans to introduce legislation to require vehicle manufacturers to achieve fuel efficiency targets for cars and light vans.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 24 July 1989]: Following the June Environment Council, the European Commission is committed to looking for ways of reducing the emissions from vehicles of carbon dioxide, the principal "greenhouse" gas. These emissions are directly related to fuel efficiency. It is unclear how the Commission intends to fulfil this commitment. We expect it will consult member states at an early stage to explore what might be technically, economically and legally feasible.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent in respect of each A2-M2 road maintenance programme or improvement programme in each of the last 10 years; and if he will list the amounts by programme.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The information readily available is:

Radioactive Material

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many journeys were made in 1988 of (a) uranium and (b) other nuclear or radioactive material, which were transported through the Doncaster metropolitan borough council area by (i) rail and (ii) road to Sellafield or other destinations; and what reviews are being carried out on the frequency of these cargo shipments.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department does not collect data of the kind requested.

The movement of all radioactive materials must be made in compliance with national and international regulations which require safety for both normal and accident conditions to be built in to the container used for transport.

Safety does not depend on the choice of route used, which is a matter for the carrier.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This question could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Eighty per cent. of DTp staff are located outside London and the Department is reviewing the possibilities for further relocation.

A decision to relocate the headquarters of the driver testing and training division to Nottingham in mid-1990 was announced earlier this year; a review of TRRL at Crowthorne concluded against relocation; a review of marine HQ posts is nearing completion; and a review of parts of the highways command has recently started.

A1

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the decision was made to undertake the new road works south of Wetherby on the A1.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The carriageway repair work on the A1 at Bramham to the south of Wetherby was planned in February. The works are 0·5 miles long and are expected to be completed by 8 August.

We are conscious of the need to plan and phase road works and try to keep those on the A1 to a minimum.

To aid traffic flow, the lane restrictions which were in force on the A1 at Dishforth have been suspended until early September.

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of the A1 north of Doncaster to Dishforth are presently under repair.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: One half of one mile.

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to the nearest 1,000, how many cones are presently deployed on the A1 between Doncaster and Dishforth.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are approximately 6,000 cones currently in use on the A1(M) Doncaster bypass. Between Doncaster and Dishforth, there are approximately 750 cones deployed for day-time lane closures. A further 750 cones are used for work which is being carried out at night to minimise traffic delays.

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the distances between highways works signs on the A1 between the M18 junction and the A19 both north and south.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The works on the A1(M) Doncaster bypass and those at Bramham to the south of Wetherby are 25 miles apart. The works at Bramham are 22 miles from those at Dishforth.

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether any departmental Ministers have travelled on the A1/M1 in Yorkshire during the past six months.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. I drove up and down twice last month.

Motorway HGV Checks

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of counties in which major check[illegible] been carried out on the motorways in the last 12 months, to discover how many heavy goods vehicles were unfit for use; and whether he will hold talks with the Association of Chief Police Officers on the effectiveness and frequency of exercises such as that carried out by Staffordshire county constabulary.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In the 12 months to the end of June 1989, major vehicle checks were carried out in 23 counties; 470 goods vehicles were prohibited from further movement for offences including overloading, mechanical defects and breach of the drivers hours rules.

The Department regularly holds liaison meetings with the Home Office and representatives of the Association of Chief Police Officers at which enforcement procedures and other matters are discussed. The vehicle checks carried out by Staffordshire police are effective both in enforcing the law and increasing inter-agency co-operation. The Department's enforcement staff will continue to assist the police in Staffordshire and elsewhere in holding checks on motorways.

Driving Test

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will include a test of literacy in the driving test procedure before a person is licensed to drive a motor vehicle.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are no plans to do so. There is no known correlation between literacy and road safety.

It is not difficult to envisage someone functionally illiterate driving better than a doctor of philosophy (and vice versa).

Mersey Rail

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide additional resources to improve services on the Mersey Rail northern line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: No additional resources are required. I understand that once recent traincrew recruits have been trained the problem of cancellations should be much reduced.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid (Annual Review)

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much it cost to publish the "Annual Review of British Overseas Aid" in 1987.

Mr. Chris Patten: Five thousand copies of "British Overseas Aid 1986" were produced in 1987 at a unit cost of £7·87.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to the replies to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), 19 June, Official Report, columns 32-33, he will seek from the Governments of the People's Republic of China, Argentina, Republic of South Africa and India the terms on which each is prepared to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The non-proliferation treaty is open for signature to all states, and we take every suitable opportunity to encourage non-parties to join.

Civil Service (Relocation)

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Waldegrave: As a result of the FCO review, about 250 diplomatic wing jobs have been identified for possible relocation to the FCO estate at Hanslope Park near Milton Keynes, subject to planning permission and financial provision for the necessary development of that estate.

The aid wing has carried out two major relocation exercises in recent years and when the current move to Chatham is complete nearly 60 per cent. of ODA staff will be located outside London. Opportunities for further relocation are kept continuously under review.

Armament Sales (Israel)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total value of armament sales to Israel from Britain between 1980 and 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: It has been the practice of successive Administrations not to give details of arms sales to particular countries.

Human Rights (Israel)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last made representations to the Israeli Government concerning human rights in Israel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have not taken up the question of human rights in Israel proper but have made repeated representations to the Israelis about human rights in the occupied territories.

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received any recent representations about pilot or permanent workplace creches and similar incentives further to encourage the return to employment of women in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: A survey to assess likely demand for a diplomatic and aid wing child care facility was recently carried out prior to a feasibility study completed in May this year. The results of this feasibility study are now being considered.

Both the diplomatic and aid wings also contributed to the setting up fund for a 1989 Westminster holiday play scheme, and children of school age of employees in both wings registered to take part. Separate play schemes are being planned at outer London aid wing locations.

A number of measures have been introduced in both the diplomatic and aid wings in recent years, designed to further the FCO equal opportunities policy—for instance, the introduction of flexible working hours, and the extension of special unpaid leave arrangements (for up to a total of five years) to enable an officer to meet domestic responsibilities.

Hong Kong

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had, and what action is being taken, in secondary education in Hong Kong to lay the foundations for informed participation of youth in a democratic elective system in Hong Kong.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are consulting the Government of Hong Kong. I will give the hon. Member a full reply as soon as possible.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when Mr. Irfan Abdul Alikazi, whose date of birth is 13 October 1969, first applied to the post in Bombay to enter the United Kingdom; on what dates he has been interviewed at the post; and when a decision is to be taken on his application;

(2) when Mr. Mohd Yasin, who was born in 1962 and whose reference is SN 81140, first applied to the post in Islamabad to enter the United Kingdom; and when a decision is going to be taken on his application.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to the reply, 14 July 1989, c. 673]: In accordance with the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, issued to Members on 14 December 1988, the questions have been referred to the correspondence unit of the migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The hon. Member will receive a reply from the unit in due course.

PRIME MINISTER

Prevention of Terrorism Act

Q6. Mr. Nelson: To ask the Prime Minister whether she has received any recent representations requesting the repeal of the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

The Prime Minister: No. The Prevention of Terrorism Act is one expression of our resolve to defeat the evil of terrorism, and there is no question of a repeal.

Italy

Q15. Sir Hugh Rossi: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding the United Kingdom's relations with Italy.

The Prime Minister: No.

Fire Service

Q29. Mr. Marland: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding the fire service.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations about fire service matters. We all owe a considerable debt to individual firefighters for their courageous service to the community. As with other public services, the Government have a responsibility to ensure that the fire service is run in the most efficient way possible and that it gives the best value for money to the public.

Pakistan (Prime Minister)

Q36. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement following her recent meeting with the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

The Prime Minister: I had a very friendly and useful discussion with Prime Minister Bhutto on 7 July about a number of subjects, including Britain's relations with Pakistan, which are excellent, the situation in Afghanistan and other regional issues. I also welcomed the prospect of Pakistan's return to the Commonwealth.

Securities and Investments Board

Q60. Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding the performance of the Securities and Investments Board.

The Prime Minister: While I receive from time to time representations about various aspects of the financial services regulatory system, only one received in recent months would fall into the category referred to by my hon. Friend.

Maritime Affairs

Q63. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to rationalise the administration of maritime affairs into one Ministry.

The Prime Minister: No. There is a maritime aspect to the work of several Government Departments which could not sensibly be separated from their other responsibilities.

Environmental Pollution

Q65. Mr. Richard Page: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding environmental pollution.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations. The Government are committed to the protection of the environment. Government and industry are already investing £2 billion to reduce air pollution, £1·3 billion in the water industry, and £100 million a year on schemes to improve the quality of coastal bathing waters. This investment will improve the quality of the environment for generations to come. We also intend to bring forward legislation to strengthen the powers available to control pollution at source.

Methodist Conference

Q71. Mr. Archer: To ask the Prime Minister what reply she has sent to the letter of 1 July from the President of the Methodist Conference.

The Prime Minister: It is not my usual practice to publish exchanges of this kind.

EEC

Q82. Mr. Cash: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding the EEC.

The Prime Minister: Yes, I receive regular representations on EC matters.

National Health Service

Q90. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has had on the proposed reforms for the National Health Service.

Q111. Mr. Malins: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding the National Health Service.

The Prime Minister: I understand that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health has received some 8,500 representations on the White Paper; many correspondents give strong support for its objectives and endorse its proposals.

Structural Fund Policy

Q94. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding structural fund policy in the European Economic Community.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friends have received representations from local authorities and others about the management of the funds under the revised arrangements.

Transport Policy

Q104. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding transport policy.

The Prime Minister: I regularly receive representations on a wide range of issues concerning transport policy. The programme of investment in railways is now running at the highest level since the transfer from steam to diesel 30 years ago. There is already a major programme of road building which the Government are committed to increasing still further.

Crime

Q107. Mr. John Browne: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding the level of crime.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of such representations. The recent fall in the overall level of crime which is disclosed in the statistics for recorded offences in the year ending 31 March 1989 is encouraging.

Maesglas, Newport

Q108. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to visit the Maesglas area of Newport, Gwent.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

British Rail

Q131. Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding British Rail.

The Prime Minister: Yes, especially recently when a number of people have written to me about the great inconvenience caused to the travelling public by the rail strikes. Passengers and freight business will suffer unless the railways give a reliable service.

Commonwealth

Q150. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations relating to the Commonwealth.

The Prime Minister: I regularly receive representations relating to the Commonwealth from hon. Members as well as from members of the public. I am greatly looking forward to attending this year's Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting, an event which is always of great importance to this Government.

NATO

Q194. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding NATO.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations relating to NATO, most of them strongly supportive of the continuing, vitally important role of NATO in sustaining peace and security.

Agriculture Policy

Q195. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding agricultural policy.

The Prime Minister: The Government frequently received representations about agricultural policy.

At the Royal Show earlier this month I was pleased to pay tribute to the enormous contribution the agriculture industry and the thousands of individual farmers make to our national life.

Our policy is to provide a framework within which this industry can thrive. We shall continue to negotiate for a more market-orientated common agricultural policy, building on the major reforms agreed at the February 1988 European Council. Our agricultural industry is well placed to benefit from the opportunities for fair competition that the EC's single internal market will bring.

Steel Industry

Q209. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on progress made in rationalising the steel industry since 1979.

The Prime Minister: During the period since 1979 the Government promoted the Phoenix joint ventures involving private sector steel companies and the (then nationalised) British Steel Corporation and also a private sector steel scheme. These initiatives have now ceased but they reduced product overlap between the private and public sectors and contributed towards rationalisation within the industry as a whole. British Steel itself was then returned to the private sector in December 1988 and recently announced record profits of £593 million compared with substantial losses while nationalised. Productivity in the United Kingdom steel industry rose by 151 per cent. between 1979 and 1988.

Mr. Graham Gaskin

Mr. Alton: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill, of 17 July, Official Report, column 22, whether she will now take steps to set up an independent procedure to consider whether Mr. Graham Gaskin's files should be released to him; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As my hon. and learned Friend the Minister for Health said in his written answer to the hon. Member on 18 July, a careful look is being taken in the light of the court's judgment in this case at the present general arrangements for social services clients to have access to their files to see whether any changes to those arrangements are needed.

The court awarded Mr. Gaskin £5,000 compensation and that sum, along with the court's award for legal fees and expenses, is being paid to him.

Engagements

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 25 July.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 25 July.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 25 July.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 25 July.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had a number of meetings including one with General Yazov, the Soviet Defence Minister, on his first visit to the United Kingdom. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today and will be attending a special garden party to celebrate 150 years of public education. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Greenhouse Gases

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, further to his answer of 27 June, Official Report, column 441, he will give the greenhouse gas equivalents for carbon dioxide, methane and nitrous oxide; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have been asked to reply.

Molecule for molecule, the greenhouse warming effect of methane is approximately 27 times that of carbon dioxide and 165 times that of nitrous oxide. Taking account of concentrations in the atmosphere, their current contribution to the greenhouse effect is estimated to be 55 per cent. (carbon dioxide), 14 per cent. (methane) and 8 per cent. (nitrous oxide). The remaining fraction is primarily due to chlorofluorocarbons.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Transfers

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those prisoners who were refused transfers to prisons in Northern Ireland in each of the past seven years indicating the grounds for the refusals.

Mr. Hurd: The records available indicate that the numbers of requests from inmates in England and Wales for permanent transfer to Northern Ireland which were refused were as follows:

Information on the grounds for refusal in individual cases is not available, but all decisions were taken in accordance with the publicly stated policy on transfers which was in force at the relevant time. It would not be right to give the names of the inmates involved, many of whom will by now have been released.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement indicating the various grounds on which prisoners were transferred to Northern Ireland in each of the past seven years.

Mr. Hurd: Prisoners may be transferred from England and Wales to Northern Ireland if they are required to face trial there, if their presence there is necessary in the interests of justice, or if they apply for temporary or permanent transfer. Applications for permanent transfer have been granted where the inmate meets the criteria for transfer, as agreed between the Home Office and the Northern Ireland Office, in force at the relevant time, or where there are exceptional compassionate circumstances. The criteria for transfer now in force were announced in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, North (Mr. Burt) on 23 June at column 263.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a list of the names of all prisoners transferred to prisons in Northern Ireland in each of the past seven years, indicating the offences for which they were convicted, the prisons from which they were transferred, their sentences and the time served prior to transfer.

Mr. Hurd: It would not be right to give the names of the inmates concerned, many of whom will now have been released. Information on the periods served by the inmates before transfer is not readily available. The remaining information, which relates only to inmates transferred from England and Wales to Northern Ireland to serve the remainder of their sentences, is as follows:

1982

No transfers.

1983

1. Robbery; HMP Liverpool; five years.
2. Robbery; HMP Liverpool; five years.
3. Robbery; HMP Lancaster; 14½ years.

1984

1. Theft, grievous bodily harm; HMP Durham three years.

1985

1. Robbery; HMP Hull; six years.
2. Sending explosive substances, causing explosions; HMP Blunderston; life.
3. Manslaughter; HMP Wakefield; life.
4. Importing controlled drugs; HMP Wandsworth; three years.

1986

1. Robbery; HMP Wandsworth; six years.
2. Theft, robbery; HMP Long Lartin; eight years.

1987

1. Robbery; HMP Long Lartin; 10 years.
2. Importing controlled drugs; HMP Albany; 14 years.
3. Murder; HMP Wormwood Scrubs; life.

1988

1. Assault with intent to rob, unlawful handling, possessing imitation firearm, deception; HMP Frankland; five years.
2. Wounding; HMP Channings Wood; four years.
3. Robbery; HMP Haverigg; seven years.
4. Attempted robbery; HMP Frankland; four and a half years.
5. Robbery; HMP Durham; three years.

Fire Services

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many fire appliances were in operation (a) throughout the United Kingdom and (b) in Wales as at 1 January 1980 and for each succeeding year;

(2) how many full-time firemen were employed (a) throughout the United Kingdom and (b) in Wales as at 1 January 1980 and for each succeeding year;

(3) how many fully manned fire stations were in operation as at 1 January 1980 and for each succeeding year (a) throughout the United Kingdom and (b) in Wales.

Mr. John Patten: I will write to the hon. Member regarding the available information in respect of England and Wales.

Questions relating to the fire service in other parts of the United Kingdom are the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Immigration

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the question from the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East, 26 June, column 323, why he decided not to exercise his discretion in favour of the application for settlement of Mr. Abbas Karbassian.

Mr. Renton: As explained in the reply of 5 November 1987, at column 833, to the question from the hon. Member for Norwood (Mr. Fraser), a case in which continuous residence exceeds 10 years will be considered on its merits for the grant of indefinite leave to remain. Mr. Karbassian came to the United Kingdom on 30 April 1979 and was subsequently granted permission to remain until August 1987—in the first instance as a student and later on the basis of his marriage to a British citizen. An application for settlement (on the grounds of marriage) was refused on 1 August 1988 because the couple had separated. Mr. Karbassian lodged an appeal against this decision on 10 August 1988.

Mr. Karbassian is permitted, under section 14(1) of the Immigration Act 1971, to remain here pending the outcome of his appeal against the decision of 1 August 1988. However, time spent in the United Kingdom while an appeal is outstanding is not considered acceptable residence for the purpose of the discretionary grant of indefinite leave to remain under the long residence concession unless that appeal is subsequently successful.

Forensic Pathology

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will publish the report of the working party on forensic pathology; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The report of the working party on forensic pathology is published today; a copy is in the Library. Copies have been sent to the Association of Chief Police Officers, the British Medical Association, the Royal College of Pathologists, the local authority associations and others concerned with an invitation to let my Department have their views on it by the end of October. My intention is to consider the report and any representations received as soon as practicable thereafter.

Risley Remand Centre

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received the report of the inquiry into the disturbance at Risley remand centre from 30 April to 3 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I have now received the report of the inquiry conducted by Mr. Dunbar, the director of the south west region of the prison department. A summary of the report, including the list of recommendations resulting from the inquiry, has been placed in the Library. I informed the House on 4 May at columns 374-5 of the nature and effects of the disturbances on male wings at Risley.

The disturbance was one of the most serious and complex suffered by the prison service in recent years. Throughout there were violent attacks by prisoners upon the fabric of the centre and on the staff endeavouring to contain them. I pay tribute to the Governor and staff for their bravery and determination in resisting the extreme violence they faced and for bringing the disturbance to a conclusion as quickly as they did without serious injury to staff or prisoners. In doing so they prevented the rioters from totally destroying the establishment, which was their clear intention.

Mr. Dunbar's inquiry led him to conclude that Risley should be closed at the earliest possible moment. I accept that recommendation so far as male remand prisoners are concerned. They amounted to 468 inmates out of a total of 541 males at the time of the disturbance, and the disturbance was confined to them. After careful thought, and despite the practical difficulties of making a change, I do not believe it would be sensible to hold male remand prisoners at Risley for longer than we must. I have accordingly decided to work towards the end of Risley's remand function for males by the summer of next year, when refurbished accommodation will be available. Risley will then take only sentenced prisoners on the male side. In addition, the women's wing, which has not been the subject of criticism—indeed, it was commented upon favourably by Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons —and which has a valuable contribution to make in the female prison estate, will remain.

Work had already begun before the disturbance on the phased demolition and replacement of the prison. This will take some years and in the interim, B and C wings are being completely refurbished and strengthened to make them secure against this sort of attack. The male population of Risley will be limited to about 320 until new living blocks become available.

All the other recommendations have wider application in the prison service and I welcome them. Some—for example, the strengthening of cell doors—are statements of policy on which work is already in hand. Mr. Dunbar's recommendations on contingency planning will be taken fully into account in a major review which has been under way for some time and which is nearing completion. Other recommendations on physical resources, on protective clothing and equipment and on intervention plans are also accepted and will be taken on board. I also accept in principle the recommendations that Mr. Dunbar makes on personnel and regime matters.

The findings of the report concerning medical matters are most disturbing. The director designate of prison medical services and her staff have been to Risley and immediate steps have been taken to clean thoroughly the areas concerned and to remove the health hazards to which Mr. Dunbar has drawn attention. I accept all the particular recommendations in his report and have asked the director of prison medical services to explore further how these serious shortcomings came about and to take steps to ensure that they do not happen again, either at Risley or elsewhere in the prison system.

Mr. Dunbar makes a number of recommendations concerning the treatment of, and facilities for, remand prisoners. I accept most of them as desirable but they will have to compete for resources with other equally desirable aims in the prison service. I am not convinced that it is necessary for separate rules to be drawn up for remand prisoners, since distinctions between the unconvicted and the convicted can be satisfactorily reflected within a unified set of rules but I am willing to look at this again. I do not rule out reduction of censorship and the provision of telephones for remand prisoners but the security implications in respect of certain prisoners require, and will receive, careful consideration. Research on categorising all remand prisoners is already under way.

Of the remaining recommendations, those which are matters for the police will be drawn to their attention and I accept the others.

I have indicated the action being taken on all the recommendations which are of more general application. In addition, an action plan has been drawn up specifically for the purpose of rectifying the failings at Risley identified in Mr. Dunbar's report and making the necessary preparations for Risley's change of function. This will be the direct responsibility of the deputy director general of the prison service, who will be assisted by a small working group and will report regularly to me on progress.

The disturbance at Risley arose out of a long history of difficulties caused principally by the inadequacy of the buildings and the nature of the prisoners housed in them. It interrupted the considerable progress towards improving the regime for prisoners which the governor and staff had made following the report of Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons. I am sure that with all the changes I have outlined and, in particular, with confidence established in the renovated buildings, the governor and his staff will be able to resume their positive work to remedy the grave deficiencies identified in the report.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Hurd: The available figures relate to and from Ministers and to and from the secretary to the immigration and nationality board, the great majority of which represented correspondence with hon. Members, and are as follows:

| | January 1989 | 22 November 1988 —1 July 1989 |
|---|---|---|
| Received from hon. Members | 2,436 | 17,690 |
| Sent to hon. Members | 2,295 | 15,584 |

Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Hurd: A report by consultants on the feasibility of relocation of the immigration and nationality department has been received and is under consideration. A review of the organisation and location of the prison service above establishment level is nearing completion. The scope for relocation of parts of the police department science and technology group and of the Home Office accounts branch is also under review.

Welford Road Prison, Leicester

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were transferred to other prisons in the United Kingdom from Welford Road prison, Leicester, before 1 April, and the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The information requested is given in the table:

Emergency Calls

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the proportion of screened-out emergency calls when the caller is informed that no further action is to be taken immediately or at a future time;

(2) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to what proportion of emergency calls in the Leyton constituency are screened out.

Mr. Hurd: The police respond to all emergency calls. A decision on whether to screen out any crime is taken only after a thorough initial investigation.

Probation Service

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is now able to report the Government's response to the Audit Commission's recommendations on value for money in the probation service.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Bermingham) on 17 April at column 24.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to promote co-operation between the probation service and other agencies in the criminal justice system, as recommended by the Audit Commission in its recent report on the probation service.

Mr. John Patten: We have taken and are taking a number of steps to promote co-operation between the probation service and other agencies in the criminal justice system. The paper "Tackling Offending: An Action Plan" was sent to chief probation officers, justices' clerks, circuit administrators, chief crown prosecutors, chief officers of police, the Association of Chief Police Officers and a variety of other agencies and organisations working in the criminal justice field. That paper emphasised that although the probation service has a key role in achieving the aims of part II of the Green Paper, "Punishment, Custody and the Community", it cannot work alone and that other agencies must be involved; the Home Office has provided funds for a number of seminars on non-custodial penalties, organised by the NACRO, which have included amongst the participants magistrates, justices' clerks, members of probation services and members of police forces; a number of Home Office circulars have encouraged co-operation between the criminal justice services including the probation service; and Ministers and officials also take the opportunity in speeches and meetings to encourage such co-operation.

Prisons (Security Status)

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his proposals to change the top security status for certain gaols by 1992 and as the consultation processes which will be involved.

Mr. Hurd: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham) on 12 April 1989 at columns 544-5. This draws attention to the statement issued by the deputy director general of the prison service (a copy of which is in the Library) which includes details of the plans for the future shape and size of the prison dispersal system.

A copy of the statement has been sent for information to governors and to chairmen of boards of visitors of prisons normally holding inmates in the highest security category—category A—and copies have also been supplied to the trade unions.

Consultation with the staff interests concerned at national and local level will take place as appropriate as we work towards effecting the changes planned to take place in the 1990s at the establishments involved.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the eventual total job losses at Her Majesty's prison, Gartree, due to the change from category A by 1992.

Mr. Hurd: It is too early to be certain how many staff will be needed when the prison changes its function but the total staff in post figure could fall by more than 100. No redundancies are anticipated as a result of the change at Gartree. The aim is to absorb surplus staff by redeployment and natural wastage.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what prior consultation he had with local hon. Members with a constituency interest before announcing his decision relating to changes of category at Her Majesty's prison, Gartree.

Mr. Hurd: None. The effect of the change planned for Gartree prison is that from the early 1990s the 50 or so category A prisoners will be replaced by inmates of a lower security category.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list the legislation that applies penalties for unauthorised use, collection or disclosure of personal information from Government computers.

Mr. Renton: So far as I am aware, the only legislation that applies such penalties specifically in relation to computers is the Data Protection Act 1984. Other legislation such as the Official Secrets Acts deals with particular categories of information whether or not held on computers.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list the recommendations made by (a) the Younger committee into privacy and (b) the Law Commission's report into breach of confidence which Her Majesty's Government have supported; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Many of the recommendations of the Younger committee were directed to organisations outside Government. Proposals addressed to Government were implemented by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 and the Data Protection Act 1984. In addition the Broadcasting Complaints Commission was established under the Broadcasting Act 1981; and the law on breach of confidence was referred to the Law Commission.

The Law Commission's report on breach of confidence, which is the responsibility of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor, amounts essentially to a recommendation for a restatement of the common law and the Government do not propose to give its implementation high priority at present.

Drug Addicts (Suicides)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug addicts have committed suicide in prisons and remand centres in each of the last five years; in which prisons and remand centres the suicides occurred; to what the addicts were addicted; what treatment they were receiving; how many were in single cells; and how many were (a) male and (b) female.

Mr. Hurd [holding answer 13 July 1989]: Information is readily available only from 1 January 1987; four inmates on whom verdicts of suicide have been returned since that date are known to have been addicted to drugs. The details requested are as follows:

(1) 1987; HMRC Risley; heroin; treated with antidepressant drugs; single cell; female
(2) 1987; HMP Canterbury; valium; treated with reduced doses of the drug of addiction and largactil; shared cell; male
(3) 1988; HMRC Risley; heroin; treated with heminevrin as a sedative; single cell; male
(4) 1988; HMP Lincoln; diconal tablets; treated with antidepressants; single cell; male

Rehabilitation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what specialist facilities exist; and what is the total amount invested by his Department for the rehabilitation of perpetrators of sexual abuse of children for each of the years for which figures are available.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 11 July 1989]: Perpetrators of sexual abuse against children, who receive a prison sentence, are normally identified early in the prison reception process as requiring psychiatric assessment. Where the diagnosis suggests that the offender's behaviour was the result of an underlying mental illness, specific treatment is provided for that illness. If the behaviour was secondary to an aspect of personality disorder, the inmate might be offered psychotherapy, group therapy, behaviour therapy or a combination of these. But the effectiveness of such treatment depends critically on the motivation of the offenders and on their willingness to participate. Those judged to be mentally disordered receive treatment in special and other types of hospitals. Those under the supervision of the probation service will have available to them a variety of probation and multi-agency facilities. Some probation services have developed or are developing specialist skills in the supervision of sex offenders. The objective of probation service work with offenders, including sex offenders, is to reduce their offending behaviour by making them face up to the consequences of that behaviour, and by helping them to tackle the problems underlying it. No separate figures are kept of resources devoted by prison service establishments or by area probation services to work with those found guilty of sexual offences against children.

Right to Silence

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reached any conclusions on the abolition of the right of silence for accused persons interviewed in police stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make an announcement on the Government's review of the right to silence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd [holding answers 15 June 1989 and 7 July 1989 respectively]: I have received the report and am considering its recommendations. I have arranged for it to be published today. A copy will be placed in the Library.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Written Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council how the level at which it is decided that a parliamentary written question could be answered only at disproportionate cost is evaluated.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply. The disproportionate cost level is based on an interdepartmental survey of the cost of answering parliamentary questions and is set at a level to identify and draw to ministerial attention the most expensive 1 to 2 per cent. That cost level is kept under review by the Treasury and currently stands at £250.

EMPLOYMENT

Sikhs (Headgear)

Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take steps to introduce legislation to exempt religious Sikhs employed in all sections of industry from having to wear protective headgear other than their traditional long hair and turban.

Mr. Nicholls: It was announced in another place on 14 July, during the Second Reading debate on the Employment Bill, that the Government intend to introduce a new clause to the Bill to exempt turban-wearing Sikhs from any statutory requirement to wear head protection in construction work. There are no plans to extend such an exemption to other industries at present.

Claimant Advisers

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many claimant advisers are in post; and how many interviews with claimants they have carried out in the year to the latest available date.

Mr. Lee: There were 1,160 claimant advisers in post at 28 March 1989, the latest date for which figures are available.

The total number of interviews carried out in the 12 months to 26 May 1989 was 937,496.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what have been the outcomes of interviews by claimant advisers showing (a) how many claimants have been referred to the Department of Social Security; (b) how many have been referred to adjudication because of doubts about their availability for work and (c) how many have been encouraged to apply for jobstart or family credit.

Mr. Lee: Outcomes of claimant adviser interviews held between April 1987 and May 1989 are as follows:

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| (a) Referrals to DSS | 152,390 |
| (b) Referrals to Adjudication[1] | 54,919 |
| (c) Figure not available | |

[1] This is the total figure for referrals to adjudication—separate figures for referrals on availability doubts are not collected.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the cost of the claimant adviser service in 1989-90.

Mr. Lee: The claimant adviser service is an integral part of the employment service, and it is not possible to give a total, discrete cost for the service.

The salary cost of the claimant adviser service for 1989-90 is estimated to be some £18·5 million.

Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the data from the latest labour force survey showing the training received by employees in the last four weeks broken down by sex and age.

Mr. Lee: Preliminary results from the 1988 labour force survey, as requested, are shown in the following table:

Great Britain, Spring 1988

Thousands

| Age | All persons | Men | Women |

[2] Those who in the four weeks prior to interview had taken part in any education or training connected with their job or a job that they might be able to do in the future.

Availability For Work

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide details of the sample survey of delays in adjudication officers making decisions on availability for work, showing the number and proportion of cases involved, by regions, for each quarter since October 1987.

Mr. Lee: The following tables show the number of submissions on availability for work included in the sample survey in each of the regions covering the period January 1988 to March 1989, and the observed percentages on those cases in which a decision had been reached in less than four weeks.

Job Clubs

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the latest number of (a) referrals to job clubs, (b) the number of starts with job clubs, (c) the number of job club leavers and (d) the number of job club leavers getting jobs, or becoming unemployed for Great Britain and each training agency region for each month since September 1988.

Mr. Lee: From September 1988 to May 1989, 100,440 people started with a job club. During the same period, there were 98,159 leavers, of whom 52,917 left to start work, with a further 15,794 going on to some other positive outcome such as training, education or self-employment. Regional and monthly breakdowns are given in the table.

Because of the very large number of potential referral points, the employment service does not keep statistics of referrals. All job club members are unemployed and separate records are not kept of the number remaining out of work on ceasing to attend.

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any further plans to encourage employers to establish workplace or shared facility creches or similar incentives further to assist the return to employment of women to counter skill shortages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend takes, and will continue to take, every opportunity to encourage employers to help employees combine work and family responsibilities. Workplace nurseries are, however, only one possible way of helping parents with childcare. They can be successful, but it may not always be the most practicable solution. Other possibilities include help with childcare costs in the local home area and rearrangement of working hours and holidays to fit in with school hours and terms. We welcome measures taken by employers including assistance with childcare and the introduction of flexible working hours and family leave. The best way of introducing such measures is through voluntary agreement between employers and employees. Schemes can then be tailored to individual priorities and needs, and available resources.

My Department also plays a full part in the ministerial group on women's issues, which is currently considering the whole question of childcare. The group recently announced a five-point plan on child care which includes encouragement for the use of school premises after school and in holiday periods; support for the voluntary sector through pump-priming of projects and encouragement of partnerships between the voluntary sector and employers. The initiative will also encourage employers to use the tax reliefs available to them when they help their employees with child care.

Collieries (Safety)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of accidents at British Coal collieries at which there were either loss of life or serious injuries in each of the last five years and add the ratio of such incidents per 100,000 shifts worked in each year.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available in the format asked for; the number of fatal injuries and major injuries in British Coal collieries over the last five years are as follows:

| | Fatal injuries | Major injuries | Rate per 100,000 manshifts | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | | Fatal injuries | Major injuries |
| 1984-85[1] | 22 | 378 | — | — |
| 1985-86 | 28 | 715 | 0·08 | 2·15 |
| 1986-87[2] | 15 | 952 | 0·05 | 3·45 |
| 1987-88[2] | 9 | 729 | 0·04 | 3·24 |
| 1988-89[2] (provisional) | 18 | 685 | 0·08 | 3·35 |

[1] This period covers the 15 months January 1984 to March 1985.

[2] The introduction of RIDDOR regulations on 1 April 1986 widened the coverage of the "major" injury category.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of concerns about the incidence of underground fires in British Coal collieries; and if he will pursue the matter with Her Majesty's inspector.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend is concerned about any incident which affects health and safety, but the number of underground fires in British Coal mines fell from 72 in 1987-88 to 52 in 1988-89. Reducing the number of underground fires is a primary objective of the Health and Safety Executive which through the work of the mines and quarries inspectorate, is actively monitoring safety measures taken by British Coal. These include the application of more sophisticated inspections and detection techniques, the raising of standards in the specification, design, installation and maintenance of machinery and equipment and the continuing development of fire-resistant materials.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) on how many occasions fire or smoke detection devices in British Coal collieries have been put out of use without notice being given to those employed in the colliery or Her Majesty's inspector;

(2) what information he has on whether underground fire or smoke alarms or similar monitoring equipment have been put out of operation or use by British Coal insofar as smoke or fire detection is concerned.

Mr. Nicholls: There is no statutory requirement for the Health and Safety Executive to be given notice of fire or smoke detection devices that have been put out of use and therefore the information requested is not available.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on whether the use of free moving underground vehicles has led British Coal to put out of use fire or smoke detection and warning devices.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive is not aware of any fire detection systems being put out of use by the operation of free-steered vehicles underground.

Employment Schemes

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how the 50-plus jobstart scheme is to be monitored; what targets he has for numbers participating in the scheme; what is the likely cost of the 50-plus jobstart scheme to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The 50-plus jobstart scheme is a variation of the existing jobstart scheme. It aims to help people over 50 to take up part-time work as a means of re-establishing themselves in the labour market.

Under 50-plus jobstart people over the age of 50 who have been unemployed for more than 12 months may be eligible for an allowance of £20 per week if they take up certain part-time jobs paying not more than £2·57 per hour. The scheme is being piloted in four areas—Lothian and the Borders, Dudley and Sandwell, Leeds and London South. The pilots started on 26 June 1989 and will run for one year. No targets have been set for the number of participants.

The number of people applying and being accepted for the allowance will be monitored. The pilots are being funded from within the overall cost of the main jobstart programme.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the participation of income support claimants in the action credit and 50-plus jobstart schemes is intended to be purely voluntary; whether refusal to participate will affect claimants eligibility for benefits; and what measures his Department is taking to get over-50's to participate in the 50-plus jobstart scheme.

Mr. Lee: Participation of all claimants in the action credit scheme and in 50-plus jobstart is voluntary. Refusal to participate will not of itself affect entitlement to benefit. The 50-plus jobstart scheme is being publicised by means of leaflets and posters in unemployment benefit offices and jobcentres in the four pilot areas.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the minimum pay, training and employment conditions which action credit agencies are required to meet in providing part-time jobs for income support claimants; when the statement of the terms and conditions of employment of action credit participants will be available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Action credit is an employment scheme, with participants paid the rate for the job. It will allow participants to build on their ET training through practical work with an employer.

Action credit agencies are required to ensure that conditions of employment meet the relevant legislative standards. Each participant will have a personal document outlining their terms and conditions. I welcome the testing of this new initiative and hope that unemployed people in the pilot areas will make full use of it.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment why action credit agencies are required to pay employers' national insurance contributions for their employees participating in action credit; whether his Department expects employers to pay national insurance contributions for participants in similar schemes where employees are earning below the lower earnings limit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Action credit agencies will pay class 1 national insurance contributions only on the lump sum that participants receive when they leave the scheme. Class 1 national insurance contributions are not payable where an employee earns less than the lower earnings level.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment why an earnings ceiling of £43 a week has been set for action credit participants; what, for participants working 23 hours a week, would be the hourly payment; how the earnings ceiling relates to the full extent normal rule; and what are his Department's target figures for participation in action credit.

Mr. Nicholls: The earnings ceiling of £43 per week has been set to ensure participants are not required to pay national insurance contributions on a weekly basis. Hourly earnings will be paid at the local rate for the job. There is no connection between the earnings ceiling on action credit and the full extent normal rule.

The scheme can help up to 300 participants in each pilot area, greatly enhancing the existing options for employment training leavers. The purpose of the pilot will be to test the attractiveness of the scheme; thus my right hon. Friend will not be setting numerical targets for these areas.

Pioneer Concrete UK Limited

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how often Pioneer Concrete UK Limited has been prosecuted by the Health and Safety Executive under health and safety legislation during the last 10 years.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 24 July 1989]: Health and Safety Executive records show that it has prosecuted Pioneer Concrete UK Limited three times since 1979.

Disabled People (Training)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of the supplementary grant available to training agents and managers has been apportioned to the higher cost of training disabled people.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 6 July 1989]: The information as requested is not available. The Training Agency, however, does provide special help for people with disabilities. This includes the loan of special equipment which may be needed to help trainees with their training programme, adaptations to premises and equipment, personal reader service for blind trainees and communicator service for deaf trainees.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Housing Associations

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he intends to provide additional sums of money to the housing association development programme (Northern Ireland) 1989-90 to cover the approved schemes for the mentally ill and handicapped.

Mr. Needham: No. Such schemes are being provided for within the existing budget.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate how much money will be available under the housing association development programme (Northern Ireland) 1989-90 to fund new projects.

Mr. Needham: It is estimated that £7·6 million is available in the 1989-90 year to fund: (a) new starts, that is, schemes which will receive tender approval to commence work on site; (b) other schemes up to an advanced stage of planning but not to commence on site this year.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give further assistance to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the voluntary housing associations to assist those persons who are homeless.

Mr. Needham: The Executive has the statutory responsibility of providing assistance to the homeless. The Executive has not asked for increased in-year funding for the homeless, whose needs for future years will, of course, be carefully considered during the public expenditure survey.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report the names and addresses of those housing associations which have applied for funding in 1989-90.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report those schemes which have been assured of finance from the Housing Association Development Programme (Northern Ireland) 1989-90 together with the sums of money allocated.

Mr. Needham: The inclusion of individual schemes in the housing association development programme does not in itself guarantee that the scheme will proceed. This will depend upon compliance with agreed procedures, costs and standards and on the availability of resources. On that basis, no schemes are assured of finance. Nevertheless those schemes which have been included in the programme for possible tender approval during 1989-90, together with the capital "allocations", are as follows:

In addition, a total of £4·5 million has been "allocated" in respect of a further 115 schemes which associations may take to an advanced stage of design so that they may be considered for inclusion in the next or subsequent financial year.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will list in the Official Report those schemes which have been submitted for inclusion in the housing association development programme (Northern Ireland) 1989-90 intending to provide accommodation specifically for people who are homeless.

Mr. Needham: The following proposals to provide accommodation specifically for the homeless were identified by housing associations as projects which they would like to have had included for tender approval in the 1989-90 development programme:

Scheme Address

Disability

The Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children in schools in Northern Ireland are defined as deaf; and what steps are being taken to identify those who may suffer from blindness as well or from another handicap in addition to deafness.

Dr. Mawhinney: According to latest information (January 1988) there were 82 deaf pupils of compulsory school age attending grant-aided primary, secondary and special schools. Of these, 45 suffered from one or more additional physical handicaps. No details are available about children attending grammar schools.

Under the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986 it is a matter for education and library boards to identify and make provision for children with special educational needs.

The Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaf people are resident in mental hospitals in Northern Ireland; how many of these have an additional handicap; what plans have been made for their future in the community; and if he will express these figures as a percentage of the number of residents in mental hospitals.

Mr. Needham: This information is not collected centrally. Plans for the future in the community of deaf people resident in mental hospitals are the responsibility of the health and social services boards. In drawing them up, boards take appropriate account of patients' individual needs and circumstances.

Medical Screening

The Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the number of medical screening units in the Province and future demand for screening.

Mr. Needham: Screening for hearing and visual defects, speech disorders and other developmental problems is an integral part of the child health surveillance programme. The physical and developmental status of children is assessed on an ongoing basis from infancy to age 14. Where abnormalities are detected children are referred to appropriate specialist services. Adults with suspected handicapping conditions are also referred to specialist services by their family doctor. Existing services have the capacity to deal with present and expected future requirements.

The Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what post-school provision exists for deaf and multi-handicapped young people in Northern Ireland; and what advice he is giving to area boards on this matter.

Mr. Needham: In Northern Ireland, the individual needs of hearing-impaired and multi-handicapped clients are met by the general range of statutory and voluntary services including the provision of home helps, aids and adaptations and day centre and workshop activities.

Specialist social workers for the deaf provide advice and guidance to hearing-impaired people and their families and act as interpreters where necessary. Three resource centres for the hearing impaired are provided in the Eastern health and social services board area at Beechbank house, Helen Keller house and the Parkmount rehabilitation unit.

The regional strategy for the period 1987-92 advises boards that the Department of Health and Social Services expects them to effect improvements in services specifically for the deaf and blind, either through the creation of specialist posts, or through in-service training designed to ensure that existing staff, including social workers, are made more aware and capable of meeting the needs of sensorily handicapped people.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision has been made in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys survey of disability in Northern Ireland for the identification of deaf-blind people and deaf people who may suffer from an additional handicap to their deafness.

Mr. Needham: The study of disability now under way in Northern Ireland is modelled closely on that carried out in Great Britain by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, and the same methods of establishing the nature and extent of disability are being followed. Information is sought on each and every disability that an individual has which interferes with his or her ability to perform daily activities. Thus, people with varying levels of visual loss and/or hearing loss and those who suffer an additional disability to their hearing loss will be included in the survey. Investigations cover those living in private households and also those who live in residential establishments of varying kinds.

The study is being carried out by the policy planning and research unit of the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will meet representatives of organisations representing the deaf to discuss the implications for them of the Disabled Persons (Northern Ireland) Act 1989.

Mr. Needham: No request for a meeting to discuss the implications of the Disabled Persons (Northern Ireland) Act 1989 has been received from any organisation representing deaf people.

Residential Homes

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residents in (a) Northern Ireland residential and (b) Northern Ireland nursing homes are required to contribute all or part of their personal expenses allowance to fund shortfalls in fees charged to them.

Mr. Needham: I regret that the information is not available.

Elderly People

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has been made of how many elderly people and their relatives cannot afford to pay for care in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: None, but income support is available to people in need of care whose resources are below levels prescribed by Parliament.

Roads

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to complete dualling of the Belfast-Larne road; and whether this road has been indentified as a Euro-route.

Mr. Needham: The existing single carriageway sections of the Belfast-Larne road are adjudged capable of carrying projected traffic flows for the foreseeable future. Proposals for completion of dualling are therefore considered to be long term. The Department of Environment for Northern Ireland has indentified the route as a Euro-route.

Housing

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sub-contractors named by successful main contractors in tender documents submitted to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive were not subsequently used after the main contract was awarded, in each of the last three years.

Mr. Needham: I am advised by the chairman of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that the information requested is not available as contractors are not required to name proposed sub-contractors when submitting tenders for Housing Executive contracts, although some do so.

Road Safety (Carrickfergus)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he proposes to reduce traffic congestion and improve road safety at Windermere road and Windermere avenue, Carrickfergus, Country Antrim.

Mr. Needham: As there is little evidence of traffic congestion or a particular road safety problem at Windermere road and Windermere avenue, no action is proposed at the present time.

Coal Gas Works, Carrickfergus

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration has been given to the retention of the only complete coal gas works in Ireland at Carrickfergus, or to the retention of this site as a historical tourist attraction and for educational purposes.

Mr. Needham: I understand that this site, which is owned by Belfast city council, is to be sold later this year, after it has been detoxified to the normal standard. The Carrickfergus Gasworks Preservation Society, which wishes to develop the site as a gasworks museum, will have the opportunity to make an offer for it.

Scotland (Transport Links)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had regarding road, rail and ferry links between Northern Ireland and Scotland.

Mr. Needham: Discussions are continuing at ministerial and official levels on proposals for improved facilities at Larne harbour, the upgrading of the rail connection between Belfast and Larne and the possible introduction of a ferry service between Red Bay harbour and Scotland.

Sewage Disposal (Islandmagee)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the marine survey postponed in 1988 into sewage disposal from Ashvale park, Islandmagee, County Antrim, to the sea will be carried out.

Mr. Needham: A study, including any necessary marine survey, has been initiated and is expected to be completed by November 1989.

Benefit Statistics

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in Northern Ireland are currently receiving (a) unemployment benefit and (b) income support.

Mr. Needham: The latest available information is as follows:

| | Number of recipients |
|---|---|
| Unemployment Benefit | 21,584 |
| Income Support | [1]183,235 |

[1] This includes an estimated 4,000 people who get unemployment benefit and income support.

Civil Service Statistics

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show for each grade in the Northern Ireland Civil Service the number and percentages of (a) Roman Catholics, (b) Protestants and (c) others, showing the number and percentages of males and females in each category; and if he will indicate the percentage of each of those groupings of working age in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope: The information requested by the hon. Gentleman is contained within the Second Report of the Equal Opportunities Unit of the Northern Ireland Civil Service. The Second Report was published in December 1987 and shows the make-up of the Northern Ireland Civil Service by sex, religion and disability as at 1 January 1987.

Copies of the Second Report were placed in the Library on 17 December 1987.

The following table shows estimated aggregated figures (1985-87) of the religious affiliation of persons of working age in Northern Ireland, derived from the continuous household survey.

| | Males per cent. | Females per cent. | All per cent. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Catholic | 37·9 | 39·6 | 38·9 |
| Protestant | 57·8 | 57·8 | 57·8 |
| Other or not stated | 4·3 | 2·6 | 3·3 |

Bogside Flats (Demolition)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the demolition of the Bogside flats in Londonderry was carried out by the main contractors or by sub-contractors.

Mr. Needham: I am advised by the chairman of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that the demolition of the Bogside (Rossville street) flats was carried out by the main contractor.

MOT Tests

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the length of delay for vehicles awaiting MOT tests in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The average waiting time for private car test appointments was approximately six and a half weeks at 14 July 1989.

Teachers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish details of the numbers of (a) Roman Catholic and (b) other teachers who have graduated in each of the last three years for which records are available, together with information on the level of qualification awarded in each category from Northern Ireland universities and teacher training colleges.

Dr. Mawhinney: Available information is as follows:

| | 1986-87 | 1987-88 | 1988-89 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Stranmillis College | | | |
| BEd (Hons) | 53 | 68 | 83 |
| BEd | 89 | 77 | 51 |
| PGCE | 51 | 65 | 67 |
| St. Mary's College | | | |

| BA (Hons) | 28 | 25 | 27 |

| BA/BSc (Hons) combined subject | 16 | 6 | 11 |
| BSc | 20 | 10 | 2 |

Since St. Mary's is a voluntary Roman Catholic college it is likely that most graduates are Roman Catholic. The other institutions are in the public sector and non-denominational.

Planning Officers

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, in taking account of the peculiar structure of local government in Northern Ireland, he will require planning officers to follow the practice of councillors in declaring their interests in cases where their duties may constitue a conflict of interest on the part of themselves or their families.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: In accordance with their conditions of service all civil servants are required not to put themselves in a position where their duty and private interests conflict and they must not make use of their official position to further those interests. All planning officials, therefore, are expected to take no part in cases where their duties may constitute a conflict of interest on the part of themselves or their families.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under what powers the Northern Ireland Housing Executive demands deductions for arrears which are being disputed by a tenant.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: In cases where tenants do not repay rent arrears voluntarily the Northern Ireland Housing Executive recover arrears by three main methods: by direct payment from benefits under the Social Security Claims and Payments Regulations (NI) 1988; from other money due to the tenant from Government sources under the Payment for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (NI) 1971; and under the Magistrates Courts (NI) Order 1981. When using the Magistrates Courts (NI) Order the Executive must prove the debt in court. If a tenant disputes the withholding of money under the Social Security Claims and Payment Regulations or the Payment for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (NI) he can use the Executive's internal complaints procedure and if he is still not satisfied he can refer his case to the commissioner for complaints.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets, and (e) sextuplets, born in Northern Ireland in each year since 1980; and what was the total number of maternities in each of these years.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The information is set out in the table:

| Type | 1980 | 1981 | 1982 | 1983 | 1984 | 1985 | 1986 | 1987 | 1988 |

NHS (Regrading)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about progress in implementing the recent regrading exercise for National Health Service staff.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the regrading of medical laboratory scientific officers. The assignment of existing posts to new grades under the medical laboratory scientific officer regrading exercise is a matter for the health and social services boards. In each board this involves a review of each post against the needs of the board. The exercise is at a fairly advanced stage in all the boards and local staff interests are being consulted. However, due to the work involved it has not been possible to assign the new grades before 1 April this year as had been planned.

Scientific Staff

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to the relationship between difficulties experienced in the recruitment and retention of medical physicists, clinical biochemists, microbiologists and psychologists in Northern Ireland and similar difficulties in Great Britain; and whether he has received any recent representations or information on this.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: I have received some representations about pay and conditions of service for these groups of staff. In Northern Ireland there is, as for other staff groups in the health and personal social services, a policy of parity with similar grades of staff employed in the National Health Service. In Great Britain, I understand that the management side of the appropriate Whitley Council has set up a working party to investigate reported problems of recruitment and retention. I shall, of course, be keeping in close touch with developments.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he intends to take to ensure that the commitment given in "Working for Patients" to maintain a health care service based on high technology includes measures to recruit and retain scientific staff to operate the service.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The current commitment within the Health Service to recruit and retain, within available resources, sufficient numbers of staff of the right calibre for the job will continue.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust (Scotland)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Inland Revenue has completed its review of the charitable status of the Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust (Scotland).

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that I cannot comment on the tax affairs of any particular body.

Arts and Charities (Sponsorship)

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax incentives are available to encourage commercial sponsorships of the arts and charities.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Sponsorship payments which are not of a capital nature are deductible for tax purposes in calculating trading profits if they are made wholly and exclusively for the purposes of the payer's trade. In practice, this means that the sole purpose of the payment must be to provide the payer with a benefit—often in the form of advertising—commensurate with his expenditure.

There are also special tax reliefs for business donations to charities.

Life Assurance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the rules for the taxation of investment-linked and other life assurance in (a) Germany and (b) Luxembourg for life offices and policy holders, respectively.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In both countries life offices pay tax broadly by reference to their trading profits. In Germany policy holders may also pay tax on policy benefits received, depending on the terms of the policy and its duration. So far as I am aware, investment-linked life assurance comparable to that in the United Kingdom is not usual in either country: I am aware of no special tax provision for it.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what practical limitations have been or are likely to be imposed by membership of the EEC on the Government's freedom to increase the tax take from the life assurance business, including pension and annuity business.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The practical development of a single internal EC market for life assurance is still at an early stage but in consultation with the industry the Government will be keeping the position under review. The decision this year to reform the existing tax regime for life assurance instead of adopting a more radical option will undoubtedly provide stability for the run-up to 1992. But allowing for freedom of services in the EC was only one of several objectives of the reform. As my right hon. Friend said in his Budget speech, above all the effect of the changes will be to provide a more efficient and equitable tax regime for this most important industry.

Personal Taxation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the gross and taxable income of the self-employed in the current financial year as (a) declared for tax and (b) not so declared; and if he will provide comparable figures for 1978-79.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest information is for 1986-87. The estimates cover married couples and single people whose main source of income is from self-employment.

£ billion

| | Gross Income | Taxable Income |
|---|---|---|
| 1978-79 | 9·1 | 4·5 |
| 1986-87 | 26·4 | 15·4 |

By their very nature, estimates of amounts of income not declared for tax are not available.

Special Debt Relief

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how it is proposed to account for the special debt relief to the poorest and most heavily indebted countries agreed at the Toronto summit this year.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The arrangements announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development on 25 November 1988 (WA col. 13) following the Toronto agreement have been modified for technical reasons. ECGD will receive the lower amount of interest from the debtor as before. But it is now intended that, instead of ODA reimbursing ECGD for the forgone receipts, ECGD's obligations to the Consolidated Fund will be reduced by the same amount. The published accounts will be noted to make this clear. These changes will be taken into account during the 1989 public expenditure survey. It is expected that the cost of providing special debt relief in this way will count as part of Britain's net official development assistance to developing countries, as reported to the development assistance committee of the OECD.

Offices (London)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage increase over the nearest equivalent figure for 1976 and 1966 is represented by the total rateable value of offices, including banks in office areas, in London, as shown in section 1 of table 11.1 of Inland Revenue Statistics 1987.

Mr. Norman Lamont: About 26·5 per cent. for 1 April 1986 compared with 1 April 1976. A comparison with 1966 would not be appropriate because rateable values for that year were based on the 1963 revaluation.

Personal Taxation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has information from the family expenditure survey, the survey of personal incomes and from the building societies which enable him to estimate the distribution of mortgage interest relief by marital status as well as by range of total income.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information on the distribution of mortgage interest relief by marital status and by range of total income is available from projections of the data from the 1986-87 "Survey of Personal Incomes" and the 1986 "Family Expenditure Survey". However, all estimates are provisional and those for marital status are rather tentative because of lack of firm data.

Latest estimates for 1989-90 based on the assumption that interest rates remain at current levels for the rest of 1989-90 are given in the table. The estimates include mortgages formerly under the option mortgage scheme which are now subsumed within MIRAS.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has made estimates of the revenue cost of the introduction of separate taxation; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing by range of total income for two-earner married couples the number of wives earning (i) more and (ii) less than the single allowance.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that the revenue cost of the introduction of independent taxation will be approximately £500 million in the first year, 1990-91, and approximately £1·2 billion in 1991-92.

The number of wives earning more than the single allowance in 1990-91 by range of total income for example is given in the table. The figures are estimates based on a projection of the 1986-87 "Survey of Personal Incomes" and are therefore provisional. I regret that it is not possible to provide reliable estimates of total income for couples where the wife earns for the number of wives earning less than the single allowance.

Charitable Donations

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total value of income covenanted to charities by (a) individuals and (b) companies in every year from 1984-85 to 1988-89, inclusive.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Gross amounts covenanted to charities are shown in the table. I regret that a reliable breakdown of these figures between individual and company covenants is not available.

[1] Estimated.

[2] Provisional.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of income convenanted to professional arts organisations with charitable status by (a) individuals and (b) companies in every year from 1984-85 to 1988 inclusive.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of payroll giving—"give as you earn"—to (a) all charities and (b) professional arts organisations with charitable status in 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that about £1 million was donated to charities in 1987-88 through the payroll giving scheme and over £3 million in 1988-89. No information is available on how much of these amounts were received by professional arts organisations.

Higher Rate Tax

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of persons subject to higher-rate tax in the current year on the basis of separate taxation for husbands and wives.

Mr. Norman Lamont: On the basis of the latest information available, it is estimated that just under 1·3 million individuals will be liable to income tax at the higher rate when independent taxation starts in 1990-91. This estimate is based on a projection of the 1986-87 "Survey of Personal Incomes" and is therefore provisional.

Income Tax

Mr. Lester: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the cost of administering income tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 19 July 1989]: The total cost of administering income tax for the financial year 1987-88, the last year for which this figure is available, was £931·5 million.

Married Women (Tax)

Mr. Clay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many married women pay income tax on their earnings; and what proportion they make up of all married women in paid work.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 20 July 1989]: It is estimated that in 1989-90 some 3·7 million married women will pay income tax on their earnings. It is believed that this represents approximately half of all married women with some income from employment.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the revenue cost of mortgage interest tax relief projected for the year 1989-90;

(2) what was the revenue cost of mortgage interest tax relief for 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The estimated costs of mortgage interest tax relief in the United Kingdom are shown in the table. The cost of mortgage interest in 1989-90 is based on the assumption that interest rates remain at current levels for the rest of 1989-90.

Cost of mortgage tax relief

|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 4,670 |
| 1987-88 | 4,800 |
| 1988-89[1] | 5,500 |
| 1989-90[1] | 6,750 |

[1] provisional.

ENERGY

British Nuclear Fuels (Safety)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had with British Nuclear Fuels with respect to plans to make production workers more responsible for safety monitoring; whether he intends to discuss this with the nuclear installations inspectorate; what implications the plan has for the 1986 safety audit carried out by the nuclear installations inspectorate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have had discussions with British Nuclear Fuels plc on this matter. Any such proposal and its implications for the 1986 safety audit would be a matter for discussion between British Nuclear Fuels and the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate.

Halliburton Group

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether, before letting any further contracts to the Halliburton group or any of its subsidiaries, he will make it his policy to instruct his officials to demand prior assurances from the company (a) that full compensation will be paid to any British subject in their employ who is injured while working for them abroad, (b) that no British subject will be dismissed immediately while still in hospital receiving treatment and (c) that Halliburton Manufacturing and Services Ltd., 17 Hanover square, London W 1, will reply to letters written by hon. Members on behalf of constituents dismissed while in its employ.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No. It would not be appropriate for the Secretary of State to attempt to regulate the management procedures and practices of companies with which the Department contracts.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department of Social Security received 1,333 letters from right hon. and hon. Members and organisations during the month of January and despatched 1,345 replies. This Session 10,314 have been received and 9,474 replies were issued to 1 July.

Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We are making excellent progress in relocating "backroom" work from 21 local social security offices in London to the three social security centres in Glasgow, Belfast and Makerfield.

The first social security centre at Glasgow is due to start work on 14 August.

As a separate exercise, a team of officials is close to completing a thorough and systematic review of the location of our headquarters work. We expect to receive a report of the team's findings shortly.

Local Offices (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to review the areas covered by the boundaries of his Department's offices in Doncaster and Wath-on-Dearne in the county of South Yorkshire, with particular regard to the more rural areas of Doncaster metropolitan borough council.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The local office network in this area is being reviewed later in the year. No specific proposals have yet been made regarding the boundaries of Doncaster and Wath-on-Dearne local offices.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security to what extent charitable work undertaken prior to the period covered by a claim for entitlement to invalidity benefit is used as an indication of a person's ability to work during the period covered by the claim.

Mr. Scott: Work, whether charitable or other, carried out prior to a claim for invalidity benefit does not affect entitlement to that benefit. Where a person performs some work during the period of the claim, it is for the independent adjudicating authorities to determine whether such work is consistent with the incapacity for work test, which is one of the qualifying conditions for entitlement.

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has received any recent representations about pilot or permanent workplace creches and similar incentives further to encourage the return to employment of women in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have received no recent representations but officials are in regular touch with staff and their representatives about child care provisions generally. Holiday play schemes have been established in several different parts of the country often in collaboration with other Government Departments and other local employers. Information about local child care facilities is also available to staff. A study is currently under way into the feasibility of providing workplace nurseries.

These schemes form only part of the provisions to encourage the employment of women. Flexible working patterns including part-time working and job sharing, maternity leave and pay, career break opportunities and other special leave arrangements are all designed to encourage women to return to or remain in work in the Department.

Sickness Benefit

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will list the action taken by his Department to assist Mr. A., reference OVB/STB/EC, Longbenton, 25 January 1989, to obtain sickness benefit in respect of his car accident in Italy on 7 December 1983; what response his Department obtained from the Italian authorities; and what efforts they made to insist upon a reply, before the intervention of the Italian ambassador and the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Responsibility for Mr. A's claim was transferred to the Italian authorities on 8 August 1988, and from that date the matter was outside the control of the Department.

However, on request from Mr. A, overseas branch wrote to the Italian authorities on 25 January 1989, asking them to write to Mr. A and let him know the position on his claim. In response to a letter from my hon. Friend asking the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to arrange for the intervention of the British consul with the Italian authorities, which later was passed to the Department for reply as a social security matter was involved, overseas branch has written to the liaison officer in Italy to see whether the inquiries instigated by the Italian ambassador at my hon. Friend's request, have produced any results. If overseas branch has not received a reply to this letter within one month, we have said that the request to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for the consulate in Italy to pursue the matter will be reconsidered.

Jobstart

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of savings accruing to his Department from reductions in the payment of benefit to participants in the 50-plus jobstart scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The initiative is being piloted for a year in four areas. It started on 26 June. An estimate of potential income support savings will be possible once the results of the pilot are available.

Family Credit

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications there have been for family credit in each month since April 1988, and how many awards have been made in each month since April 1988.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is as follows:

| | Claims | Awards |
| 1988 | | |
| April | 96,505 | 40,213 |

Notes:

1. The figures are for the four or five weeks ending on the last Friday of the month.

2. The figures for claims received include those made to renew existing awards and those made more than four weeks before the expiry of an existing award (and therefore invalid).

Family Support

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the level of support for the family net of the consequences of unemployment growth, in total, and by each category of benefit for each year since the first full year after the introduction of child benefit and express the levels of support by each category of benefit in standard prices with the levels of expenditure in the first full year after the introduction of child benefit as the base.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to publish his next review of the long-term financial position of the national insurance fund under section 137 of the Social Security Act 1975.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 6 July 1989]: The Government Actuary is responsible for reviewing the operation of the 1975 Social Security Act for each five-year period, and section 137 of the Social Security Act 1975 provides that the Government Actuary shall review the national insurance fund. The Government Actuary advises that he plans to complete his quinquennial report by the end of the year, when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will lay the report before Parliament.

Child Benefit

Mr. Bob Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much of the overall spending on child benefit goes to families on income-related benefits, broken down by benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 17 July 1989]: The information requested is set out as follows:

Estimated child benefit expenditure on families in receipt of income-related benefits 1989-90

| Benefit | Child Benefit £ million |

| Family Credit[1] | 300 |

[2] Child Benefit expenditure on families receiving Housing Benefit is estimated on the assumption that the rate rebate scheme is operating throughout Great Britain.

[3] In receipt of Housing Benefit but no other income-related benefit. Income Support and Family Credit recipients may also be receiving Housing Benefit.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Homes

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what further provision he intends to make in order to reduce the length of delays presently experienced by purchasers from Scottish Homes; what is the number of legally qualified staff presently engaged in work relating to the sale of domestic residential property; what is the number of legally qualified staff formerly employed by (a) the Housing Corporation and (b) the Scottish Special Housing Association in order to deal with such work; and what arrangements are being made by Scottish Homes in order to reduce the backlog of cases.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Homes has recently contracted with some 30 private legal firms to assist its own in-house conveyancing staff to increase the throughput of applications in order to clear the large number of cases on hand at present. This arrangement should enable up to 1,000 applications to be processed monthly, and should ensure that in future sales should be completed within six months of application.

The number of legally qualified staff employed by Scottish Homes on house sale work is nine, with a further four posts awaiting recruitment. This compares with 14 such staff employed by SSHA to do such work. The Housing Corporation had no landlord function and thus had no such staff.

Teachers

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of qualified teachers not employed in the teaching profession in 1979; and what is the current number.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available.

Community Charge

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment his Department has made of the costs of regional authorities of (a) ensuring that the registrar of births, marriages and deaths advised the community charge registration officer of the death of an individual registered to pay the poll tax, (b) removing the deceased person's name from the community charge register (c) calculating the amount due by the deceased person and (d) preparing, mailing and pursuing the payment of that amount by the deceased person's next of kin or executor.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under the provisions of the Community Charge (Notification of Deaths) (Scotland) Regulations (SI 1988 No. 2211) as amended by the Community Charges (Notification of Deaths)

(Scotland) Amendment Regulations 1989 (SI 1989 No. 735) the district registrar, in respect of a death registered in his district is required within seven days of registration of such death to notify a number of prescribed particulars relating to the deceased to the community charges registration officer of each region or islands area within which the registration district falls. No fee is charged to regional authorities for the provision of this information. Other costs associated with removing a deceased person's entry from the community charges register and with collecting any outstanding amount of unpaid community charge are a matter for the regional or islands council concerned.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what record his Department is keeping of the number of complaints received at either the Scottish Office or at individual regional authorities about the levying of community charge on deceased persons.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Very few representations on this issue have been received in the Scottish Office. Information about representations made to regional councils is not held centrally.

Piper Alpha

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline the role performed by his officials in the monitoring of the area above and on the sea-bed surrounding the wreckage of Piper Alpha; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: In the period following the incident on 6 July 1988 to February 1989 the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland, in co-operation with the operators Occidental Petroleum (Caledonia) Ltd., carried out surveys of debris and other samples from the Piper Alpha site for possible polychlorinated byphenyl (PCB) and radioactive contamination. Details of the work carried out and of the results of these surveys were given in scientific reports published on 6 June (copies of which have been placed in the Library).

Further monitoring and surveys are being carried out by the operators in compliance with conditions attached to the approval for the abandonment programme granted by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy under the Petroleum Act 1987. The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland and Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate were consulted on the monitoring requirements and will advise as appropriate on the results as and when available.

Monitoring of the area may also be carried out in due course as part of the general monitoring of sea waters around Scotland on behalf of this Department.

Renaval Fund

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow on 25 April, Official Report, column 489, he is in a position to indicate the response of the European Commission to the applications under the Renaval fund; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: An application for Strathclyde region to be declared eligible under Renaval went forward to the European Commission on 26 May 1989. We still await a response.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the names of the members of the Nature Conservancy Council's advisory committee for Scotland and give in each case their occupations, their employer, their nominator and the date their term of office is due to expire.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

Members of NCC's advisory committee for Scotland are not nominated for appointment. Instead they are appointed by the Nature Conservancy Council with the approval of the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro), 11 July, Official Report, column 436, what measures he proposes to introduce to ensure that scientific advice continues to be made available to the proposed Scottish Nature Conservancy Council.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government intend that this council's work will be founded on an objective science base. Careful consideration is being given to various possible mechanisms for achieving this. Details of the proposals will be announced in due course.

Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many fines have been recovered each month by means of civil diligence under section 56 of the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1987 during the years 1988 and 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Section 56 of the 1987 Act applies not to fines but to fixed penalties payable in consequence of a conditional offer by the procurator fiscal. Information about the enforcement of these by means of civil diligence is not yet available as returns from district courts are incomplete.

Devolution (Europe)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the business community about devolution or independence in Europe.

Mr. Rifkind: I have not received any such representations recently. I am, however, aware of the findings of a research study on this subject published this month by the Scottish Business Insider magazine. The study demonstrated that there is serious concern among top companies in Scotland at the detrimental effect on the Scottish economy which would be the consequence of constitutional change in Scotland.

Set-aside

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate how many full-time and part-time jobs have been lost as a consequence of the set-aside scheme for agricultural land in Scotland; and if he will estimate how many of those job losses are attributable to whole farm set-side.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As indicated in the reply given to the hon. Member on 15 December 1988 at col. 622 the possible consequences of the set-aside scheme for farm employment will be included in an evaluation of the scheme in its early years of operation. No results are yet available. I do not expect whole farm set-aside to be a significant factor since in the majority of cases where the whole of the area of eligible land has been set aside, the set-aside area represents less than half the total area of the farm.

Clydeside Western Buses

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is in a position to make a statement on financial support for the employees of Clydeside Western Buses, in preparing a bid for the purchase of that company.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have consistently made it clear that financial assistance will be made available to one management-employee buy-out team per company. The Scottish Transport Group has recommended that, in the case of Western Clydeside, financial assistance to prepare a bid for the purchase of the company should be offered to the management-employee buy-out team led by Mr. Alan Wilson, managing director of Western Clydeside. The Scottish Transport Group considered that a successful bid was most likely to emerge from the outline proposals put forward by this team; and that these proposals offered the prospect of the most satisfactory shareholding arrangements for employees. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has now approved the Scottish Transport Group's recommendation and the Scottish Transport Group will today be writing to Mr. Wilson confirming this offer.

The decision to offer assistance to the management-employee buy-out team will not confer any preferential status on this team as bidders. All bids will be considered on their merits with bids involving employee participation receiving preference. This preference will not in any way depend on whether or not financial assistance has been given.

Environment Protection

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what policies his Department has implemented in the last five years to develop environmental protection measures.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1984-85 the Department brought into effect the main provisions of part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 relating to the control of water pollution; these were further strengthened by means of the Water Act 1989. These provisions are the framework for implementing EC legislation on the protection of the water environment (some 30 directives) and other international agreements, such as those arising from the ministerial conferences on the North sea.

Scottish water authorities, with the encouragement of the Department, have made considerable progress in improving the quality of public water supplies, particularly with regard to lead in drinking water: provisions in the Water Act 1989 will strengthen the existing Scottish legislation on the quality of public and private supplies.

The Government have increased funding to water and sewerage authorities to improve the water environment. In the last five years, some £500 million has been invested in water and sewerage services. The allocation for 1989-90 has been increased by 14 per cent. over planned provision.

The Department has supported research in Scotland as part of the Government's major research programme to determine the effects of acidification and in association with the Department of the Environment, has undertaken a major review of the control of air pollution in Great Britain, with a view to legislation.

The hazardous waste inspectorate, set up in 1983, has given advice and guidance to local authorities on safe and efficient systems of waste management; it has published three comprehensive reports and issues guidance on such matters as landfill gas.

Scottish Information Office

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce safeguards to protect the integrity and non-party political status of the Scottish Information Office.

Mr. Rifkind: The staff of the Scottish Information Office, as civil servants, are well aware of established conventions followed by Ministers in relation to party political activity. I see no need to issue new guidance to that which has stood successive Governments in good stead, and to which I fully subscribe.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Rifkind: In January this year some 834 letters were received by my ministerial colleagues and myself from hon. and right hon. Members, and the total for the Session to 1 July is certainly in excess of 8,000. To provide like information on correspondence issuing during the same periods would incur disproportionate costs.

Consultants

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has come to a decision in relation to his proposal to engage consultants to advise on how the awareness of the Scottish people in relation to the activities of his Department can be improved.

Mr. Rifkind: I have now made arrangements with Hall Advertising Limited, Edinburgh who will work in association with specialist staff from Siegel and Gale and Kingsway Rowland for the preparation of a full report which will define a corporate identity strategy for the Scottish Office and describe the corporate visual guidelines for its implementation. Work will begin right away and I expect that it will take four months for the report to be concluded. When I have received and considered the report I will be informing the House of the decisions I have taken.

Planning Applications

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future of neighbour notification of planning applications following the deletion of domestic subjects from the valuation roll.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government are committed to maintaining the neighbour notification arrangements in Scotland, but the present procedure provided for in the Town and Country Planning (General Development) (Scotland) Order 1981 requires to be changed. Developers are currently required to serve a notice on the named owners, occupiers and lessees of neighbouring land as listed in the valuation roll, informing them that a planning application for a proposed development has been submitted, that a copy of the application and plans may be inspected at the address of the planning authority and that they have 14 days to make representations to the authority. These procedures will remain for all but domestic property.

With the introduction of the community charge entries for domestic property on the valuation roll will no longer be updated. It is therefore necessary to adopt a different approach to identifying those neighbours on whom notification of a planning application must be served. We propose to replace the existing arrangements with a requirement to notify two categories of neighbours. These would be firstly those listed in the parts of the community charges register which a member of the public may inspect in respect of the address of the neighbouring property and, secondly, the owner of the neighbouring property. Notification of the owner will be by means of a notice addressed to "the owner" at the address of the neighbouring property. Those receiving the notification would have the same opportunity as at present to make representations to the planning authority about the application. The Scottish Development Department is currently undertaking a complete revision and updating of the General Development Order and the neighbour notification procedure will be altered as part of that revision during next year. In the meantime the valuation roll remains available for consultation.

The introduction of these changes to the notification procedures will ensure that owners and occupiers of property continue to receive notification of planning applications affecting neighbouring property and that the task of undertaking neighbour notification does not place an undue burden on developers.

Community Charge

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will reconsider the position of those with severe mental impairment from progressive disease in relationship to payment of the poll tax; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has made it clear that if a practical way can be found of tackling the problem of determining the point at which a person with a progressive brain disorder should be exempt from the community charge, he will look closely at it.

Fraud and Corruption (Councillors)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to how many local authority councillors have been prosecuted and convicted for fraud or corruption in each of the past 10 years; and if he will list the authorities on which they served.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not collected centrally.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 July 1989]: Small firms continue to play an important and dynamic role in the regeneration of the Scottish economy. Small firms also continue to benefit from the comprehensive schemes of support that the Government have introduced. In the main, these are delivered through the Scottish Development Agency, the Highlands and Islands Development Board and from the Industry Department for Scotland, where policy responsibility lies. In addition to providing services specific to Scotland, the SDA, HIDB and the Industry Department for Scotland are responsible for the delivery and monitoring in Scotland of United Kingdom services on behalf of other Departments, including the Department of Employment and the Department of Trade and Industry. During 1988, there was a net increase of over 3,400 in the number of registered companies in Scotland. Between January 1980 and January 1989 there was a net increase of some 20,000 or over a half in the number of companies registered in Scotland. VAT returns indicate that between 1980 and 1987 the number of new businesses operating in Scotland showed a net increase of 13,400.

The following describes the services available to small firms in Scotland during the periods 1987-88 and 1988-89 and some of their achievements.

Regional Assistance

IDS made offers to small firms in Scotland of regional selective assistance of £4 million in 1987-88 and £12 million in 1988-89. Under the revised regional development grant scheme, approvals to small firms amounted to £48 million in 1987-88 and £70 million in 1988-89. Information on the grant offered to small firms under the original RDG scheme is not available. Under both the investment and innovation elements of the regional enterprise grants scheme, some £2 million was offered to companies in Scotland in 1988-89.

Better Business Services and Better Technical Services Schemes

During the periods in question, the BBS scheme was administered by IDS, SDA and the HIDB. The scheme allows small companies to have access to subsidised professional business advice and in 1987-88 some 9,597 offers of assistance were made with an associated value of £2·9 million. In 1988-89 some 6,804 offers of assistance were made with an associated value of £3·1 million. The BTS scheme was available in Strathclyde and part of Tayside region and allowed small companies to have access to subsidised professional advice of a technical nature. In 1987-88, 1,720 offers were made with an associated value of £1 million. Support under the BTS scheme ceased on 31 March 1988.

Scottish Development Agency

SDA support for small business includes the provision of financial assistance, premises and a wide range of advisory services, including the small firms service in Scotland and the administration of DTI's consultancy initiatives, under the enterprise initiative. Under the consultancy initiatives, some 1,235 consultancy projects were undertaking during 1988-89. It is estimated that Scotland accounted for 10 per cent. of total GB expenditure on this scheme, compared with a 6·9 per cent. share of eligible firms. During 1987-88 the SDA had contact with 19,125 small companies. Some £2·7 million was invested in 692 small firms creating or safeguarding some 800 jobs. In addition, some 875 small companies received assistance with the costs of attending promotional events. Sixty small companies were provided with technical advice, while 30 received assistance with market research studies. In the year 1988-89, the agency had contact with 19,250 small firms. Some £1·8 million was invested in 92 small firms creating or safeguarding 1,600 jobs. In addition, 925 small companies received assistance with the costs of attending promotional events. Eighty small firms were provided with technical advice while 40 companies received assistance with market research studies.

Highlands and Islands Development Board

As well as delivering the small firms service in its area, the HIDB undertakes a wide range of activities in support of business, most of which are small, to help them overcome the difficulties of operating in this peripheral and rural part of the United Kingdom. The measures taken include financial support to business, provision of factories and assistance with business advice and training. In 1987-88, the board approved 1,063 offers of financial assistance with an associated value of £14·4 million. This generated private sector investment of some £42·3 million and created or safeguarded 2,700 jobs. For the period 1988-89, the board approved 1,220 offers of financial assistance with an associated value of £25·3 million. This generated private sector support of £44·4 million and created or safeguarded 3,300 jobs. In the period 1987-88, the HIDB completed 6,090 sq m of factory floor space. In this period some 2,920 jobs were housed in HIDB factories. In the period 1988-89, the HIDB completed 12,553 sq m of factory floor space. In this period, some 3,130 jobs were housed in HIDB factories.

Local Enterprise Trusts

Local enterprise trusts have proved to be an important catalyst in fostering the enterprise culture in Scotland. The Government have continued to demonstrate their recognition of the valuable role played by the trusts, and the SDA provided financial support of £1·04 million to the 40 enterprise trusts in 1987-88, the latest year for which figures are available—an increase of over 46 per cent. over the previous year. This has triggered a further £3·28 million from the other public and private sector partners. During 1987-88 trusts in Scotland had contact with 25,000 clients from which 3,800 small businesses were formed. Companies assisted by enterprise trusts created some 9,000 new jobs. The SDA bases its financial assistance on its appraisal of each trust's annual management plan which contains details of the previous year's projects and objectives for the oncoming year.

Deregulation

The Scottish Office has responded fully to the deregulation initiative. This participation has resulted in an improved awareness within SO Departments of the needs of business and has led to a more systematic approach to assessing the financial and other burdens imposed on business by regulation. Scotland was the first area in the United Kingdom to set up a pilot Government business shop which provides small businesses with a single access point for advice on dealing with Government regulations. It is hoped that, with the co-operation of other participating regulatory Departments, the Government business shop will be permanently established in Glasgow once the pilot period has ended.

Public Purchasing

Earlier this year, the SDA, assisted by IDS, held two seminars on MOD procurement. These events attracted over 400 Scottish companies and as a result over 70 companies participated in face-to-face discussions with MOD procurement staff. SDA will be embarking on a further series of seminars dealing with public purchasing issues in the near future.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for the years 1966, 1970, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1983, 1987 and the latest available full year (a) the total number of jobs by industrial category in Scotland (b) a breakdown of full-time and part-time employment in each year and (c) for each category including full-time and part-time jobs, the percentage increase or decrease between the last available full year and 1966.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The information is not available in the precise form requested. Table 1 shows employment in 1966 and 1970 separately for men and women analysed by the 1968 standard industrial classification. There is no information available which separately identifies the number of women working part-time on this basis.

Table 2 shows the number of male, female and part-time female employees in employment at June 1971 and for each of the years requested up to June 1988, the latest year available, analysed by industrial division of the 1980 standard industrial classification.

Table 3 shows the percentage increase or decrease in employment between June 1971, the earliest date for which estimates are available on the basis of the 1980 standard industrial classification and June 1988, the latest date for which employment estimates are available, consistent with the series shown.

Estimates of the number of part-time male employees are not available for the years for which information has been requested.

[1] Due to a change of classification in September 1981 the figures for Agriculture, Forestry and Fishing include non-principal tenant farmers prior to 1981 and exclude these from September 1981. In 1981 there were an estimated 6,000 non-principal tenant farmers in Scotland.

[1] Due to the change in classification from September 1981 which resulted in non-principal tenant farmers being treated as self-employed, it is not possible to calculate the percentage change in employment over this period for Agriculture, Forestry and Fishing.

[2] The percentage change for All Industries between 1971 and 1988 has been estimated after deducting an estimated 6,000 male non-principal tenant farmers in 1971.

HEALTH

NHS Reform

14. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what special allowance he has made in his plans for National Health Service reforms to ensure proper general practitioner services for small town hospitals.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: On 4 May I agreed with the GMSC negotiators that where GPs were providing a necessary service in the public sector, such as being a clinical assistant in a small hospital, they would be required by their terms of service to be available to their practice's patients on a minimum of four, rather than five days a week. This will ensure sufficient flexibility to allow GPs to continue their contracts with local hospitals.

25. Mr. David Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the proposals in the White Paper, "Working for Patients", will affect general practitioners' freedom to refer patients for treatment.

82. Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how general practitioners' ability to refer patients for treatment will be affected by the proposed reform of the National Health Service.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: When district health authorities place contracts, they will be expected to give effect to the referral patterns which local GPs want. They will need to consult closely with their GPs, therefore, in order to agree a range of contracts which make best use of their resources to secure the best services for their residents. As a result, local GPs will be much more closely involved in planning health care for their patients than at present. GPs will also have their freedom to refer increased, because for the first time they will be able to refer patients for NHS treatment in private hospitals. DHAs will be much better placed to take advantage of GPs' knowledge of their patients' needs.

GP practice budget holders will of course have their freedom to refer increased because they will be able to negotiate their own preferred pattern of referral with hospitals and units using the taxpayers money at their disposal.

31. Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made on the implementation of the proposals in the White Paper, "Working for Patients".

Mr. Mellor: We are pleased to be able to say that good progress is being made on the implementation of our proposals for the Health Service. Consultation is taking place with a great many interested parties, including those representing medical opinion, and we are working with NHS managers to ensure smooth implementation. Progress includes:

receipt of 178 expressions of interest in self-governance from hospitals and other NHS services; publication of an initial guide on self-governing hospitals which has provided much more information about how self governing hospitals will operate;

the establishment of the new NHS management executive and the NHS policy board;

a major initiative to improve the quality of service is now under way; publication of a further working paper on the capital charging system;

the first 56 hospitals are now in the process of installing new information systems;

shortlisting for 90 FPC general manager posts is virtually complete and a number of appointments have already been made.

medical audit systems are being developed at a cost of £2 million this year; and bids for the 100 extra consultant posts promised in the White Paper are due at the end of July.

40. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how education and training will be affected by the proposals in the White Paper, "Working for Patients".

54. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the implications of the White Paper, "Working for Patients", for education and training.

Mr. Mellor: Since the White Paper "Working for Patients" was published, a number of working papers have been issued and these contain some further detail about training and education. The working paper, "Self-Governing Hospitals—An Initial Guide", advises that a consultation paper on training and education will be issued shortly, which will deal fully with these important issues.

65. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received directly from members of the public about the reforms of the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: We have received more than 5,000 representations directly from members of the public in respect of our proposals for the Health Service.

Nurses

15. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of nurses in the National Health Service at present; and what it was in 1979.

Mr. Mellor: Provisional figures show that at 30 September 1988 there were 404,000 whole-time equivalent nursing and midwifery staff (including agency staff) in the National Health Service in England. The comparable figure for September 1979 is 358,000 whole-time equivalents.

27. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of appeals by nurses with regard to regradings.

70. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of appeals by nurses with regard to regradings.

83. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of appeals by nurses with regard to regradings.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Members to my reply to the hon. Member for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross) earlier today.

General Practitioners (Contract)

16. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received about the new contract for general practitioners.

17. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on the proposed contract for general practitioners.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I met Mr. Michael Wilson and his negotiating team from the General Medical Services Committee yesterday.

The Government are proceeding with the preparation of the necessary amendments to regulations and to the GPs' statement of fees and allowances. Subject to Parliament's approval, the reforms to the GPs' contract will be introduced on 1 April 1990.

33. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will next be meeting the chairman of the British Medical Association to discuss progress on negotiations over the general practitioners' contract.

57. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will next be meeting the chairman of the British Medical Association to discuss progress on negotiations over the general practitioners' contract.

85. Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will next be meeting the chairman of the British Medical Association to discuss progress on negotiations over the general practitioners' contract.

88. Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will next be meeting the chairman of the British Medical Association to discuss progress on negotiations over the general practitioners' contract.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have no plans at present to meet the chairman of the British Medical Association on this subject, but I met the chairman of the General Medical Services Committee and his negotiating team on 24 July.

34. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the new general practitioners' contract will affect health promotion clinics and regular check-ups.

Mr. Mellor: The new contract will for the first time introduce a fee for GPs providing health promotion clinics. It will also require GPs to offer health check-ups to patients newly registering with them, and patients who have not seen their GP for three years.

41. Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the new general practitioners' contract will affect the performance of minor surgery by general practitioners.

89. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent general practitioners will be able to carry out minor surgery under the terms of the new general practitioners' contract.

Mr. Mellor: The new contract will for the first time introduce a fee for suitably qualified GPs who provide minor surgery services to patients. This will encourage the provision of minor surgery by GPs and relieve the pressure on out-patient departments.

45. Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the implications in the new general practitioners' contract for the assessment of the health care of young children.

Mr. Mellor: The new contract will for the first time introduce a fee for GPs who provide child health surveillance services to children on their lists, according to programmes agreed by the district health authority. There will also be new incentives to encourage GPs to help achieve high levels of coverage for childhood immunisations. District health authorities will continue to be responsible for monitoring health care services for young children, and GPs will be required to keep them fully informed of the services they provide. DHAs will work in close co-operation with family practitioner committees.

47. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the implications of the new general practitioners' contract for immunisation and screening policies.

Mr. Mellor: By introducing new payments linked to the achievement of specified levels of coverage for childhood immunisation and cervical cytology, the new contract will offer GPs a powerful incentive to help raise coverage among their patients.

48. Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how health care in deprived areas will be affected by the new general practitioners' contract.

60. Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the implications of the new general practitioners' contract for services in deprived areas.

Mr. Mellor: The new contract will help improve services in deprived areas. Changes to their remuneration system will encourage GPs to practise in areas of deprivation by recognising the special circumstances involved. In future family practitioner committees will be able to target funds for premises improvements and practice team expansion to improve services in these areas. The greater emphasis in the new contract on preventive care will mean that patients in deprived areas will benefit as GPs seek to improve the levels of protection against childhood diseases and cancer of the cervix.

67. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the implications of the new general practitioners' contract for health care for elderly patients.

79. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the new general practitioners' contract will affect health care for elderly patients.

Mr. Mellor: The new contract will lead to improved services to elderly people. As a result of changes to their terms of service and remuneration system GPs will have a powerful incentive to strive to provide them with the best possible care. There will be a significantly increased capitation free for patients over the age of 75, and in return for this GPs will be expected to offer annually a thorough health assessment, including a home visit if the patient wishes.

68. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the new general practitioners' contract will affect preventive health care.

71. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of how the new general practitioners' contract will affect preventive health care.

Mr. Mellor: The new contract forms an important part of our policy of encouraging health promotion and the prevention of ill-health. General practitioners' terms of service will make clear their role in these areas, and there will be new payments encouraging the provision of health promotion clinics, check-ups for newly registered patients and the achievement of high levels of coverage for cervical cancer screening and childhood immunisations.

90. Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the implications of the new general practitioners' contract for night visits by doctors.

Mr. Mellor: The hours during which a night visit fee may be claimed will be extended and a higher fee introduced for GPs who make their own visits or who arrange visits in a small rota of no more than 10 doctors. This will reward those doctors who ensure continuity of care to their patients during out-of-hours periods.

Hospices

18. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was provided by the Government in 1988-89 in grant to Help the Hospices.

Mr. Mellor: The Department made a grant of £400,000 on 9 March 1989 to Help the Hospices for distribution to local projects in short-term financial difficulty.

92. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost and nature of the support given by his Department to the hospice movement.

Mr. Mellor: During 1988-89 the Government made an additional £1·3 million available to health authorities to distribute as a contribution to the costs incurred by voluntary hospices due to the nurses' pay award. It also made a grant of £400,000 to Help the Hospices for distribution to local projects in short-term financial difficulty. In addition, the Government provided separate funding for the AIDS hospices at the Mildmay hospital and London Lighthouse, £256,000 and £208,000 respectively. The bulk of NHS support for hospices comes from local health authorities, which are best placed to judge how the contribution of voluntary bodies can be integrated with the other services for which they are responsible.

Smoking

20. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received about smoking.

Mr. Freeman: I receive a number of representations on this important subject, from a range of interested bodies.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the results of the 1988 Office of Population Censuses and Surveys survey of teenage smoking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The results of this survey were published yesterday in an Office of Population Censuses and Surveys report entitled "Smoking among secondary school children in England in 1988" [ISBN 0 11 691267 7]. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The results of the survey show that the decline in teenage smoking revealed by the 1986 survey has been confirmed, and there is evidence of a further decline in 1988. The prevalence of regular smoking among teenagers aged 11-15 is estimated at 7 per cent. for boys and 9 per cent. for girls. This is well below the level of 13 per cent. for both boys and girls seen in 1984. The results of this survey will be of great value in helping to determine the precise strategy to be used in the new teenage smoking campaign announced by the Prime Minister in January. This should encourage health workers, teachers and parents to continue their worthwhile efforts to persuade young people not to take up this dangerous habit.

Eye Tests

21. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on monitoring of the take-up of eye tests.

24. Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on monitoring of the take up of eye tests.

30. Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on monitoring of the take-up of eye tests.

35. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the monitoring of the take-up of eye tests.

Mr. Mellor: We intend to carry out a survey into the number of private sight tests later this year when the market has had time to become more stable.

NHS (Scientists)

22. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what urgent measures he is taking in order to solve the problems of recruitment and retention of scientists in the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: We understand that the management side of the Scientific and Professional Staffs Council has set up a working party to investigate the recruitment and retention of scientists in the NHS and is currently considering its findings.

Hospital Doctors

23. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on initiatives to reduce junior hospital doctors' hours.

39. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on initiatives to reduce the hours worked by junior hospital doctors.

51. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to reduce the hours worked by junior hospital doctors.

Mr. Mellor: The Government are committed to reducing further the onerous hours of some junior hospital doctors. There are two current initiatives. That launched in June 1988 aims to minimise the number of doctors with average weekly hours of duty in excess of 84. Interim reports from health authorities in January showed progress had been made but more needed to be done. The second initiative was launched earlier this month and involves studies to see whether the Government's long-term aim of 72 hours duty a week can be achieved within existing constraints. Final reports on both initiatives are due in October.

74. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of hospital doctors in the National Health Service now; and what it was in 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The information is in the table:

Figures, for England only, as at 30 September

| | 1979 | 1987 |
| Hospital medical staff | 41,736 | 46,394 |

No-fault Compensation

26. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's policy on the introduction of a no-fault compensation system for high-risk medical practitioners.

Mr. Mellor: The Department has no plans to introduce any kind of no-fault compensation scheme for medical practitioners. We consider that the basis for seeking compensation for injuries alleged to have been suffered as a result of medical negligence should continue to be through litigation in the courts.

British Medical Association

28. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association; and what subjects were discussed.

38. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will make a statement on his latest discussions with the British Medical Association regarding the White Paper, "Working for Patients."

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I last met the British Medical Association on 15 June when we talked about the Government's proposals for the Health Service. Although the BMA expressed opposition to some of the proposals, they continued to support a number of our planned reforms including medical audit, the principle of money following the patient, the extension of resource management and the greater involvement of doctors in management. Both sides expressed their unconditional support to the underlying principles of the Health Service.

64. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is now able to give an assessment of the current relations between his Department and the doctors within the British Medical Association membership.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Although I very much regret the hostile and unconstructive stance that the BMA as an association has taken towards our plans for the Health Service, I know that there is strong support for the principles on which our reforms for the Health Service are based and for many of our individual proposals among doctors in the hospital service and in general practice.

Hospitals (Self-governing Status)

29. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how public opinion is to be tested in Bradford over proposals for local hospitals to become self-governing trusts; and if he will make a statement.

84. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he is issuing to health authority on arrangements for public consultation where groups have expressed an interest in pursuing the opting out of individual hospitals.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that my right hon. and learned Friend gave to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) earlier today.

Hospital Patients (Discharge)

32. Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that health authorities adopt the hospital discharge practices outlined in circular HC (89) 5, "Discharge of Patients from Hospital".

Mr. Freeman: Circular HC(89)5 states that, in the light of the guidance held in the circular, district and special health authorities should report on action taken to their regional health authority or, in the case of special health authorities, to the Department by 31 March 1990.

Hospitals (West Midlands)

36. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has had any discussions with Sir James Ackers about his plans to redevelop the hospital system in the west midlands.

Mr Mellor: Yes, recent discussions have covered hospital services in Birmingham, for which the region has made proposals for reorganisation which are currently the subject of preliminary local consultation.

Wheelchairs (Leicestershire)

37. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of wheelchairs by the Leicestershire health authority.

Mr. Mellor: Provision of wheelchairs is a matter for the district health authority concerned and the hon. Member may care to contact the chairman of Leicestershire health authority for the information that he seeks.

Midwives (Grading)

42. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the number of settlements in the midwives' regrading dispute; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We do not collect this information centrally.

Doctors (Northern Region)

43. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met doctors in the northern region; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I was in Newcastle on 3 and 4 July for meetings to discuss the NHS White Paper "Working for Patients" and I met doctors on both occasions.

Patients (Bury)

44. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are being treated per year in the Bury district health authority; and how many were treated in 1979.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table.

Patients treated, NHS hospitals, Bury district health authority, 1979 and 1987-88

| | 1979 | 1987-88 | Percentage increase |
|---|---|---|---|
| In-patient cases treated | 17,768 | 23,130 | 30·2 |
| Day cases | 1,621 | 2,421 | 49·4 |
| New out-patients | 22,474 | 24,589 | 9·4 |
| Total out-patient attendances | 99,889 | 109,596 | 9·7 |

Source: Returns: SH3 (1979 data), SH3a, KH09 and KH18.

General Practitioners (Lists)

46. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest figure he has as to the average size of a general practitioner's list.

Mr. Mellor: The average list size in England for unrestricted principals at 1 October 1987 was 2,020, at 1 October 1978 it was 2,312. The provisional figure for 1 October 1988 is 1,999.

Performance Indicators

52. Mr. Neale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what conclusions he draws from work on analysing performance indicators.

Mr. Mellor: The booklet "Comparing Health Authorities" published by the Department in April 1988, copies of which are in the Library, gave examples of some of the conclusions drawn from work on analysing performance indicators. These include:

Cost per case for acute in-patient care: Even when standardised for specialty mix and the costs of teaching hospitals and London, this Indicator in 1986-87 showed that costs in some districts are more than 15 per cent. higher or lower than might be expected.

Length of stay: The Indicator for average length of stay in general surgery in 1986-87, standardised for age, sex and clinical condition, showed figures in some districts over 40 per cent. more than the national figure and in others more than 30 per cent. less. There are similar variations for other specialties.

Throughput: Throughput for general surgery in 1986-87 standardised for age, sex and diagnosis was in some districts over 40 per cent. higher than the national average and in others over 30 per cent. lower than the national average. There are similar variations in other specialties.

These show marked scope for improvements in performance by significant parts of the service.

56. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on establishing performance indicators.

81. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress in establishing performance indicators.

Mr. Mellor: Sets of performance indicators have now been published by the Department for 1983-84, 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87. Indicators have been increasingly important in review cycles establishing a key role in addressing variations in performance. Last year districts were asked to carry out an analysis of the four-year trend in their indicators and to report to their authority members. This underlined the role of indicators in the monitoring and management of services at the local level. Research completed in 1987 showed widespread acceptance and use of the indicators by all levels of Health Service management.

General Practitioners (Pay)

55. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the level of general practitioners' remuneration now; and what it was in 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The intended average net remuneration for general practitioners in 1989-90 is £31,105. For 1979-80 it was £12,830. These figures exclude GPs' reimburseable practice expenses.

Meat Tenderisers

58. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he plans any new studies on the effects on human health of eating meat treated with tenderisers.

Mr. Freeman: No new Government-funded studies on the effects on human health of eating meat treated with tenderisers are planned. I am not aware of any other studies in progress elsewhere.

Abortion

61. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to revise the financial regulation on private abortion clinics and their referring agencies.

Mr. Freemman: No.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many conceptions in 1986, 1987 and 1988 (a) led to maternities, (b) were terminated under the terms of the Abortion Act 1967 among residents of England and Wales aged 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 years, 22 to 24 years, 25 to 29 years, 30 to 34 years, 35 to 39 years and 40 years and over; and what percentage (a) represents of (b).

Mr. Freeman: Some conceptions occurring in 1988 would lead to maternities in 1989 and this information is not yet available. Data for 1986 and provisional data for 1987 are as follows. All pregnancies of women usually resident in England and Wales which led to a maternity or termination by abortion under the 1967 Act are included (and those which led to a spontaneous abortion are excluded).

Prescriptions

62. Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what form recent representations on the proposals regarding prescriptions in the National Health Service White Paper have taken.

Mr. Mellor: We have received a large number of representations in respect of the NHS White Paper plans for indicative drug budgets. These have come from a wide range of members of the community including GPs, community health councils, pharmaceutical companies, bodies representing patients suffering from chronic illness and members of the public. In response we have been able to provide unequivocal reassurances that indicative drug budgets will enable patients to receive all the drugs they require, that there will be no disincentive to GPs to accept patients requiring expensive courses of drug treatment and that there will be no change to the range or quality of appliances available to patients nor to the existing arrangements for certain categories of patients to receive free prescriptions.

Waiting Lists

63. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are currently on hospital waiting lists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The latest available figures are for 30 September 1988 and are contained in the booklet "Hospital In-patient Waiting Lists—England", a copy of which is in the Library.

66. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage reduction in the number of patients waiting longer than 12 months for an operation in the South Birmingham health authority area in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Mellor: Between September 1987 and September 1988 there was a 48 per cent. reduction in the number of patients waiting more than a year for treatment in the surgical specialties in the South Birmingham health authority.

Mental Patients

69. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about his Department's plans for provision of help to mental hospital patients.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health made to the House on community care on 12 July 1989, and to the written answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) on 13 July at columns 620-25.

NHS Staff (Information Skills)

73. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in training National Health Service staff in information skills.

80. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are for training National Health Service staff in information skills.

Mr. Mellor: On 28 June the NHS management executive and the NHS training authority launched a strategy for training Health Service staff in information management and technology. As part of this launch, we announced a programme of 20 centrally funded projects worth £4½ million to develop training courses and material in support of health authorities' implementation of the strategy.

The importance of training cannot be overemphasised. The NHS is becoming increasingly dependent upon accurate and timely information for the effective and efficient management of health services, both in the acute sector and in the community. This will inevitably mean larger numbers of more powerful computer-based information systems. The people who design and run the systems, those who put the data in and those who interpret and use the information they provide must all be trained if they are to do their jobs properly. The strategy will provide a very useful framework within which Health Authorities can make the arrangements that best suit their local needs.

General Practitioners

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners were under contract to the National Health Service in 1979; how much this cost; and what were the comparable figures in 1988.

75. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of general practitioners now; and what it was in 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The figures are as follows:

| Year on 31 October | 1979 | 1987 | [1]1988 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Number of unrestricted principals[2] | 21,357 | 24,992 | 25,322 |
| Cost of general medical services[3] (£ million) | 468 | 125 | 1,402 |

[2] Doctors in contract with FPCs in England to provide unrestricted services.

[3] Cost of the general medical services in England, excluding the cost of drugs and appliances prescribed by GPs and the administrative costs, for years 1979-80, 1987-88 and (provisional) 1988-89.

Centre for Applied Microbiological Research

76. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to review the future of the centre for applied microbiological research.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 19 July at columns 202-3.

Cook-chill Meals

77. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to monitor the effects of nutrient depletion on long-stay hospital patients whose diet comprises cook-chill meals.

Mr. Freeman: An expert group which recently reviewed the cook-chill guidelines concluded that, provided the guidelines are followed, food produced by the cook-chill method is as nutritious as food produced by conventional catering. Regional and district health authorities are responsible for monitoring hospital catering services.

Child Care

78. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the implications of the Children Bill [Lords] for child care.

Mr. Mellor: The Bill has been generally welcomed. Many detailed points have been considered during the Bill's progress in Parliament.

Consultants

86. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital doctors are currently qualified to become consultants.

Mr. Mellor: Appointment to consultant posts is made on the advice of advisory appointments committees. Appointments are normally made from the senior registrar grade. In 1987 there were 3,215 senior registrars in the hospital service in England, of whom 500 had been in the grade for four years or more.

Ancillary Services

87. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the Health Service trade unions to discuss the privatisation of ancillary services.

Mr. Freeman: The Government's policy is for NHS ancillary services to be subject to competitive tendering —not privatisation. Competitive tendering was among a number of topics discussed when my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State met the TUC health services committee on 1 March 1989.

Trent RHA (Resources)

91. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is satisfied that the resources available to the Trent regional health authority are sufficient to meet the needs of areas like that served by the Rotherham health authority.

Mr. Freeman: This year Trent regional health authority received a real terms increase in funding of 2·9 per cent. —higher than the national average increase of 2·7 per cent. The region subsequently received additional moneys to help meet the cost of the review body awards (£9·6 million) and NHS review implementation (£2·5 million). Allocation of funds to individual district health authorities is a matter for the regional health authority.

Phoenix House Trust

Mr. Michael Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what public funds have been given to the Phoenix House Trust in each of the years from 1986-88.

Mr. Freeman: The provision and funding of direct client services for drug misusers is the responsibility of the local statutory authorities and the Government have also provided them with special earmarked funds for drug services. However, under the central funding initiative set up by the Department in 1983 to pump-prime community-based services for drug misusers, Phoenix House received grants totalling over £1·1 million. Each grant was for a period of three years. In each of the years referred to by the hon. Member Phoenix House received the following amounts in support of its local residential rehabilitation facilities:—

| | £ |
|---|---|
| 1985-86 | 135,055 |
| 1986-87 | 404,276 |
| 1987-88 | 309,234 |
| 1988-89 | 59,000 |

I understand that Phoenix House has also received support from Home Office funds.

Artificial Limbs

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cash limit for the disablement services centre for 1989-90; what number of artificial limbs this was estimated to cover; how many have been produced since the beginning of the financial year to the latest available date; what contingency plans exist for continued production in the event of demand for these limbs outstripping expected quotas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The cash limit for the Disablement Services Authority for 1989-90 is £94·231 million. The authority is required to keep its total spending, of which expenditure on artificial limbs is a part, within this figure. Questions about the detail of its spending should be addressed to the authority.

Single European Act

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his assessment of the implications of the Single European Act in 1992 on the health care provided in Britain.

Mr. Mellor: The Single European Act (SEA) commits the European Community to the aim of progressively establishing a single market by the end of 1992. The provision of health care is not directly affected by the SEA and remains a domestic matter. There are however a number of proposals concerned with the free movement of goods, services and people throughout the Community, which may have an indirect effect on health. The main areas affected by European Community legislation and legislative processes are pharmaceuticals, medical equipment, tobacco products and the mutual recognition of professional qualifications.

Cyclotron Machines

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has requested an evaluation of the performance of the cyclotron machine at Clatterbridge hospital, the Wirral; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The treatment provided by this facility is being evaluated by the Medical Research Council, which will keep the Department informed of progress as appropriate.

Toxocariasis

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the number of people in England and Wales infected by dog-related toxocariasis; and how serious he estimates the threat of this disease to be to human beings.

Mr. Freeman: The provisional number of laboratory reports in 1988 from England, Wales and (all) Ireland to the Public Health Laboratory Service's communicable disease surveillance centre is 54. The seriousness of toxocariasis varies from mild pulmonary symptoms and fever to permanent loss of vision.

Erith Hospital

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning Erith hospital.

Mr. Freeman: Since the previous reply to my hon. Friend on 3 November 1988 at column 753, one letter has been received from him, two from another hon. Member, and one from a member of the public.

Community Services (Mentally Handicapped)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department has given to regional and district health authorities about risk-taking policies becoming part of the format for developing community services for people with a mental handicap.

Mr. Freeman: None. However, in respect of general provision for those with a mental handicap, "Needs and Responses" published in June 1989 draws attention to the need for all agencies participating in the provision of care for those with special needs to have jointly agreed guidelines on risk taking. A copy is in the Library.

Radiotherapy (Delays)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many National Health Service patients have been identified to have died because of delays in receiving radiotherapy doses due to (a) shortages of hospital physicists and (b) other causes.

Mr. Freeman: I am not aware of evidence of deaths attributable to these causes. If the hon. Member has a particular cause for concern, perhaps he will write to me.

Hospital Physicists

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital physicists there are; what are their pay scales; and what duties they perform.

Mr. Mellor: At 30 September 1987 there were 790 (whole-time equivalents) physicists employed in the NHS in England; the role of the medical physicist is very varied and the specific duties will depend on an individual's contract with his/her employing authority; the salary scales are as follows:

Pay scales as at 1 April 1988

Negotiations on a pay increase from 1 April 1989 are still continuing and an interim offer of 5 per cent. has been made.

Medicines Commission

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the annual report of the Medicines Commission for 1988.

Mr. Mellor: I have received the report and copies have today been laid before both Houses of Parliament in accordance with the requirements of section 5(2) of the Medicines Act 1968.

Bound volumes will shortly be placed in the Libraries containing the 1988 reports of the Medicines Commission, the Committee on Safety of Medicines, the Veterinary Products Committee, the British Pharmacopoeia Commission, the Commitee on the Review of Medicines and the Committee on Dental and Surgical Materials. The bound volumes include a record of the personal and non-personal interests in the pharmaceutical industry of members of these advisory bodies, with the exception of the Veterinary Products Committee for whom only personal interests are recorded.

I am glad to pay tribute to the valuable work done in the public interest by the distinguished members of the Medicines Act advisory bodies.

Care in the Community

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration has been given to the provision of housing alterations and adaptations for elderly and mentally disabled people being discharged into the community from long-stay hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Elderly and mentally disabled people are eligible for assistance for house alterations under the provisions of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, and are also eligible for help under the home improvement grant schemes run by local authorities. We would expect health authorities and local authorities to liaise as necessary over any adaptation needed for an eligible patient who is to be discharged.

Resource Management Initiative

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his Department's evaluation of the resource management initiative in hospitals.

Mr. Freeman: The Department intends to evaluate the resource management initiative in October 1989.

Health Service Commissioner

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the annual report of the Health Service Commissioner for 1988-89.

Mr. Mellor: The Health Service Commissioner has, as in previous years, made a report on the performance of his functions in England, Scotland and Wales. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales presented the report to the House on Thursday 13 July. It was published on 13 July (House of Commons Paper No. 457) and copies are available from the Vote Office.

Midwives

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what percentage the number of midwives working in the National Health Service has increased over the last 10 years; and by what percentage midwives' pay rates have increased since last year.

Mr. Mellor: There has been a 28 per cent. increase in the number of midwives working in the NHS in England in the 10 years up to September 1987. Midwives' pay rates have increased on average by over 28 per cent. since March last year.

Foetal Material (Research)

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is now in a position to publish the report of the committee set up last year to review the report of the advisory group on the use of foetal material and foetuses for research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Together with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales I am arranging for the report of the committee to review the guidance on the use of foetal material and foetuses for research (Cm. 762) to be published today. A copy has been placed in the Library. We are most grateful to the Rev. Dr. John Polkinghorne, FRS and his committee for producing their report on this complex and sensitive matter in just over a year.

The Government accept the Committee's main recommendations which are that:

> The use in research of foetuses showing signs of life is no longer in general to be permitted (the Peel code permitted this in certain circumstances);
> The mother's consent to the use of foetal tissue for research of therapy is required;
> The mother's consent for such purposes should not be sought until she has given her consent to the termination of pregnancy. She should not be informed of the specific use which may be made of foetal tissue, lest this may influence her decision to have her pregnancy terminated;
> The Government should begin negotiations with the Medical Research Council and relevant professional bodies with a view to setting up an intermediary body which would receive tissue for research or therapy from centres willing to provide it. Those wishing to undertake research or therapy involving foetal tissue would obtain it from this intermediary. The committee's recommendation is founded on the principle of keeping the practice of abortion separate from the use to which any tissue might be put.

The principal change proposed by the committee is a substantial revision of the guidance on the use of foetuses for research in the Peel report published in 1972 in the light of subsequent developments including the use of foetal tissue in transplants involving patients suffering from Parkinson's disease. Letters are being sent to all health authorities in Great Britain commending the use of the revised code in the NHS and to all proprietors of private sector facilities approved under section 2 of the Abortion Act 1967.

The Government will actively pursue the other recommendations in the report and in particular will shortly begin discussions with the Medical Research Council and the relevant professional bodies with a view to setting up the intermediary body which the committee recommends should become the sole agency in this country from which those wishing to carry out research or treatment involving the use of foetal tissue should obtain it. The committee recommended that its report should be kept under regular review with the professional bodies concerned. I will arrange for this to be done on a five-yearly basis.

Special Hospitals Service Authority

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs) on 3 July, Official Report, column 48, he is now able to provide details of the membership of the new Special Hospitals Service Authority.

Mr. Freeman: With the agreement of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department, we have decided that the authority's membership should reflect the Government's proposals for health authority membership in the White Paper, "Working for Patients". Accordingly, there will be five non-executive members, including the chairman, and four executive members—the chief executive, medical and nursing advisers and a finance director.

I am pleased to announce that Dr. Donald Dick, a consultant psychiatrist, a vice-president of the Royal College of Psychiatrists, and former director of the Health Advisory Service, and Mr. James Collier, a business consultant and former deputy secretary in my Department, have accepted my invitation to serve as members of the authority. The names of the two remaining non-executive members will be announced shortly, following further consultation with my right hon. Friend.

The executive members are to be appointed following open competition for the posts in question. The first of these appointments has now been made: Mr. Charles Kaye, currently district general manager, Basingstoke and North Hampshire health authority, will be joining the authority as its chief executive. Arrangements for the selection of the authority's other senior managers have been put in hand, and the outcome will be announced in due course.

I am also pleased to announce that, as a result of a selection process based on open competition, Dr. Diana Dickens has been appointed general manager, Rampton hospital and Mr. Alan Franey, general manager at Broadmoor hospital. The selection process for the appointment of general manager, Moss Side and Park Lane hospitals, is continuing and, until its completion, interim arrangements are being made for management of those hospitals.

Infectious Disease Reporting

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the operation of the system of infectious disease reporting set up under the Local Government Act 1974.

Mr. Freeman: The statutory basis for the system of infectious disease reporting in England and Wales is now contained in the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 and the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1988.

Medical practitioners are required to notify cases of certain infectious disease to local authority proper officers who are required to pass data on to other bodies including district health authorities and the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Serious outbreaks of disease and individual cases of particular diseases must also be reported to the chief medical officer. In practice surveillance of infectious disease in the population draws upon various sources of data apart from these notifications, for example school sickness records, general practitioner reports, laboratory reports, hospital data, death registration and local surveys.

We announced last July that we accepted the general principles advanced by the chief medical officer's report on "Public Health in England" and that we would be taking a number of steps to carry forward its recommendations. To this end the Department has set up a review of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984. We will be issuing a consultation paper later this year.

DEFENCE

Radiation

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent advice he has received from the National Radiological Protection Board with respect to recommendations for further studies on mortality and cancer incidents among British participants in United Kingdom atmospheric nuclear weapons tests and experimental programmes.

Mr. Sainsbury: On 28 January 1988 the NRPB, in collaboration with the Imperial Cancer Research Fund, published its epidemiological report on mortality and cancer incidence amongst British participants in the United Kingdom atmospheric nuclear weapons test programme. The report included data up to the first of January 1984. Since that time NRPB has continued to accumulate data on mortality and cancer incidence amongst both participants and the control group. The NRPB has now advised that, in order to provide a reliable assessment of the further accumulated data for the period 1 January 1984 to 1 January 1989, it will be necessary to conduct a full-scale validation and analysis exercise. Following this advice, we have decided to set in hand a further study as proposed by the NRPB and ICRF, which are the independent experts on these matters.

On the advice of the NRPB and ICRF, the methodology will be the same as that adopted for the original study. They hope to be in a position to report on this further study by the end of 1991, though this timetable is subject to any unforeseen difficulties they may encounter in the validation and analysis of the data.

The NRPB's recommendation and the decision to proceed with this further study are not based on any new and worrying evidence, but rather on a wish to be able to give a definitive statement on whether the overall picture has changed as a result of the further five years follow-up. The MOD and other Government Departments and agencies will, to the extent that it is available, provide all the information sought by the NRPB and ICRF in support of this further study.

EC (Defence Advisory Team)

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what briefing and assistance he is giving the defence advisory team set up by Mr. Delors, the European Commissioner.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are not aware of the existence of such a team.

Air-launched Missiles

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will outline options that are under consideration by the Government with regard to the procurement of an air-launched missile to replace the existing free-fall nuclear bombs.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill) on 17 July at column 71.

Warheads

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reduction in types of warhead and their numbers is envisaged by the statement made in paragraph 9 on page 12 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates, Cm. 675-1.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Any changes to the number of weapons mentioned in the Statement on the Defence Estimates will depend on modernisation decisions which have yet to be taken.

HERO Unsafe Weapons

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many weapons systems classified HERO unsafe in the possession of the United States armed forces are stored, transported or deployed in the United Kingdom or its territorial waters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I understand that there are no such systems present in the United Kingdom or its territorial waters.

EMR Emitters

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what account is taken of the locations of large EMR emitters such as radio, telephone and television transmitters, when the storage, transportation or deployment of weapons is involved.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My Department maintains a computer data base of all high intensity radio transmitting areas in the United Kingdom. This information is taken into account in all decisions involving the storage, transportation, or deployment of weapons.

United States Forces (Payments)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the estimated total amounts of official payments by the United States forces in the United Kingdom to British firms and agencies other than central Government plus private expenditure by United States personnel in the United Kingdom, for each financial year since 1979-80; and if he will make a statement on trends in these figures in this period.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The estimated expenditure by the United States forces on purchases made directly from the private sector, including personal expenditure, is as follows:

| | £ million |
|---|---|

Defence Estimates

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will state the reasons for the increases in project cost and the extension of the period of peak expenditure for the type 23 frigates, set out in the major equipment projects tables in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989" and the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988";

(2) what are the reasons for the increase in project cost for the GWS26 Mod 1 vertical launch Sea Wolf missile system, set out in the major equipment projects tables in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989" and the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988".

Mr. Sainsbury: The Statement on the Defence Estimates tables show the cost and peak expenditure periods of projects on order or in clear prospect at the time the information was compiled. The Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989 therefore takes into account a larger number of type 23 frigates and VLSW missile systems than that in the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the reasons for the increase in expenditure between 1988-89 and 1989-90 in the category "Extramural research: Overseas", set out in table 3.3 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989" volume two.

Mr. Sainsbury: The difference between the 1988-89 and 1989-90 Estimates in the overseas category of extramural research in table 3.3 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989, volume (Cm 675-II) arises principally from the payment through Defence Votes of the United Kingdom's contribution to the European trans-sonic wind tunnel (ETW) which has now entered the construction phase.

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all alterations made to low flying avoidance areas and transit areas since August 1988, giving in each case the date of the alteration and the reason for the alteration.

Mr. Neubert: No. It is not our practice to publish detailed information on the United Kingdom low flying system. The system is, however, kept under continuous review and minor changes are made frequently, to improve the operation of the system and to take account of new developments.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the percentage increase in 1988 in the airspace over land in the United Kingdom which is available for military low flying.

Mr. Neubert: I regret that the information requested by the hon. Member is not available.

Frigate Project

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the up-to-date progress of the NATO frigate project; and how much money his Department has spent on this so far.

Mr. Sainsbury: The contract for project definition was signed in January and is expected to take two years to complete.

The next milestone is a review of progress by all eight NATO nations during this autumn, when the United Kingdom will also consider the alignment between the programmes for the ship and its major weapons systems.

My Department's expenditure to June 1989 amounts to approximately £4·5 million.

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has received any recent representations about pilot or permanent workplace creches and similar incentives further to encourage the return to employment of women in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are planning to establish in 1990 a nursery for the children of staff working in central London. We are also considering what might be done to provide child care in other locations throughout the United Kingdom.

Other policies designed to encourage the return to employment of women working in the MOD are:

More flexible working patterns at all levels (for example part-time work and job sharing).

combining working in the home and in the office.

the granting of up to 5 years maternity leave.

"Keeping in Touch" schemes, involving periods of casual work, for staff on temporary absence from the Department.

the use of unpaid leave to allow for care of children during school holidays.

Aldermaston (Flooding)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the recent flooding of the atomic weapons research establishment at Aldermaston; whether underground bunkers and the underground railway were flooded; and to what extent research programmes were interrupted or adversely affected.

Mr. Sainsbury: Heavy local rainfall on 6 July 1989 caused minor flooding in some buildings at the atomic weapons establishment, Aldermaston. Research programmes were not significantly interrupted or adversely affected.

Flight Simulators

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flight simulators are available to the Royal Air Force; when they entered service; and which aircraft they simulate.

Mr. Neubert: A total of 43 simulators are available to the RAF as follows:

| Aircraft type | Numbers | Entered service |
|---|---|---|
| Air Combat | 1 | 1986 |
| Buccaneer | 2 | pre-1975 |
| Chinook | 1 | Time hired on a commercial system |
| Harrier GR3 | 2 | pre-1975 |
| Harrier GR5 | 1 | Time hired from Spanish airforce |
| Hawk | 3 | 1977 |
| Hawk | 2 | 1978 |
| Hercules | 1 | 1983 |
| Hercules | 1 | 1984 |
| Hercules | 1 | 1985 |
| Jaguar | 3 | pre-1975 |
| Jet Provost | 4 | pre-1975 |
| Jetstream | 1 | 1977 |
| Nimrod | 3 | pre-1975 |
| Phantom | 3 | pre-1975 |
| Puma | 1 | Time hired on commercial simulator |
| Tornado F3 | 4 | 1988 |
| Tornado GR1 | 1 | 1982 |
| Tornado GR1 | 2 | 1983 |
| Tornado GR1 | 1 | 1984 |
| Tornado GR1 | 1 | 1985 |
| Tristar—500 | 1 | Time hired on commercial simulator |
| VC10 C1 | 1 | 1987 |
| VC10 K1 | 1 | 1987 |
| Victor | 1 | pre-1975 |

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his policy towards the use of flight simulators by the aircrew of the Royal Air Force; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what studies his Department has carried out to determine the extent to which low flying training may be sustained by the use of flight simulators.

Mr. Neubert: Simulation is an important element in training military pilots, particularly in procedures, instrument flying and cockpit familiarisation. The extent to which low flying training might be substituted by the use of simulators is kept under review but simulators currently in service with the Royal Air Force do not reproduce the necessary environment with sufficient fidelity to provide an adequate substitute for low level tactical flying training.

Armour Piercing Weapons

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreements his Department has entered into with the United States Government to develop jointly a hand-held armour piercing weapon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: None. There has, however, been a discussion between officials on the possible benefits of an exchange of data.

Laser Systems

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department intends to place orders for multiple integrated laser engagement systems for use by the Army; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are looking into the requirement and suitable procurement arrangements for this type of training equipment for the British Army. We expect that the decision on whether to proceed will be made before the end of the year.

Lodging Allowances

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each rank of serving officer in the armed forces between the rank equivalent to an army captain and a major-general, inclusive, the lodging etc. allowances payable to those having to rent accommodation in London while serving in the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Neubert: Personnel for whom no public accommodation is available, and who are therefore required to rent accommodation, are paid lodging allowance as follows:

| | £ per day | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Rank | Rate A | Rate B | Rate C |
| Captain or equivalent | 20·11 | 14·33 | 18·81 |
| Major and Lieutenant Colonel or equivalents | 22·54 | 16·76 | 21·24 |
| Colonel and above, or equivalents | 25·62 | 19·84 | 24·32 |

Notes:

1. A rates of lodging allowance are payable to personnel who would be eligible for free food and accommodation if they were occupying service single accommodation. As virtually all personnel are required to pay a food charge, rate A is mainly used as the basis for calculating rates B and C.

2. B rates are payable to personnel who, if they were occupying public single accommodation, would be required to pay food and accommodation charges.

3. C rates are payable to those married unaccompanied personnel who, if they were occupying public single accommodation, would be required to pay the married unaccompanied rate of food charge but would be eligible for free accommodation.

Environmental Pollution

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the environmental effects of the production, use, storage and ultimate disposal of nuclear fuels for the United Kingdom's naval forces.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 13 July 1989]: The environmental effects of the production, use, storage and ultimate disposal of nuclear fuels for the United Kingdom's naval forces are negligible. Radioactive discharges to the environment that lie within United Kingdom jurisdiction, whether made by contractors associated with the programme or by the Royal Navy itself, comply with authorisations from, or agreements with, the Department of the Environment or the Scottish Development Department. These authorisations and agreements are set so that discharges within the limits they permit have no detrimental effect on any human beings. Radioactive discharges made by nuclear submarines on the high seas are governed by naval regulations that have the same effect.

Joint Tactical Information Distribution

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what study he has made of the cost of providing joint tactical information distribution system terminals for (a) the Tornado air defence variant aircraft, (b) Invincible class aircraft carriers and (c) Type-42 destroyers.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer Monday 17 July 1989]: Studies of the cost of integrating JTIDS into the Tornado ADV have been undertaken and work is now proceeding concurrently with the full development phase of the JTIDS project.

Project definition studies on the RN variant of JTIDS for the CVSA and type 42 classes are currently being undertaken in industry. Estimates of the costs of the system will be submitted upon completion of the PD phase.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Action Trust (Southwark)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his policy on the eviction of squatters in the event of the proposed housing action trust being created on the Gloucester grove or North Peckham estates in Southwark;

(2) whether there will be any limitations on the time the proposed housing action trust in Southwark could continue to exist.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: As I told the hon. Member in my replies to her on Thursday 20 July, one of the primary statutory objects of a housing action trust would be to secure the proper and effective management and use of the housing for which it was responsible. It would be for a trust to decide how to deal with problems of unlawful occupation of property by squatters.

Craven Cottage Football Ground

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received from Hammersmith and Fulham council the compulsory purchase order and supporting evidence relating to Craven Cottage football ground; and when he intends to hold the inquiry to consider the council's compulsory purchase order.

Mr. Chope: The compulsory purchase order was received from Hammersmith and Fulham council on 30 May. An inquiry is being arranged.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he accepts the claims made by the Association for the Conservation of Energy about United Kingdom emissions of carbon dioxide; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Estimates of United Kingdom emissions of carbon dioxide since 1977 were published in the "Digest of Environmental Protection Statistics", No. 11, in February this year. They do not support the figures quoted by the Association for the Conservation of Energy (ACE). United Kingdom emissions were only 1 per cent. higher in 1987 compared with 1986. This is still 10 per cent. lower than in 1979. An initial estimate of the emissions for 1973 shows that they were about 14 per cent. higher than at present, not 20 per cent. lower as claimed.

Local Polls

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what provisions permit local authorities to conduct local ballots, polls or referenda on issues of local concern; and under what conditions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are specific provisions for parish polls in England and Wales on questions arising at parish meetings, where 10 electors (or one third of the electors for the parish, if that is less) so demand.

The provisions are in paragraphs 18, 21 and 22 of schedule 12 to the Local Government Act 1972 and the Parish Community Meetings (Polls) Rules 1987 (SI1987, No. 1).

For other local authorities, there are no specific provisions.

Debate (Information)

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on which date he drew to the attention of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry the information which had been given to the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment by the hon. Members for Bexhill and Battle (Mr. Wardle) and for Eastbourne during a debate in the House on 26 May, Official Report, columns 1291 and 1292; and what further action has been taken.

Mr. Moynihan: I wrote to my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs at the Department of Trade and Industry on 7 June drawing his attention to the information provided by the hon. Members during the debate on 26 May. It is for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, who has responsibility for such matters, to decide what action to take on the basis of this information.

Sewage Discharges

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report, those sewage treatment works in the North West water authority which have failed to meet their discharge consents during the last 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mr. Howard: In 1988 90 per cent. of sewage treatment works in the North West water authority area complied with the terms of their discharge consents. Those which did not are as follows:

Adlington
Appleby
Ashley
Ayside
Barrow in Furness (Palace N)
Beston
Beetham
Betley
Bolton
Brigham
Chorley No.1
Crooklands
Delamere
Dunkinfield
Eaglesfield
Failsworth
Fazakerley
Gamblesby
Glenridding
Hesketh Bank
High Leigh
Hillhouse
Horton-in-Ribblesdale
Hyde
Irlam
Kendal
Langwathby
Nether Eover
Ormskirk
Pardshaw
Prescot
Ravenstonedale
Rowrah
Skelmersdale
Strines
Talkin
Thornton Hough
Utkinton (Quarry Bank)
Wardle
Weeton
Wigan
Windergill
Worsley

The North West water authority has in hand a major capital expenditure programme designed to bring substandard sewage treatment works into compliance with their discharge consents by March 1992, wherever practicable.

Emergency Work

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he gives as to what constitutes emergency work under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980.

Mr. Gummer: There are no provisions relating to emergency work in the 1980 Act.

Polluters

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date members of the public were given the right to prosecute polluters.

Mr. Howard: Members of the public were given the right to prosecute polluters of rivers by sections 31 and 32 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974, which were brought into force by the present Government on 31 January 1985. This right is contained in the Water Act 1989.

Unoccupied Property Rating

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a list of all types of hereditament which will be exempt from unoccupied property rating after 1 April 1990; and when he anticipates making regulations to bring these exemptions into effect;

(2) what proposals he has to exempt occupiers of empty industrial premises from payment of the national non-domestic rate after April 1990.

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment intends to consult shortly on draft regulations, to be made in final form in the autumn, to replicate from 1 April 1990 the exemption from unoccupied property rating of those hereditaments which are currently exempt from such rates under paragraph 2(a) to (d) of schedule 1 to the General Rate Act 1967, the Rating (Exemption of Unoccupied Industrial and Storage Hereditaments) Regulations 1985 (SI No. 258) and the Rating (Exemption of Unoccupied Property) Regulations 1967 (SI No. 954).

Housing

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report, the market value of (a) all privately owned housing stock and (b) all publicly owned housing stock in England and Wales at the latest available date, indicating the amount it would be necessary to charge each householder to finance local government expenditure at current levels on the assumption that rate support grant levels remain static, should capital value taxation be introduced.

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State for the Environment placed in the Library on 19 July a table showing the capital value rate which could have applied in each local authority area in 1989-90 if introduced in conjunction with a local income tax. These are based on an assumed domestic rateable value in England of £1,200 billion.

"Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics"

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many copies of the "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics" have been (a) distributed and (b) sold in each year since 1979; and what efforts are made by his Department to ensure copies are placed in public, school and college libraries.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The latest estimates of the number of copies of the "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics" distributed and sold since 1978, when the digest was first published, are as follows:

| Issue number | Year | Distributed | Sold |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | 1978 | 1,732 | 1,332 |
| 2 | 1979 | 1,196 | 746 |
| 3 | 1980 | 1,082 | 682 |

| Issue number | Year | Distributed | Sold |
|---|---|---|---|
| 4 | 1981 | 818 | 568 |
| 5 | 1982 | 863 | 613 |
| 6 | 1983 | 879 | 629 |
| 7 | 1984 | 843 | 543 |
| 8 | 1985 | 1,011 | 596 |
| 9 | 1986 | 1,233 | 833 |
| 10 | 1987 | 1,096 | 716 |
| 11 | 1988 | 1,235 | [1]835 |

[1] Final sales likely to reach 1,000 and a reprint may be required.

There are over 250 regular purchasers of the digest, some of which are school and college libraries. The digest is listed in the Department of the Environment's annual list of publications, which is sent to all local authorities, and HMSO's sectional list No. 5, Department of the Environment. It is advertised in Social Trends and steps are being taken to publicise the volume in professional librarian journals.

"Solving the Greenhouse Dilemma"

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received a copy of the report entitled "Solving the Greenhouse Dilemma", published by the Association for the Conservation of Energy on 2 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We were interested to receive the report as a contribution to the current wide-ranging debate on the greenhouse effect.

We, together with other Government Departments, will be considering this report as well as other proposals, as part of the intergovernmental panel on climate change.

"Inside the Poison Trade"

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to obtain a copy of the video tape and transcript of the UNEP sponsored programme, entitled "Inside the Poison Trade" on hazardous and toxic waste disposal, for the departmental library.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no plans to do so.

Local Finance (Waltham Forest)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will tabulate in relation to the London borough of Waltham Forest how much revenue would be raised from the individuals resident in the borough assuming (a) a system of capital value rates plus local income tax paid in proportions of 80-20, (b) the existing system of rates and (c) the community charge; and how much Government grant would be given in each case.

Mr. Gummer: The amount raised in any area with a system of capital value rates plus local income tax would depend on the tax rates set. It is possible to calculate tax rates which would apply in each area from a comparison of grant-related expenditure and actual spending. The implication of these tax rates for specimen individuals, with defined incomes and property values, can then be assessed. I have published figures on this basis which are consistent with the illustrative 1989-90 community charge and with current levels of domestic rates.

I cannot estimate how much would be raised from the residents in any one local authority area if a system of capital value rates combined with local income tax were in force. This is because data are not available for each local authority area for either the capital value of domestic properties or the taxable income of residents.

Based on the illustrative 1989-90 community charge levels placed in the Library on 19 July, the amount raised from the full community charge in Waltham Forest could have been up to £56 million. But part of this amount would have been met by the Exchequer through community charge benefit payments. The figure comparable with the present system of domestic rates is £51 million.

In 1989-90 illustrative community charges assume a standard spending grant of £78 million for Waltham Forest residents. In 1989-90 rate support grant payable to Waltham Forest amounted to £83 million. In addition, Waltham Forest residents presently benefit from grant paid to the Receiver for the Metropolitan police district and the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority.

With both the current system and the community charge the Government also provide additional amounts to the poorest in each area in the form of rebates to reduce their payments to the local authority. Specific grants are also paid to fund certain areas of local authority spending and other Government grants are paid from a variety of programmes.

Gipsy Sites

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many meetings his Department has convened of representatives of local authorities from Yorkshire to discuss strategy for gipsy site provision on a regional or sub-regional basis in each of the last five years; if he will list the participating local authorities; and when the next such meeting is scheduled to take place;

(2) if he will make it his policy to ensure that officials of his Department visit the permanent gipsy sites within the city of Bradford metropolitan district council before he takes any decision on any application Bradford council may submit for designation of such sites.

Mr. Trippier: Officials have meetings with representatives of county and district councils in Yorkshire jointly and individually as required to discuss gipsy site provision. Meetings drawing together representatives from local authorities throughout the country are also held regularly to discuss gipsy issues.

Officers from the Department have visited the City of Bradford metropolitan district council's gipsy site at Mary street and plane to see the one in Esholt in the near future.

Town and Country Planning

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is proposing to introduce legislation to consolidate the statutes relating to town and country planning before he introduces legislation to abolish structure plans.

Mr. Chope: I understand that the Law Commission does not now expect to finish preparing the consolidation of the planning Acts in time for introduction during the current parliamentary Session. I cannot anticipate when legislation relating to development plans might be introduced, but we are bearing in mind the interaction of these legislative proposals with each other.

Community Charge, Lambeth

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the likely level of poll tax in Lambeth from 1 April 1990 on the assumption that patterns of expenditure in the current year by Lambeth and the Inner London education authority do not change.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax.

To estimate a 1990-91 community charge on the assumptions suggested by the hon. Member would be misleading, because there will be changes in local government responsibilities which will alter expenditure patterns. Based on current responsibilities, the illustrative full community charge in Lambeth for 1989-90 is £543.

Rating Reform

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is yet able to indicate the projected average poll tax for England based on 1989-90 local expenditure figures; and which local authorities would be above or below that figure.

Mr. John Gummer: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax.

Figures placed in the Library on 19 July show the illustrative community charge in each English local authority based on 1989-90 rate levels. The average is £274.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the likely level of poll tax in (a) Burnley, (b) Pendle, (c) Rossendale, and (d) Hyndburn as from 1 April on the assumption that current patterns of expenditure are maintained within those boroughs and by Lancashire county council.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax.

I have made no estimate of the likely level of community charge in any area. Illustrative 1989-90 community charge levels were placed in the Library on 19 July.

Planning

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to introduce legislation to strengthen the present provisions in the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 for planning enforcement in line with the recommendations contained in the Carnwath report.

Mr. Howard: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply on 24 May to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) Official Report, volume 153, column 942.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his holding answer of 26 June, when he intends to provide a substantive answer to the hon. Member for East Kilbride about the refurbishment and redevelopment of empty property held by the Property Services Agency.

Mr. Chope: I have replied to the hon. Member today.

Boundary Commission

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the Boundary Commission to complete its review of the London borough boundaries.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Local Government Boundary Commission must complete its reviews by 31 March 1992. Apart from that date, the rate of progress is a matter for the commission.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the Boundary Commission to publish recommendations regarding the boundary of the London borough of Bexley.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is its statutory duty to complete the review by 31 March 1992. The rate of progress is a matter for the commission. I understand that the commission is considering separately the boundaries between the London borough of Bexley and the boroughs of Dartford, Bromley and Greenwich. They published draft proposals on the boundary with Dartford on 11 July 1988, and one small further draft proposal on 10 July 1989; they published draft proposals on the boundary with Bromley on 29 May 1989. They intend to hold a local meeting in connection with the boundary with Greenwich (at Thamesmead) in the autumn, which may result in draft proposals.

London Boroughs (Staff)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the increase or decrease in staff employed by each of the London boroughs since May 1986; if he will publish any such information in the Official Report in tabular form; and if he will make an estimate of the contribution the increased payroll in the London borough of Hillingdon makes to overspending per adult.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The total numbers of full and part-time staff employed by each London borough are collected quarterly and published in table H of the joint staffing watch (until recently the joint manpower watch) press notice available in the Library of the House. No estimate is available of the contribution of Hillingdon's increased payroll to overspend per adult.

Regent's Park

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many deck chairs are available in Regent's park; how much they cost to hire and what were the equivalent figures in and for each year since 1979-80.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are approximately one hundred deckchairs in Regent's park. The cost per half-day session is 35p. Figures for the number of deckchairs in previous years are not available because the number of chairs provided is left to the discretion of the contractor. Hiring costs in previous years were as follows:

| Year | pence |
|---|---|
| 1979 | 20 |
| 1982 | 25 |
| 1984 | 30 |
| 1986 | 35 |

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the financial and other status of Zoo Operations Ltd. in considering London Zoo's proposals for changes in Regent's park.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Zoological Society of London's current proposals for changes follow a full review of the society's finances and zoo operations carried out in 1987-88 by consultants employed jointly by the Government and the society. The Government's conclusions on that review were announced on 11 May last year. We shall await the Zoological Society of London's detailed proposals for the further 10 acres. Zoo Operations Limited is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Zoological Society of London.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is Her Majesty's Government's policy concerning the renewal of leases of private demesnes in the centre of Regent's park and the addition of such land to the park for the benefit of the public; when this policy was determined; and what was the policy which it replaced.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Private properties leased in Regent's park are owned by the Crown Estate and, apart from Regent's college, are not generally open to the public. Two areas of Regent's park—the zoological gardens and the golf and tennis school which are both open to the public on payment of a fee—are occupied on lease from the Department of the Environment. This division of responsibility is based on the provisions of the Crown Lands Act 1936 and the Crown Estate Act 1961.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what restrictions he has suggested to London Zoo concerning the location of any land that it takes over under the Crown Estate Act 1961.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Crown Estate Act 1961 gives the Secretary of State power to grant up to 10 acres of neighbouring land. We await the Zoological Society of London's detailed proposals. Any new boundaries will have to be carefully landscaped by the society to minimise the impact on the park.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that London Zoo's rights in Regent's park under the Crown Estate Act 1961 are not assigned to any other body.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The current lease precludes the Zoological Society of London from underletting any part of its premises in Regent's park except for temporary use by a society or organisation with purposes similar to the society's. The new lease will include a similar restriction.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether any lessees of land in Regent's park besides London Zoo have made proposals to him to charge for access to any part within the outer canal.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The only other holder of a lease in Regent's park from my Department is the golf and tennis school which already charges for the use of its facilities. Companies also hold licences to operate and charge for recreational and refreshment facilities. Other organisations and individuals occupy property on lease from the Crown Estate.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether (a) the Crown Estate and (b) the occupants of St. John's lodge, Regent's Park lane, proposed taking in any part of the park other than that required to change the public access to the public gardens behind the lodge.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Crown Estate made an informal inquiry to my Department in relation to the reinstatement of the original gardens of St. John's lodge as set out by John Nash. The Crown Estate was told that a formal request would not be looked on favourably and this has been accepted.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the land at Gloucester slips car park is included in the 10 acres of land in Regent's park of which the London Zoo may claim use under the Crown Estate Act 1961.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who is currently responsible for deck chairs in Regent's park.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The contract for the deck chair service is currently operated by J. H. Kesslers Limited.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his agreement to the London Zoo taking over the Gloucester slips car park in Regent's park was by lease; and on what date any agreement was signed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Zoological Society of London took over management of the Gloucester slips coach and car park under licence and not by lease on 1 April 1989. The terms of the licence will be finalised shortly.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the assumed contributions to local expenditure for each authority from (a) Government funds and (b) business rates in the tables contained in the document "1989-90 Illustrative Capital Value Rates and Local Income Tax" published on 19 July.

Mr. Gummer: The illustrative capital value rates and local income tax figures published on 19 July assume that Government funds and business rates are distributed to achieve full equalisation of tax rates. This means that in every area the same tax rates would apply if all local authorities were spending at the level needed to provide a standard level of services. The level of grant entitlement would vary if expenditure were at a different level in order to ensure that each £1 per head of additional spending in any area would lead to exactly the same change in tax rates. Areas with high average house values and high average taxable incomes would receive less grant with higher spending, while areas with low taxable resources would receive more grant with higher spending.

Costs

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the cost of answering the question from the hon. Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) 19 July, Official Report, columns 215-6.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total cost of producing and distributing the document published by his Department on 19 July entitled "1989-90 Illustrative Capital Value Rates and Local Income Tax."

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Grocott) on 24 July 1989.

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any recent representations about pilot or permanent workplace creches and similar incentives futher to encourage the return to employment of women in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: My Department is considering possible initiatives providing child care for its staff which they, and their union representatives, have supported.

Local Authority Finance

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how, in the new local government finance system, he intends that the relevant population of each charging authority in England should be calculated for the purposes of determining revenue support grant and non-domestic rate entitlement and for dividing precepts among charging authorities.

Mr. Gummer: I told the Consultative Council for Local Government Finance on 12 July that following representations from the local authority associations we now intend that the relevant population should be calculated from data supplied from community charge registers. We intend to take powers in the Local Government and Housing Bill to facilitate this. These data will, we believe, provide the most appropriate record of the adult population in an area liable to pay the community charge. We shall make provision for those occasions when the necessary information is not provided by a local authority. We also intend to make provision to enable the Secretary of State to substitute an alternative figure where there is doubt that the figure derived from the register is a realistic estimate of an area's adult population. For this purpose we propose that an alternative be adopted where the register figure differs from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys' estimate of the area's adult population by more than a defined percentage.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the results of consultation on the harmonisation of the decapitalisation rate used for rating assessment in Great Britain that he announced on 7 March.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have considered carefully the responses received to our proposal to set the decapitalisation rate for property valued by reference to the cost of construction somewhere in the range of 6 per cent. to 7 per cent. Respondents recognised that a common decapitalisation rate throughout Great Britain will assist in the harmonisation of rating. However, they generally argued that a figure as high as 7 per cent. overstated the relationship between the decapitalisation rate and the 1988 cost of borrowing to finance construction. We have therefore decided to set the rate at 6 per cent. for most property, with a lower rate of 4 per cent. applying to educational property—schools, universities, polytechnics and to colleges of further and higher education provided by local authorities and non-profit making bodies; this rate will also apply to hospitals and certain other health establishments. The necessary regulations will be made later this year.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland is giving further consideration to the rates to be applied to sports grounds, amateur sports clubs and to church property valued on the contractors basis in Scotland.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he provides (a) to parents about the eligibility of their children aged 18 or 19 years or over, who are required to remain in secondary education, to pay poll tax and (b) to young people, who leave secondary education after their 18th or 19th birthdays and are granted places as students at institutions of higher or further education, about their liability to pay a full personal poll tax between leaving school and entering university or college; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 20 July 1989]: No one has any liability to pay a poll tax as no such tax exists or is planned. Guidance on individuals' community charge liability is contained in the Department's free booklet "You and the Community Charge" and the associated series of free leaflets including that entitled, "Students".

Nature Conservancy Council

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many full-time staff are employed by the Nature Conservancy Council in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland; how many contract staff are employed in each country; and how many staff are employed by the Nature Conservancy Council pursuing (i) Great Britain or (ii) international functions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 24 July 1989]: Details of the numbers of staff employed by the NCC and their location within the organisation at 1 July 1989 are as follows:

| Location | Permanent staff | Contract staff |
|---|---|---|
| England HQ and regions | 281 | 189 |
| Wales HQ and regions | 88 | 44 |
| Scotland HQ and regions | 160 | 87 |
| Great Britain HQ[1] | 258 | 132 |
| International branch | 5 | — |

[1] Except International branch.

Directorate of Rural Affairs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number and gradings of his officers who are currently working in the directorate of rural affairs; and whether he proposes any increases following the changes announced to the Nature Conservancy Council and Countryside Commission.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: There are currently 99 staff working in the Department's directorate of rural affairs. The grades of these staff are as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Grade 3 | 1·0 |
| Grade 5 | 3·0 |
| Grade 6 | 2·0 |
| Grade 7 | 11·5 |
| SEO/SPTO | 9·0 |
| HEO | 16·0 |
| EO | 18·0 |
| AO | 26·0 |
| AA | 12·5 |
| | 99·0 |

These figures include one additional SEO who has already been allocated to assist in work concerned with reorganising the conservation agencies. Further adjustments will be made if necessary.

Funeral Services

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in the light of comments in paragraph 417 of the 1988-89 report by the Local Government Ombudsman, he has any plans to ban unfair trading practices in respect of funeral services by certain local councils.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Behaviour such as that of Wear Valley district council, both in maladministration by discriminating between local traders and in refusing to implement the local ombudsman's recommendations for compensation, is unacceptable. However, on the information available, what appears to have occurred is an abuse of the council's power to provide information rather than any unfair trading practice.

Landfill Gas Sites

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the top 20 landfill gas sites in England and Wales by acreage.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 July 1989]: Information concerning the acreage of landfill sites is not held centrally.

Caravan Sites Act 1968

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the operation of the Caravan Sites Act 1968.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 July 1989]: My right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 6 February 1987 that a review of the Act had been completed and that there was to be no amendment of the present law. We are concerned to assist and encourage authorities to fulfil their duties under the Act as quickly as possible.

Residuary Bodies

Mr. Terry Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what procedures exist to facilitate public scrutiny of the accounts of residuary bodies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 July 1989]: Section 79 of the Local Government Act 1985 requires residuary bodies to make their accounts available for public inspection.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those empty properties which are rented, leased or owned by the Property Services Agency and which are being considered for refurbishment or redevelopment to allow reoccupation by a Government Department and the probable date of reoccupation.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 26 June 1989]: The list is as follows:

Schedule of empty properties rented, leased or owned by the PSA undergoing or being considered for refurbishment or redevelopment to allow re-occupation by a Government Department

Property
Godwin House, George Street, Huntingdon
Chaucer House, Upper Marlborough Road, St. Albans
Caledonian House, 39/61 St. Albans Road, Watford
87 Burlington Road, New Malden, Surrey
St. Mary's Gate, Chesterfield
22 and 29 The Springs, Wakefield
Sheriff Court House, Castle Street, Aberdeen
Norfolk House, East Kilbride
Hut Number 3, Chaucer Barracks, Canterbury
Shire Hall, Shuttern, Taunton
Clarence Street, Swindon
Telford House, Park Gardens, Yeovil
Portcullis House, Lagland Street, Poole
Reading Courts, The Forbury, Reading

The agency aims to bring vacant space back into re-occupation as soon as possible.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Civil Servants (Resignations)

3. Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants of assistant secretary level and above have resigned from the Civil Service in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Ryder: Numbers of civil servants of unified grade 5 (assistant secretary equivalent) and above who have resigned from the Civil Service in each of the last 10 years are shown in the table. The numbers of resignations each year represent less that 2½ per cent. of the total staff numbers.

Unified grades 1 to 5

Import Penetration

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each industry listed in the tables given in replies to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby, 14 November 1988, Official Report, columns 401-2 and 412, concerning import penetration in certain industries, the increase in the volume of imports and exports to the four areas between 1979 and 1987 together with the gross and net fixed capital investments.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

Constant price trade-by-industry data are not available on an area basis. Detailed information on fixed capital expenditure by individual sectors of industry may be conveniently found in the summary volumes of the annual census of production.

Finished Manufactures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing his best estimate of the value and increase in volume, based on 1985 = 100, and United Kingdom output of finished manufactures in 1973, 1978, 1981, 1985, 1987 and the current year to date and the value and volume of (i) imports of intermediate goods, (ii) United Kingdom output of finished manufactures less imports of intermediate goods and (iii) exports of finished manufactures.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

A current price estimate for the value of United Kingdom output of finished manufactures is not readily available. An index at constant prices is provided in the table. Figures for imports of intermediate goods and exports of finished manufactures may be found in the latest annual supplement to the monthly review of external trade statistics and the latest balance of payments press notice, both of which are available in the Library.

Note: Finished manufactures have been taken to comprise consumer and investment goods.

Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (i) for ratio 3 of the export sales ratio in the years 1975, 1979 and 1987 for manufacturing less divisions 21, 23, 24, 41/42, 46 and 47, (ii) the increase in the value of United Kingdom sales and exports for this group of industries less the value of imports of intermediate goods divided between them in the same ratio and (iii) the estimated increase in volume of net output and net exports for this group after this adjustment.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

Figures constructed from current price data are estimated to be as follows. Comparable data at constant prices could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Exports as a proportion of manufacturers' sales

Earnings Rule (Abolition)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the implementation of the abolition of the earnings rule.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

From 1 October 1989, existing pensioners who already have their pension reduced because of their earnings will be awarded the full pension to which they are entitled. Those who have deferred taking their pension will be offered the opportunity to claim it or to continue deferment. The Department's objective is that as many as possible of those who wish to do so will be able to draw their pension by Christmas. In any event, payments will be backdated to 1 October.

CIVIL SERVICE

Senior Management Development Programme

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service, what has been the enrolment on the Civil Service senior management development programme for the last five years.

Mr. Luce: The senior management development programme was launched in September 1985. The approximate numbers of participants at 31 March of each year were:

| | Participants |
|---|---|
| 1986 | 2,600 |
| 1987 | 3,000 |
| 1988 | 4,300 |
| [1] 1989 | 4,500 |

Next Steps Initiative

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service how the next steps initiative is progressing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The next steps initiative is taking firm root. There are now eight agencies set up and the project manager expects that by this time next year there will be 20 or more established. Over 30 areas of Government activity covering around one third of the Civil Service, have been announced as candidates for agency status. These are all listed. The candidates include the social security operations, which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security announced in May that he intended to set up as two or three agencies covering virtually the whole of his Department. There is more to come; work is progressing in a number of other important areas of government.

In support of this, a good deal of other work has been completed or is in hand, including work on accountability, appointment of chief executives, pay and personnel and recruitment flexibilities, financial regimes and delegation generally.

The aim of next steps is better value for money and better service to the public. Accordingly agencies set up are being given performance targets and objectives in these areas. The first Agency is not yet a year old, but the signs are that targets will be achieved, and meanwhile that the move to agency status has, as expected, released energies and enthusiasms of staff to tackle their tasks differently and better. I look to this to develop and progress. The success of next steps will be measured not simply by the number of agencies set up, but in the improvements in performance, for the benefit of taxpayers, customers and staff, that are expected to result. Arrangements are being set in hand to evaluate the project.

Next steps has attracted considerable public interest and indeed general support, both at home and abroad. This House too has taken a close interest, and in the last six months both the Public Accounts Committee and the Treasury and Civil Service Committee have carried out their own inquiries. The Government welcome this interest and will be replying to their reports in due course.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Nepal

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Nepalese authorities about providing medical or other equipment and assistance to overcome shortages due to the dispute between Nepal and India.

Mr. Sainsbury: No specific request for medical equipment has been received. The flow of supplies into Nepal appears to have improved and this has been reflected in our own aid projects where the improved supply of fuel has enabled a sustainable level of operations. We are, however, engaged in a continuing dialogue with the Nepalese authorities on our aid programme and will consider any well-founded request carefully.

DEFENCE

Anthrax

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leyton of 19 July, if he will list the off-site activities of the chemical defence establishment at Porton Down involving detection, decontamination, treatment and protective systems involving anthrax other than on Gruinard island.

Mr. Alan Clark: All research work on anthrax undertaken by CDE scientists has been located at Porton Down and Gruinard island.

Mine Warfare Exercise

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if consultations have taken place with local fishermen concerning the mine warfare exercise which is to take place in the firth of Clyde during August; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no specific exercise taking place in the Firth of Clyde in August, but a dummy minefield is being laid during the month for evaluation purposes, as part of a continuing programme of mine countermeasures work. The co-ordinates of this were passed to the Clyde fishermen's association on 20 June 1989. A favourable response was received from the association on 10 July, and a Clyde warning message was issued on 20 July.

Submarine Exercises

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Royal Navy is considering the re-introduction of the practice of having a fleet tender in attendance when a submarine is submerged on exercise; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am advised that it has not previously been standard practice for fleet tenders to be present at submarine exercises and there are no plans to introduce such a measure. Tenders will, however, continue to be a present for specific trials such as an initial dive after build or refit.

HMS Dreadnought

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his future plans for HMS Dreadnought.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the House of Commons Defence Committee's seventh report, published on 21 June 1989.

Nuclear Submarines (Rosyth)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that there be no further storage of nuclear submarines in the vicinity of Rosyth dockyard.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government have made no decision about the method by which decommissioned nuclear submarines will be disposed of, nor where any submarines should be stored, should temporary storage afloat be necessary.

Training

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Clackmannan of 19 July Official Report, column 232, what are the restrictions on the nature and extent of the training which apply in the two areas referred to in his reply; for what purpose he acquired long term rights over the two areas referred to; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The following restrictions apply to the nature and extent of training on the two areas in question:

Forestry Commission Land in Galloway

Under the terms of the licence, use of the area is permitted for adventure training, map reading, orienteering and small scale escape and evasion exercises. There are limitations on the number of men permitted to use the area at any one time and all buildings, lochs, SSSIs, low lying land and fields containing crops and hay are out of bounds. There are also limitations on the use of blank ammunition and pyrotechnics, vehicles and helicopters.

British Aluminium Company Land at Kinlochleven

The majority of the area is not available to MOD between 1 August and 21 October. With certain exceptions vehicles are not permitted other than on public roads. The use of live ammunition is prohibited and training must not interfere with or cause damage to any hydraulic or factory installation nor interfere with the landlord's use for all normal estate, sporting, agricultural or silvicultural purposes.

We have acquired long-term rights over these two areas to secure the continuation of our present training activities.

Training Land

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) to what percentage area of Ministry of Defence property holdings the public has (a) full access, (b) limited access and (c) no access;

(2) to what percentage area of Ministry of Defence training land the public has (a) full access, (b) limited access and (c) no access.

Mr. Neubert: It is our policy to allow access to MOD-owned land where this is compatible with operational and safety considerations and with the interests of tenants and licensees. Records are not held in a form that would show the percentage of MOD land over which the public has access.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage area of Ministry of Defence training land is allowed to be used for live-fire training exercises.

Mr. Neubert: Records are not held in the form required and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Live Ammunition (Exercises)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the annual number of exercises involving the use of live ammunition for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Neubert: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the annual number of reported incidents of members of the public discovering live ammunition in areas that had recently been used for training purposes, for each of the last 10 years for which data is available.

Mr. Neubert: I will write to the hon. Member.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police (West Midlands)

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to whether any of the officers suspended or disciplined in the last five years in the west midlands police force were involved in investigating the murder of Carl Bridgewater.

Mr. Hurd: I understand from the chief constable of the West Midlands police that no officer from that force who was involved in the Carl Bridgewater murder inquiry has been suspended in the last five years. Two such officers have been disciplined in that period.

Crime Screening

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will direct the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to publish in his annual report the statistics relating to the screening of reported crimes for further investigation; if he will publish the figures for 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that detailed figures for 1988 are not available centrally, but that the commissioner is considering what information might be published in future annual reports.

Prison Officers' Housing

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cause of the hold-up by the Home Office in relation to the sale of 44 homes on the Gartree estate to prison officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Of the 81 prison quarters on the Gartree estate, 46 were released for sale under the prison service discount sales scheme on 30 June 1988. A total of 21 applications for purchase were received and offers of sale have been made to 18 applicants. Valuations for the other three properties have yet to be received from the district valuer.

Five of the offers made were accepted and sales are going ahead in the normal way. The main reason for delay on the other sales is the unwillingness of prospective purchasers to accept the terms of the discount scheme. This requires that the properties should be offered for sale on the basis of a valuation made at the date of application to purchase or at the date on which the properties were released for sale, whichever is the later. I have no authority to sanction sales based on a valuation at the date on which the discount scheme first came into effect—June 1987—which is what these prospective purchasers are seeking.

Cornfield Circles

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constables of Hampshire and Wiltshire on their investigations into the cornfield circles in Hampshire and Wiltshire; what is the estimated cost of these investigations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I understand from the chief constables of Hampshire and Wiltshire that there have been no investigations into the cornfield circles by their officers.

Race Relations (Liverpool)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will direct the Chief Inspector of Constabulary to inquire into those aspects of the findings of the first report of the Liverpool 8 inquiry into race relations in Liverpool which relate to the Merseyside police; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: No.

Broadcasting (Deaf People)

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to ensure that the Independent Television Commission will have adequate representation of deaf people.

Mr. Renton: The Independent Television Commission will be a regulatory body rather than a representative one. Members will be chosen to cover a wide range of experience and knowledge, but we do not believe it would be right to appoint a member specifically to serve the needs of the deaf.

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether he intends to lay down regulations that oblige the television broadcasters to ensure that whenever there is an emergency or urgent news flashes, the programme is broadcast so that deaf viewers can fully understand the message;

(2) whether the proposed requirements for Channels 3 and 5 with regard to subtitling for the deaf will be applied to the BBC channels, Channel 4, cable and satellite channels; what reasonable target for the amount of subtitles in future years will be set by the Independent Television Commission; whether the proposed 10 per cent. increase in Teletest subtitles will be a minimum requirement; whether the proposal will include a requirement to provide a diverse service across all programming; and whether he is considering any inclusion in the proposal for sign language services and open-in-vision subtitles.

Mr. Hurd: As I announced on 13 June, at column 715, we are proposing that Channel 3 and Channel 5 licensees should, in the first year of the new licences provide 10 per cent. more hours of subtitling than had been achieved on average by the ITV companies in the previous year. The licensees would, of course, be free to provide more hours than this if they so wished. The ITC would take this and other matters into account in judging a suitable target for future years. We envisage that the choice of which programmes should be subtitled should be left to the licence holder. The BBC and Channel 4 will continue to be bound by public service commitments and so can be expected to continue to provide subtitling.

It will be for the broadcasters to determine how information is presented, beyond the requirement to be impartial and accurate in news reporting. Live subtitling is complex, and in some instances would be difficult to provide.

With regard to the additional television channels, which are becoming available, we have always made it clear that we intend to impose on these channels a number of consumer protection requirements to safeguard the public on matters of taste and decency. Beyond that their success or failure will be determined by their ability to attract and retain viewers with their programme service.

Services for the deaf should generally be provided by teletext, although by virtue of their public service obligations the BBC and Channel 4 can be expected to provide specialist services for those viewers without access to a teletext television set.

Birmingham Pub Bombings

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to how many officers involved in the case against Keith Parchment were also involved in the case of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings;

(2) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to how many officers involved in the case against Paul Fitzsimmons were also involved in the case of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings;

(3) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to how many officers involved in the case against Hassan Khan were also involved in the case against the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings;

(4) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to how many officers involved in the case against Ernest Callaghan, Anthony Waldron, Robert Burston and Alexander Davies were also involved in the case against the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings;

(5) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to how many of the officers involved in the case against Paul Dandy were also involved in the case of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

(6) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to how many officers involved in the case against Vincent Palmer were also involved in the case against the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings;

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the chief constable of the West Midlands Police that no officer involved in the cases of any of the individuals named was also involved in the case concerning those convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

Detective-Sergeant Michael Hornby

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Police Complaints Authority as to the number of complaints made to them against Detective-Sergeant Michael Hornby; and what action was taken in each case.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The Police Complaints Authority is not itself empowered to receive complaints against police officers. Any complaint that the authority may receive against an individual officer is passed to the chief constable of the force concerned, so that he may record it and have it investigated under the terms of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 where appropriate under the supervision of the authority.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 425, he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to whether Detective-Sergeant Michael Hornby's personal file contains details of the offence for which he was disciplined in 1980.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 21 July, at column 403, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member on 11 July.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 425, he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to how many complaints have been received against Detective-Sergeant Michael Hornby for each of the last seven years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the chief constable of the West Midlands Police that four complaints have been made against Detective-Sergeant Hornby in the last seven years, consisting of one in 1983, two in 1986 and one in 1987 which was subsequently withdrawn.

Mr. Majid Agha

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what instructions are given to immigration officers about providing receipts for personal property which is retained by such officers;

(2) what was the reason for the delay in responding to the letter from the hon. Member for Stretford about Mr. Majid Agha (HO Ref A429590);

(3) what were the nature and length of the avoidable delays in arriving at a decision in the case of Mr. Majid Agha; and what steps have been taken to avoid repetition;

(4) when the conclusion was arrived at that Mr. Majid Agha resides lawfully in Britain;

(5) when the passports of Mr. Majid Agha were returned to him by immigration officers following their seizure;

(6) why the visit to the home of Mr. Majid Agha by immigration officers took place without notice; why the immigration officers were accompanied by police officers on the visit to Mr. Majid Agha; and why Mr. Majid Agha's passports were taken by immigration officers.

Mr. Renton: The case to which the hon. Member refers was the subject of a complaint about the conduct of the immigration officers involved in the particular inquiry. Following investigation I wrote to the hon. Member on 8 June. The answers to the additional specific questions are as follows:

The reason why an unannounced visit by immigration and police officers took place was because information was available about the possible commission of immigration and other criminal offences. In the course of the inquiry two passports were taken away, against receipt, and with the consent of the person who was the subject of that inquiry. Instructions to immigration officers are that documents or other items taken during this kind of inquiry should have been provided voluntarily and that a receipt should be provided for any items retained.

The visit took place on 31 January, the decision that the person in question was lawfully settled in the United Kingdom was made on 3 April and the passports returned on 20 April. There were two avoidable delays: one between 10 February and 21 March when the case received insufficient attention due to pressure of work, and one between 3 April and 17 April when the papers were temporarily mislaid in the immigration office at Manchester airport. Local procedures have been revised, aimed at avoiding a repetition of such delays.

The reason for the delay in responding to the letter from the hon. Member for Stretford was, as explained in my interim reply of 13 March to his letter of 1 February, that investigation of the complaint and other inquiries at Manchester airport took some time to conclude.

Breath Tests

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when the Government intend to respond to the request of the Association of Chief Police Officers for additional breath-testing powers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when the results of the Home Office consultation period on police breath-testing powers will be published; and in what form.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for East Lothian (Mr. Home Robertson) on 8 May 1989 at column 284.

Yashpal Singh

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why no Home Office representative was available to attend the case of Yashpal Singh (TH/1204/88) at Thanet house on 21 July, in which the entry certification officer, New Delhi, is the respondent; when a Home Office representative will be available to attend a hearing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The Home Office presenting officer allocated to the case was unfortunately admitted to hospital on that day. The case was complex and it was not, at short notice, possible to reallocate it. The adjudicator agreed to an adjournment and future listing of the case is a matter for my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor.

Designated Custody Officers

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has received from chief constables in England and Wales concerning the extent to which they have designated custody officers having a rank other than that of a sergeant and having dual responsibilities within their police station in accordance with the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Chief officers are not required by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 to provide my right hon. Friend with such information and he has not received any approaches from them on this point.

Police Radio (Interference)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has received from the Northumbria police concerning exceptional radio interference on both VHF and UHF radio channels resulting from the European Cellnet system; what information he has on the extent to which this is causing a breakdown of communications between the command and control systems and police officers on the street; and what action he is taking to remendy this problem.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Child Care Workers (Police Information)

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will extend the arrangements for the disclosure of police information about those who apply to work with children, which are currently available to local authorities and to voluntary organisations.

Mr. Hurd: We have today announced that, with the agreement of the Association of Chief Police Officers and representatives of the voluntary sector, three pilot schemes are to be set up to allow voluntary organisations access to police information about those who apply to work with children. One of the schemes will cover, principally, national child care organisations, the other two will be based locally in Dudley and Lancashire.

The national scheme will be hosted by the National Council of Voluntary Child Care Organisations and, although it will cover largely national child care organisations, it would not exclude other nationally based organisations.

The two local schemes, hosted by the Dudley Council for Voluntary Service and the Community Council for Lancashire will aim to provide a service for locally organised voluntary groups.

The three new schemes, which will be funded by the Government during the pilot phase, will extend to voluntary organisations the arrangements now available to local authorities and the health service which will allow them access to police information about those seeking to work in posts which would give them substantial and unsupervised access to children.

Underground Railway Stations (Fire Precautions)

Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to make regulations on fire precautions in underground railway stations.

Mr. Hurd: The necessary consultation with railway operators, fire authorities and others has now been completed and it is my intention to lay regulations within the next two weeks. The first of them will come into effect in mid-September. The regulations will be made under section 12 of the Fire Precautions Act 1971 and will be subject to the negative resolution procedure.

The regulations are part of the Government's response to Mr. Desmond Fennell's investigation into the King's Cross Underground fire and were announced to the House by my right hon. Friend, the Member for Southend, West (Mr. Channon) last November. They will incorporate the great majority of Mr. Fennell's recommendations concerning fire precautions in underground railway stations and some additional requirements amongst them those concerning the construction of stations.

The regulations will include those requiring the installation of heat detectors and sprinklers in escalators and other areas of high fire risk, for the protection and maintenance of exits so that all of these, including ticket barriers, can be immediately opened in case of fire, and for the training and provision of staff so that in an emergency they will know what to do.

They apply to all underground stations, not only to those in London, and will be enforced by the local fire authority for the area. Fire authorities will have discretion to relax some of these requirements when this is justified by the circumstances.

Citizenship

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for registration as British citizens made under the transitional provisions of the British Nationality Act 1981 are still outstanding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: In the financial year 1987-88 some 190,000 such applications for registration were received. I announced to the House on 19 May 1988 at column 1080 that a new nationality office in Liverpool would be opened to assist with the processing of the applications and the new office opened on 22 August 1988. Excellent progress has been made and the number of registration applications now outstanding is less than 60,000. We expect to have taken decisions on the last of the outstanding applications during January 1990—significantly ahead of the target date of 1 April.

The establishment of the Liverpool nationality office to process registration applications has allowed the rest of the nationality division in Lunar house to concentrate exclusively on other categories of application for citizenship. Furthermore, once the registration work is completed, the Liverpool nationality office will begin to process naturalisations, almost doubling the capacity available for that work. In this way, we hope to be able to improve the level of service given to applicants during 1990-91.

The difficulties caused by the rush of applications at the end of 1987 are not yet over, but we are on course to improve the level of service to our customers. The staff of the nationality division, both in Croydon and Liverpool, are to be congratulated on the efforts made to achieve that aim.

Immigration

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration inspectors have been involved in each of the last six months for which records are available in the authorisation of decisions of immigration officers to make deportation orders against people; and on what basis each decision for (a) overstaying, (b) breach of conditions or (c) otherwise was taken.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 17 July 1989]: Fourteen immigration inspectors are authorised to take decisions relating to those liable to deportation under section 3(5)(a) of the Immigration Act 1971. Other categories of deportation cases are dealt with exclusively by the deportation section. Decisions in all deportation cases are based on all the known relevant facts in accordance with the immigration rules.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Inner Cities

81. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will report upon the progress of the Government's inner-city initiative.

Mr. Forth: Under the comprehensive range of measures, costing £3·5 million this year, which makes up the Action for Cities initiative, good progress continues to be made in the regeneration of our inner cities. In the 57 inner city target areas, unemployment fell by almost 24 per cent. in the 12 months to May 1989. Recorded crime in the Metropolitan police force areas fell by 6 per cent. in 1988. Involvement of private companies continues to grow—over the last six months the number of companies working with the Government's inner city task forces has increased from 450 to 500.

Astra Satellite

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will take steps to ensure that the financial assistance given to, and the tax incentives provided for, the Astra project by the Luxembourg Government are in accordance with the treaty of Rome and that these aids will not distort fair competition in the United Kingdom satellite market.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is open to the Government to raise with the European Commission any cases in which EC rules on state aids are alleged to have been broken and where British companies have been put to competitive disadvantage. If my hon. Friend would like to give me any further information relating to the aid given to the Astra project by the Luxembourg Government, I would be happy to consider the matter further.

Life Assurance and Pensions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report figures for each year since 1979 showing the net increase in the amounts available for investment of life assurance and pension schemes to the nearest £1 million; and if he will provide a forecast for 1987 and for 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Estimates of total net investment by the long-term funds of insurance companies and self administered pension funds (excluding net investment by pension funds in insurance-managed funds) are as follows for the year 1979 to 1988.

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| 1979 | 10,100 |
| 1980 | 11,744 |
| 1981 | 13,533 |
| 1982 | 15,201 |
| 1983 | 15,957 |
| 1984 | 17,668 |
| 1985 | 18,089 |
| 1986 | 20,295 |
| 1987 | 21,035 |
| 1988 | 20,142 |

Note: There are some breaks in the series due to definitional changes. The main ones are between 1983 and 1984 and between 1984 and 1985.

Insurance Agents (Commissions)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make proposals to amend the law to ensure that tied agents of insurance policies disclose their commissions.

Mr. Redwood: No. Tied agents are not providing independent advice on behalf of a client, but are acting as the agent of the company they represent. The Securities and Investments Board has produced further proposals for disclosure of the status of the intermediary and disclosure of expenses in sales of life assurance and unit trusts.

Timeshare Developments

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what representations he has received concerning cancellation provisions in contracts for timeshare developments; and what conclusions he has drawn;

(2) if he will introduce legislation to require timeshare developers to include cooling off periods in contracts and provide for independent arbitration in the event of disputes over timeshare contracts;

(3) if he will take powers to ban the use of incentive awards and sales presentations by timeshare developers.

Mr. Forth: I receive a steady flow of complaints about timeshare problems mainly criticising the sales techniques used by some companies and the lack of a penalty-free cooling off period in many timeshare contracts. I announced on 2 June that I had asked the Director General of Fair Trading to carry out a review of the whole range of timeshare problems and to make appropriate recommendations in the early part of next year.

China

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will withdraw financial assistance from those organisations which are presently receiving assistance to further trade with China.

Mr. Redwood: The maintenance of departmental financial support for missions to and exhibitions in China is being reviewed on a case by case basis.

Internal Market Council

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will report on the outcome of the Internal Market Council on 18 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Council, at which my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office represented the United Kingdom, discussed several issues, including the proposed European company statute; the draft EC merger regulation; and draft directives relating to rights of residence, the legal protection of computer programmes, and the introduction of public purchasing rules into the energy, water, transport and telecommunications sectors.

Life Offices

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangemens have been made to provide guidance to life offices on the regulatory position as it affects broker funds.

Mr. Redwood: We have recently considered whether any regulatory issues arise from the operation of "broker funds", defined as "Any arrangement under which a broker (or a nominee of the broker) has rights, not available to individual policyholders, to advise or decide on matters which determine the benefits under policies issued by the life insurance company through the broker.

We have consulted the Securities and Investments Board and other relevant self-regulating organisations. The Securities and Investments Board is today issuing a consultation paper on the marketing and competence issues involving broker funds.

We have concluded that the operation of broker funds may in the past have exhibited some potential for unfairness although we have no firm evidence that there was any unfairness.

Consequently the Department has today written to life offices and other relevant organisations providing guidance to life offices and their auditors on the regulatory position as it affects broker funds, and on certain other issues to which they should have regard in the appointment of brokers to manage funds and in the operation of those funds. I have arranged for a copy of the text of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House. The letter emphasises the importance of section 31A of the Insurance Companies Act 1982. This section requires insurance companies to ensure that adequate arrangements are in force for securing that transactions affecting assets of the company (other than transactions outside its control) do not operate unfairly between different funds of the company. In the Department's view any transaction between funds which is effected in the knowledge that it will, or is likely to, cause detriment to one of the funds must "operate unfairly". While section 31A is already in force we are considering introducing a new regulation later this year requiring companies to report on their arrangements to meet the duty imposed by the section. This regulation—which is the subject of separate consultation with the industry—would require a certificate to be signed by the directors, to be annexed to the annual report, which would state that for the past financial year the company has had in force arrangements to meet this duty. This certificate would be subject to audit. We have considered the implications of section 31A for the operation of intermediaries funds, and in particular for the granting of rights to brokers which are not conferred on policyholders generally and detailed guidance is provided in the letter to assist insurance companies to comply with the section. Further, we consider that insurance companies should satisfy themselves as to the competence of any broker or nominee managing any of its funds and to monitor their performance on a regular basis. At all times companies should maintain tight controls on broker fund operations.

Toys (Safety)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to make the regulations to implement in the United Kingdom the European Community directive on toy safety.

Mr. Forth: I am pleased to inform my hon. Friend that I made the Toys (Safety) Regulations 1989 on 25 July and they are being laid before the House today.

Car Production Plant, Swindon

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he made to Rover Group, British Aerospace or Honda in relation to the location of the proposed car production plant at Swindon.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The location of Honda's proposed car production plant was a matter for the company, but the Government made clear their welcome for Honda's decision to develop its existing engine facility at Swindon to full vehicle manufacture.

FIMBRA

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter he received recently from the chairman of FIMBRA as referred to during the proceedings of the Standing Committee of the Companies Bill by the hon. Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith), column 619.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 25 July 1989]: It is not my right hon. and noble Friend's normal practice to place in the Library correspondence which he receives from third parties simply because it is referred to by an hon. Member in debate. However, since I understand that the chairman of FIMBRA provided copies of the letter in question to hon. Members serving on Standing Committee D at the time, I am, with the agreement of the chairman, placing a copy in the Library.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Birtenshaw Farm, Bolton

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Attorney-General if he has received any representations about the covenant on Birtenshaw farm, Bolton; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General has received an application for his consent to realtor proceedings in respect of a proposed development at Birtenshaw farm. This application is now being considered.

PRIME MINISTER

Football Matches

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many football matches she has attended in an official capacity in the past 10 years.

The Prime Minister: I have attended four matches in my official capacity over the past 10 years. In addition, since his appointment, my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport has attended 25 domestic and international matches.

Foreign Visits (Gifts)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the numbers and types of gifts she has received on her official visits abroad; and where these gifts are currently stored.

The Prime Minister: No.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Prime Minister how many representations she has received from (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Norway regarding Nirex proposals for radioactive waste disposal at Sellafield and Dounreay.

The Prime Minister: I have so far received two representations from United Kingdom residents and approximately 2,400 from Norway.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to recognise above-average teacher performance in any plans he has for the future determination of teachers' pay.

Mrs. Rumbold: Local education authorities can already award incentive allowances to teachers who have demonstrated outstanding ability in the classroom. It is important that any new pay arrangements continue to allow for classroom excellence to be rewarded.

Teachers (Resignations)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn of 29 June, Official Report, column 536, what information or estimates he now has as to the number of resignations submitted by teachers as at 31 May;

(2) what inquiries he has been able to make as to the number of (a) teachers and (b) head teacher resignations and the likely level of vacancies in September 1989; and with what result.

Mr. Rumbold: Comprehensive data are not available. My officials telephoned a number of local education authorities to ask about the level of teacher resignations. Separate information on head teachers was not collected. Information from those authorities suggests that the position is little changed from that in recent years. As local authorities and schools are still recruiting teachers to take up posts in September, it is too early to make estimates of likely vacancies.

National Curriculum

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what will be the benefit to primary schools of the introduction of the national curriculum and pupil assessment.

Mrs. Rumbold: The national curriculum will assist all primary schools to reach the standards currently found in the best. Its framework of targets with linked assessment will enable primary schools to judge their pupils' achievements against objective standards and to identify their needs accordingly. This will give pupils the best possible foundation for their future education.

Student Grants

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science on what basis postgraduate grants will be calculated once the link with the undergraduate grant comes to an end; and what compensation postgraduate students, especially those in high rent areas, will receive for the removal of benefits.

Mr. Jackson: The levels of postgraduate studentships will in future be determined by the award-making bodies, consulting among themselves and with the Department as appropriate, in the light of all relevant factors, including the number and quality of applications for support and other claims on their resources. Students who face financial difficulties when they are no longer eligible for social security benefits will be able to seek supplementary assistance from their higher education institutions from the access fund for postgraduate students.

School Closures

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the latest information relating to school closures for the current year to date on a basis consistent with the table in his answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn, Official Report, of 29 June, column 536.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information is given in the table.

| Calendar year (1) | Number of proposals decided (2) | Number of places to be taken out of use by proposals in column 2 (3) | Number of proposals in column 2 approved (4) | Number of surplus places to be taken out of use as a result of approved proposals (5) |

Inspectors' Reports

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the expected dates for the publication of any report of any committee of Her Majesty's inspectors and of other documents of significance, during the next six months, with brief details of each publication.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are no reports of Her Majesty's Inspectorate committees published. Her Majesty's Inspectorate publications are based on the findings and messages from inspections and as such are planned and produced by Her Majesty's inspectorate and it is the senior chief inspector who decides where and when what is to be put to the Secretary of State for his agreement to publish.

GCSE

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, whether he has yet an indication of the effect of the GCSE examinations on staying on in full-time education and on the attainments of those taking the examination; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to the reply, 10 February 1989, c. 846-48]: Provisional statistics collected by my Department indicate that in January 1989 there were some 382,000 pupils aged 16 and over in maintained and independent schools in England, an increase of 5 per cent. on the previous year. This represents a staying-on rate of 32·4 per cent. in all schools (29·5 per cent. in maintained schools alone) compared with 29·4 per cent. and 26·6 per cent. respectively in 1987-88. These are the highest-ever rates for staying on in school.

Of these pupils, some 314,000 are following A-level courses, an increase of 8 per cent. on the previous year. The proportion of the age group on first year A-level courses in schools has risen by 3 percentage points to just under 24 per cent.; again, the highest figure ever.

These are encouraging figures, particularly given the decline in the age cohort. They represent a 10 per cent. increase in the staying-on rate, the highest increase ever. In particular they strengthen the earlier evidence that the GCSE has raised the sights of many pupils and encouraged them to stay on for more advanced study.

Comparable figures for enrolments in further education are not yet available.

The following tables set out the relevant information.

Table 1

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Clergy (Car Purchase)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners, if he will publish the details of the scheme operated by the Church Commissioners, in conjunction with dioceses of the Church of England, to assist clergy with car purchase and operation.

Mr. Alison: The car loan scheme operated by the commissioners enables all serving clergy, deaconesses and licensed lay workers on the commissioners' payroll to apply, through their diocesan office, for an interest free loan towards the purchase of a car. The loan is normally repayable over four years and, for parochial clergy, has a current ceiling of £4,550.

The scheme was introduced on 1 July 1988 and has proved extremely popular; to date 2,798 loans have been granted, the total sum involved being £9·9 million.

Parochial church councils are expected to reimburse the clergyman in full for those expenses which relate to parochial duties. These include car expenses, which the commissioners recommend be met by a mileage rate which includes elements for running costs, insurance, tax and depreciation.

ENERGY

Nuclear Programmes (Expenditure)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) of 10 July, Official Report, column 380, if he will set out a detailed breakdown of the expenditure listed for 1988-89 nuclear, under the column headed "Other"; and what are the reasons for the increase from 1987-88 to 1988-89.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The information requested is set out in the table. It should be noted that the figures are based on estimated outturn. Final outturn figures for 1988-89 are not yet available and will be published in the appropriate accounts in the usual way.

The increase from 1987-88 is largely accounted for by decommissioning and radioactive waste management operations (Drawmops), the purpose of which is to enable the UKAEA to do the work needed to ensure that the Department's liabilities for radioactive waste management and decommissioning work are properly and safely met. The 1988-89 main estimates provision for Drawmops was some £10 million higher than in 1987-88. Drawmops is an operational programme where the work in any particular year is determined in the light of safety factors and the need to carry out work at least overall cost to the taxpayer. The Drawmops figure in the table also includes the provision of £51·4 million made in a spring supplementary Estimate for outstanding UKAEA liabilities to British Nuclear Fuels plc for decommissioning and radioactive waste operations.

As explained in the Department's 1988 main Estimates (HC 339-vi), some £18 million of overall expenditure with the UKAEA in 1988-89 represented a technical adjustment to the timing of payments made by the Department (offset by a corresponding reduction in the UKAEA's external financing limit to leave no net change in public expenditure). This adjustment accounts for some £5 million of the expenditure in the "Other" column.

The remainder of the increase on the 1987-88 total is accounted for by small increases in other programmes.

Civil Service (Relocation)

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the South East; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Wakeham: As my predecessor told my hon. Friend on 15 February 1988 at column 513, there are no current plans for such relocation.

The position will be reviewed at the end of 1990-91, when the Department has had some 18 months' experience of working in its new headquarters building.

End Users (Expenditure)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the total expenditure on energy in the United Kingdom by end users for each of the last three years; what proportion of that expenditure was tax; and what proportion that expenditure was of gross domestic product.

Mr. Wakeham: Figures for the United Kingdom for the years 1986 to 1988 are shown in the following table:

| Year | Expenditure on energy by final users £ million | Tax as a proportion of expenditure on energy Per cent. | Energy expenditure as a proportion of GDP[1] Per cent. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1986 | 37,950 | 22·6 | 10·0 |
| 1987 | 38,530 | 23·4 | 9·3 |
| 1988 | 38,910 | 24·9 | 8·5 |

Energy Efficiency Office

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the budget for the Energy Efficiency Office for each year since its inception.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Energy Efficiency Office was established on 31 October 1983. Actual expenditure in each year has been as follows:

| Year | £ million |
|---|---|
| 1984-85 | 17·5 |
| 1985-86 | 22·5 |
| 1986-87 | 24·5 |
| 1987-88 | 18·6 |
| 1988-89 | 18·5 |

Budget allocation for 1989-90 is £15 million.

Childhood Cancer

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what research has been, and is being, undertaken to investigate the possible detrimental effects to health of overhead electricity power lines, specifically the alleged link between electromagnetism and childhood cancer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Central Electricity Generating Board has been carrying out research into the health effects of power frequency electromagnetic fields produced by overhead lines since the late 1970s.

Independent work has also been carried out under contract at hospitals and universities in the United Kingdom and has included a detailed case/control study to investigate any possible links with childhood cancer. So far, the results have revealed no association between childhood cancers and overhead power lines. Research is continuing.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Chief Electoral Officer (Report)

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the report of the chief electoral officer for Northern Ireland for 1988-89 will be published.

Mr. Tom King: The chief electoral officer's report was laid before the House today and is published as a House of Commons paper (No. 497). Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Short Brothers plc

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the status, after the company is sold to Bombardier, of the Government's assurances to creditors of Short Brothers plc that Her Majesty's Government would, in the last resort, ensure that their claims were fully met.

Mr. Tom King: After the date of completion of the sale of Short Brothers plc to Bombardier, no new obligations incurred by the company will be covered by any such assurances which have been given on a number of occasions, most recently on 21 July 1988. Obligations incurred between the signature of the contract and the completion date will cease to benefit from the assurances on completion.

Disabled People (OPCS Surveys)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with organisations of and for disabled people on the findings of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys surveys.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: None.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made on assessing the financial implications of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys surveys and of the Disabled Persons (N.I.) Act 1989.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: As the hon. Member is aware, the findings of the OPCS surveys relate only to Great Britain. The financial implications of the comparable Northern Ireland surveys will be considered when the relevant information is available.

As to the Disabled Persons (Northern Ireland) Act 1989, the Department of Health and Social Services is currently consulting health and social services boards about the financial implications of its implementation.

Disability Benefits Review

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has formally, to consult organisations of and for disabled people about the overall structure of the disability benefits review.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1989]: Now that the sixth and final report of the OPCS survey of the disabled in Great Britain has been published, I understand that my hon. Friend the Minister for the Disabled will be announcing a timetable for further action once proper consideration of these surveys has been completed. The need for consultation with organisations of and for disabled people in Northern Ireland about any Government proposals arising from the exercise and from the parallel surveys now being conducted locally will be considered at the appropriate time.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this session up to 1 July.

Mr. Sainsbury: The records show the following:

| | (a) | (b) |
|---|---|---|
| Received | 1,149 | 10,142 |
| Sent | 943 | 8,883 |

European Institute for Advanced Security Studies

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present state of deliberations in the Western European Union Council of Ministers on the establishment of a European institute for advanced security studies as proposed by the Western European Union parliamentary assembly.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Permanent Council is continuing to study this question. A report will be made to the next meeting of the Council of Ministers.

Conventional Arms Limitation

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what specific measures the Government considers are necessary to ensure the progress of negotiations on the limitation of conventional armaments, and to link all initiatives in regard to short-range nuclear weapons with their success, as recommended by the Western European Union Parliamentary Assembly.

Mr. Waldegrave: Alliance proposals for progress in the conventional armed forces negotiation were tabled in Vienna on 9 March and 13 July. The Alliance position on the relationship of SNF to conventional arms control was set out in the comprehensive concept issued by the NATO heads of Government summit meeting on 29-30 May.

UN (British Delegations)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the names of the British delegations to each meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations in the past two years.

Mr. Sainsbury: A list of accredited delegations to the United Nations General Assembly is published each year by the United Nations. I have arranged for copies of the list for 1987 (UNGA 42) and 1988 (UNGA 43) to be placed in the Library.

Official Visits

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's estimated expenditure in the current year on hosting official visitors from foreign countries.

Mr. Sainsbury: Since January there have been 15 guest of Government visits initiated by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 1989. These were:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Presidential | 3 |
| Prime Ministers | 2 |
| Foreign Ministers/Minister of State | 10 |
| | 15 |

Total expenditure to date = £215,000.
Estimated total expenditure for 1989 = £350,000.

South Africa

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last made representations to the South African Government for the release of (a) Walter Sisula, (b) Elias Motsoaledi, (c) Andrew Mlangeni, (d) Ahmed Kathrada, (e) Wilton Mkwayi and (f) Nelson Mandela; what reply he has received; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made frequent representations to the South African Government calling on them to release Mr. Mandela and all other political prisoners. Most recently, on 23 June, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister raised the subject with the new leader of the South African National party, Mr. F. W. de Klerk. We continue to look for a positive response from the South African Government.

Grenada

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between Her Majesty's Government and Grenada.

Mr. Sainsbury: Our relations with Grenada are close and friendly.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the export of chemicals from India which may be used for the production of chemical weapons.

Mr. Sainsbury: India has a growing chemical industry and exports a number of chemicals. We understand that the Indian Government are reviewing the country's chemical export practices to ensure that chemicals exported from India cannot be diverted into the manufacture of chemical weapons.

Colombia

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights in the last five years in Colombia.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have made a number of representations about human rights to the Colombian authorities over the last five years. The precise information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Human Rights

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights in the last five years in Bahrain.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made a number of representations to the Bahraini authorities about human rights over the past five years but the precise information required is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights in the last five years in French Polynesia.

Mr. Sainsbury: None.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights in the last five years in Andorra.

Mr. Maude: None.

Kenya

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Kenya concerning that Government's practice that British nationals of Asian Kenyan origin require visas to enter Kenya while other British nationals do not.

Mr. Waldegrave: Immigration procedures for entry into Kenya are a matter for the Kenyan Government. However, our High Commission has made regular representations to the Kenyans on this subject since Kenya introduced revised visa regulations in 1986.

Hong Kong

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will announce a scheme of assurances to encourage Hong Kong people to remain in the territory.

Mr. Major: The Government are continuing their urgent work on the scheme and an announcement will be made as soon as this work is completed.

CSCE (Implementation)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress there has been in the implementation by the Soviet and eastern European countries of the provisions of the Helsinki final act and other conference on security and co-operation in Europe documents during the last six months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have recently prepared a report on Soviet and East European implementation of their CSCE commitments for the period January to June 1989. Copies will be deposited in the Library of the House.

Nepal

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the impact on British travellers of the present dispute between India and Nepal.

Mr. Sainsbury: There is no reason for British travellers not to visit Nepal. We understand that fuel supplies are no longer rationed, public transport is almost back to normal and most hotels are now operating normally.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

82. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received any environmental impact study consequent on British Rail's proposals for a subsurface junction in Warwick gardens in connection with the Channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Portillo: Not yet. British Rail intends to produce in due course an environmental statement covering the whole of the proposed route for the Channel tunnel rail link.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to how many passengers per hour the Docklands light railway takes, and how many it will take when improved.

Mr. Portillo: The current capacity of the Docklands light railway on each of the Tower Gateway and Stratford branches is about 1,750 passengers per hour. The capacity of the railway between Tower Gateway and the Isle of Dogs will double early next year and increase further to some 6,500 passengers per hour at the beginning of 1991. On completion of the City extension and upgrading programme, the available capacity from Bank and Stratford respectively will be about 7,000 and 5,000 passengers per hour. The planned capacity of the Beckton extension from Bank is similar to that from Bank to the Isle of Dogs.

Driving Tests

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average waiting time for a driving test in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham, (d) Sheffield and (e) nationally; and what were the comparable figures (i) five years and (ii) 10 years ago.

Mr. Atkins: The table shows the waiting time for a test nationally and at each of the test centres, at present and at July 1985. No earlier figures are available.

| Centre | Waiting times At present weeks | July 1985 weeks |
|---|---|---|
| Doncaster | 11 | 18 |
| Rotherham | 12 | 18 |
| Barnsley | 5 | 17 |
| Sheffield | 8 | 26 |
| Nationally | 11 | 18 |

Driving Examiners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving examiners his Department employs in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Sheffield; and what were the comparable figures (i) five years and (ii) 10 years ago.

Mr. Atkins: The table shows the examiners in post at each of the test centres (i) at present, (ii) in 1985 and (iii) in 1979.

| | Examiners in post | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Centre | At present | 1985 | 1979 |
| Doncaster | 7 | 6 | 6 |
| Rotherham | 5 | 5 | 4 |
| Barnsley | 6 | 5 | 4 |
| Sheffield | 15 | 11 | 10 |

Drink-Driving

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the number of countries which have reduced the level of drunken driving at a faster rate than the United Kingdom over the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The percentage of drivers and riders killed in road accidents in the United Kingdom over the past five years whose blood alcohol level was above the legal limit fell from 28 per cent. in 1983 to 21 per cent. in 1988.

The number of drivers and riders involved in accidents over the same period who were breath-tested rose from 42,300 to 75,000, yet the number that failed the test fell from 12,400 to 10,200. We are not aware of any other country in which the level of drinking and driving has fallen at a faster rate than these indicators show.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the mean blood alcohol concentration of drivers and riders with illegal blood alcohol levels killed in road traffic accidents in total and by age groups in (a) England and Wales and (b) Scotland.

Mr. Atkins: The mean blood alcohol concentration of drivers and riders killed in road accidents can be calculated from coroners' reports. As we do not have complete reports for all such drivers or riders, the following figures are based on samples, and cannot reasonably be disaggregated beyond the levels given. The table shows the levels requested for England and Wales, Scotland, Great Britain, and an age breakdown for Great Britain.

Mean blood alcohol concentrations of drivers and riders killed in road accidents with a BAC above the legal limit: 1987

| | mean blood/ alcohol level (mgs per 100 ml) |
|---|---|
| England and Wales | 180 |
| Scotland | 205 |
| Great Britain | |
| Age 16-24 | 165 |
| Age 25-39 | 185 |
| Age over 40 | 200 |
| Total | 180 |

Because of the small numbers involved, care must be taken in comparing these levels. In particular, the information for Scotland is based on a very small sample, and so is liable to a large degree of error.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans there are for repeating the 1988 breath test surveys of the frequency of drinking and driving; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the reply of 24 May to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) col. 558. The surveys are now under way.

Hedgerow Cutting

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has issued advice to British Rail about the timing of hedgerow cutting along railway lines to prevent the killing of hedgerow birds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: No. These are management matters for British Rail, which has its own code of practice on railway linesides.

Fishing Vessels

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many foreign-owned fishing vessels have been struck off the register of United Kingdom registered fishing vessels; and if he will make a statement:

(2) how many foreign-owned fishing vessels have been refused (a) a full certificate or (b) a temporary certificate in respect of the new register of United Kingdom registered fishing vessels; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how many foreign-owned fishing vessels or those which are partially owned by non-United Kingdom citizens have been warded (a) full certificates and (b) temporary certificates by the registrar general for shipping in respect of the new register of United Kingdom registered fishing vessels;

(4) how many outstanding applications there are for (a) full certificates and (b) temporary certificates in respect of the new register of United Kingdom registered fishing vessels at the most recent date; and if he will make a statement.

(5) if he will list the number of (a) full certificates and (b) temporary certificates granted by the registrar general for shipping in respect of the new register of United Kingdom registered fishing vessels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: At 21 July 1989, 9,613 vessels had been registered. Thirteen of these were owned by individuals who are not United Kingdom citizens but who could prove long standing United Kingdom residence and involvement in the British fishing industry. No separate record is kept of vessels which are partly owned by non-United Kingdom nationals. Soome 3,500 temporary certificates were issued for three months, lapsing on 1 July 1989: most of these vessels have since been fully registered. About 150 formerly registered vessels have been refused registration because they failed to satisfy the requirements of the 1988 Act but fresh applications have been received in respect of the majority of them. In addition to these, the registrar general is currently processing 750 new applications for full registration.

North Report

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to introduce legislation based on the North report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 23 June to the hon. Member for Staffordshire, Moorlands (Mr. Knox) at column 269.

Whaley Bridge Bypass

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the report by Allol and Lomax, consulting engineers, into the performance of the consulting engineers employed on the Chapel-en-le-Frith/Whaley Bridge bypass; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given by the then Minister for Roads and Traffic, my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley), on 2 and 9 March.

Derailment (Harrow)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the derailment of the InterCity 125 express train at Harrow and Wealdstone which occurred at 8.50 pm on Thursday 20 July; and what decision he has reached on a public inquiry.

Mr. Portillo: Six coaches of the 1400 Glasgow to London express passenger train carrying about 300 passengers became derailed as the train approached Harrow and Wealdstone station.

The train came to rest with the locomotive and leading four coaches standing on the rails in the station platform. The fifth coach was derailed and leaning over. The rear of the train had divided into two parts with a gap of 400m between the leading part and three derailed but upright coaches; and a gap of 35m between those three and the last two derailed but upright coaches. Twenty-six persons were injured, none seriously. Twenty were treated locally, and six taken to hospital. The emergency services were called by the senior conductor, using a passenger's cellphone, as the train came to rest.

The independent railway inspectorate and British Rail are investigating the cause of the accident. My right hon. Friend will not decide on the need for a public inquiry until he has more information about why the accident occurred.

East London Rail Study

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made on the east London rail study.

Mr. Parkinson: The Department's consultants, Halcrow Fox and Associates (HFA), have today issued a report on the east London rail study. Their preferred option for a second line to the Docklands is an extension to the Jubilee line from Green Park via Waterloo, London Bridge and Canary wharf to Stratford. The line might be routed via either Greenwich point or Brunswick foreshore.

No decisions have yet been taken on whether the proposed line should be built. HFA estimates that the total cost of the new line would be of the order of £900 million at late 1988 prices. We shall need to consider the findings of the report, and in particular how the line would be financed. As we have already made clear the line would only be built if sufficient contributions are forthcoming from property developers and other landowners who would benefit.

LRT has already begun consultations with local authorities and other interested parties about these proposals. I have agreed that, in order that a Bill could be deposited this autumn to seek the necessary parliamentary powers, further work should concentrate on the recommended alignment running from Green Park via Waterloo to London Bridge rather than the alternative which might start from Charing Cross and run via Ludgate Circus.

Salisbury Bypass

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement about the preferred route of the proposed Salisbury by-pass.

Mr. Atkins: We aim to announce a preferred route before the end of the year.

WALES

Porpoises (Deaths)

83. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures his Department has taken to identify the cause of the deaths of porpoises washed up in Cardigan bay in the current year.

Mr. Peter Walker: None. Welsh Water, in liaison with other interested parties, has carried out considerable research, but has concluded that none of the existing discharges in Cardigan bay has contributed to the problem.

Anthrax

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many deaths of pigs in 1988 at Singrett farm, Llay, have been ascribed to anthrax; how many deaths were ascribed to matters other than anthrax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: No deaths in 1988 at Singrett Farm, Llay, were ascribed to anthrax. It has not been possible to ascertain how many deaths were due to other causes but the mortality rate was well within the range experienced in other well-run units.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he took consequent upon the outbreak of anthrax at Singrett farm, Llay in April to establish the cause of previous deaths in 1989 at that farm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Prior to the outbreak of anthrax at Singrett farm, Llay on 19 April, 13 sows and gilts had died during 1989. Anthrax was not suspected in any except one which died on 9 April, for which tests proved negative.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the production of vaccine in Britain was begun to combat the anthrax outbreak at Llay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Production of an emergency supply of vaccine to deal with the outbreak of anthrax at Llay began on 10 July 1989 at the MAFF central veterinary laboratory, Weybridge.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will establish a public inquiry into the 1989 anthrax outbreak in Clwyd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: No.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what review he will undertake of (a) the anthrax regulations and (b) the Medicines Act consequent upon the current year's outbreak of anthrax in Clwyd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The decision to slaughter and offer compensation was taken on animal welfare grounds not because of any deficiency in the Anthrax Order 1938.

Health Service Proposals

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposed to publish in Wales the equivalent to the Department of Health's, "Self Governing Hospitals: a Guide"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: My officials will be making available copies of the Department of Health's documents "Self-Governing Hospitals: An Initial Guide" and "Self-Governing Hospitals: Briefing for NHS Managers" for the information of relevant NHS interests in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to publish papers concerning National Health Service reforms as they apply to Wales.

Mr. Grist: Chapter XI of the White Paper, "Working for Patients" (Cm. 555), set out the broad framework for further improving the NHS in Wales. My right hon. Friend and I have been having extensive discussions with a wide range of interests since the publication of the White Paper and we intend shortly to make a statement on the next steps in Wales.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library minutes of the meetings of the board of the Welsh Development Agency for 1989.

Mr. Peter Walker: No. It would not be appropriate for the Welsh Development Agency to make public a record of its board meetings.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what occasions over the last 12 months, the finance director of the Welsh Development Agency met representatives of the National Freight Corporation; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Peter Walker: I am advised by the agency that the finance director has met representatives of the National Freight Corporation once (on 13 July 1988) when a range of matters of mutual interest was discussed.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to his oral reply to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) of 17 July, Official Report, column 6, if he will list the names and positions of the Welsh Office officials, who knew of the rejection of the management buy-out from WDA West Wales; when those officials first learned of the proposals; and how they came to know of them.

Mr. Peter Walker: In November or December 1988 an official of the Welsh Office, Mr. Own Rees, head of the economic and regional policy group, was telephoned at home by a chartered accountant and informed that the regional managers of the west Wales office of the Welsh Development Agency had formulated proposals for a regional management buy-out which were not being favourably considered by the agency's management in Cardiff. Mr. Rees told the accountant that he was not the official with responsibility for the affairs of the WDA and that if he or those he was advising wished to pursue the question he or they should write in an official way to the director of the Welsh Office industrial department. In January 1989 the accountant wrote to Mr. Rees at his home making the same points and received the same response. Mr. Rees informed the industry department director of both approaches and of his reply. Nothing further was heard from the accountant.

In May 1989 industry department officials made inquiries of the agency to enable me to answer the question put down by the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams). In that context, I was informed that the west Wales management had made proposals for contracting out certain services to the private sector but that these were regarded by the agency as premature. I knew nothing of management buy-out proposals until Mr. Wyn Pryce wrote to me and made his announcement to the press.

Alcohol and Drug Abuse

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spends each year on counteracting (a) alcohol abuse, and (b) drugs abuse in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The prime responsibility for providing advice and treatment facilities to deal with alcohol and drug abuse rests with individual health and local authorities. The Health Promotion Authority for Wales also has a major health educational role.

On drug misuse in the current financial year my Department has earmarked nearly £1·5 million for health authorities and voluntary sector projects.

On alcohol misuse, in addition to funds allocated to health authorities and the Health Promotion Authority for Wales, my Department has also funded the activities of Alcohol Concern Wales (ACW). In 1988-89, ACW received £48,000 and a bid for increased funding for 1989-90 is currently being finalised.

Funds are also provided to finance specific publicity campaigns to warn of the dangers of drug and alcohol misuse.

Lluesty Hospital, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a further statement concerning the future of Lluesty hospital, Clwyd.

Mr. Grist: I understand that when it met on 24 July, Clwyd health authority decided to propose the closure of Lluesty hospital, and to consult widely on the issue. The consultation period will end on 30 November 1989.

If in the light of this exercise the authority decides to proceed with the proposal the issue would, in the normal way, be referred to my right hon. Friend. Given his potential role in this matter it would be inappropriate for me to comment further at this stage.

Drainage Works, Caergwrle

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make an additional cash allocation to the Welsh water authority to enable repairs and improvements to be made to the underground sewerage and drainage in the Derby road area of Caergwrle in Alyn and Deeside; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No. Priorities within their expenditure programme are a matter for the authority to determine.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet Caergwrle community council to discuss the need for remedial action to be taken in the Derby road area of Caergwrle concerning underground drainage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No. This is a matter for the Welsh water authority which, I understand, has remedial action in hand.

Clayform Shopping Development

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet residents of the Broughton and Bretton communities who object to the proposed Clayform shopping development project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No, but any written objections submitted by the Broughton and Bretton communities, or any other party, will be carefully considered by my right hon. Friend in reaching a decision on whether to call-in the Clayform Company's shopping development proposal.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to ensure that a public inquiry is held on the application of the Clayform Company shopping development project proposal at Broughton and Bretton, Clwyd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The application by the Clayform Company has now been referred to the Welsh Office by the Alyn and Deeside district council as a material departure from the approved Clwyd structure plan, under paragraph 4 of the Town and Country Planning (Development Plans) (Wales) Direction 1981. A decision on whether the application should be called in for my right hon. Friend's determination, normally after holding a public local inquiry, will be made as soon as possible.

Mountain Lane CP School, Buckley

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the parent-teacher association and school governors of Mountain Lane CP school, Buckley, Clwyd, to discuss with them the need for a mobile classroom in order to avoid overcrowding and the need to conduct classes in the school hall which is also a dining room; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. Responsibility for determining school provision rests with the Clwyd local education authority. I am currently considering a proposal by the LEA to cease to maintain Bistre nursery school and a nursery extension to Mountain Lane CP school forms part of that proposal.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to make a statement on cancer treatment services for people in north Wales.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Delyn (Mr. Raffan) on 17 July 1989 at column 36.

Local Government Expenditure

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will state, for each district and county in Wales, for 1989-90 and 1990-91, the (a) spending need assessment, (b) adult population, (c) community charge at need, (d) domestic contribution for spending at need, (e) share of the national non-domestic rate pool, (f) share of revenue support grant, (g) the total of (e) and (f) and (h) expenditure.

Mr. Peter Walker: Illustrative figures for 1989-90 are given in the table. Figures for 1990-91 are not available.

| | (a) Standard spending assessment[1] | (b) Adult population[2] | (c) Community charge at standard spending | (d) Domestic contribution for standard spending | (e) Share of national non-domestic rate pool (NNDR) | (f) Revenue support grant (RSG)[3] | (g) Total of RSG and NNDR | (h) Assumed expenditure (Total rate income plus block grant)[4] |

HEALTH

Low Birth Weights

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by year from 1979 to date for the Trent regional health authority, and by hospital, the number of low birth weight deliveries recorded.

Mr. Mellor: We do not collect information centrally in the form requested. However, statistics on low birth weight deliveries are published annually in OPCS monitor DH3 "Infant and Perinatal Mortality" broken down into regions and districts but not hospitals.

Health Care Demand

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the annual increase in demand for health care due to new drugs, new surgical techniques, improved diagnostic techniques, new monitoring and life support equipment and better after-care methods.

Mr. Freeman: There is no precise measure of the annual increase in demand for health care as a result of medical advance which can both raise and lower costs of treatment and care.

Operations (Waiting Times)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current waiting time for the following operations: (a) kidney transplants, (b) hip replacement joints,(c) knee replacement joints and (d) cataract removal.

Mr. Freeman: Information on waiting times for kidney transplants is given in my reply to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Fearn) on 22 February at columns 674-75. For the other operations requested the latest information held centrally is for 1985 and is given in the table.

Estimated median interval in weeks between the time an in-patient was placed on the waiting list and admission to an NHS non-psychiatric hospital, England 1985

| Operation | Median Waiting Time (weeks) |
|---|---|
| Total hip replacement and arthroplasty of hip | 21 |
| Arthroplasty of knee | 21 |
| Operation on eye lens (mainly cataract) | 16 |

Dentists

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the contribution that the transfer of responsibility for payment of general dental practitioners to the Dental Practices Board will make to strengthening the role of family practitioner committees as set out in the White Paper "Working for Patients";

(2) whether he consulted the Society of Family Practitioner Committees or the Society of Administrators (Family Practitioner Services) on the transfer of responsibilities for payment of dental practitioners to the Dental Practices Board;

(3) whether responsibility for payment of general dental practitioners has now been transferred from family practitioner committees to the Dental Practices Board.

Mr. Freeman: Officials have written both to the Society of Family Practitioner Committees and to the Society of Administrators (Family Practitioner Services) about the propsal to transfer responsibility for paying dentists to the Dental Practice Board. The transfer has not yet taken place. Meetings to discuss the implications of the change will be held soon. It will not detract from the management role of family practitioner committees in relation to the delivery, quality and availability of general dental services in their areas.

CT Scanners

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many computerised tomography scanners are currently installed in England and Wales; how many are owned (a) by the private sector and (b) by the National Health Service; of the latter, how many were purchased by (i) health authorities and (ii) provided by private gift or public subscription; and if he will make available any information at his disposal on the number of such machines installed in other western countries at his disposal including the United States, Japan, Sweden, France and the Federal Republic of Germany.

Mr. Freeman: Latest information indicates that there are 198 CT scanners currently installed in England and Wales, of which 29 are owned by the private sector and 169 by the National Health Service. Our best estimates suggest that 61 per cent. of these scanners were purchased by health authorities and 39 per cent. by private gift or public subscription.

Available information on the number of machines installed in other western countries is limited; estimates suggest a total of 3,600 in the United States of America, 3,000 in Japan, 450 in West Germany and 200 in France. We have currently no details of the number in Sweden.

Kidney Dialysers

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many kidney dialysers are (a) currently installed in England and Wales; how many are owned (a) by the private sector and (b) by the National Health Service; of the latter, how many were (i) purchased by health authorities and (ii) provided by private gift or public subscription; and if he will make available any information at his disposal on the number of such machines installed in other western countries, including the United States, Japan, Sweden, France and the Federal Republic of Germany.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that the information is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging Machines

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many magnetic resonance imaging machines are currently installed in England and Wales; how many are owned (a) by the private sector and (b) by the National Health Service; of the latter, how many were (i) purchased by health authorities and (ii) provided by private gift or public subscription; and if he will make available any information at his disposal on the number of such machines installed in other western countries, including the United States, Japan, Sweden, France and the Federal Republic of Germany.

Mr. Freeman: Available information indicates that there are 19 magnetic resonance imaging machines currently installed in England and Wales, of which four are owned by the private sector and 15 are operated partially or entirely within the National Health Service.

The source of funding for the purchase of these 15 was as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Purchased by health authorities | 1 |
| Purchased by Department of Health and other Government agencies | 3 |
| Purchased by public appeal and the National Health Service | 1 |
| Purchased by public appeal and Government agencies | 1 |
| Purchased by public appeal and donation | 9 |

Information on the number of machines installed in other western countries is only available up to September 1988 and is limited; estimates suggest a total of 1,300 in the United States of America, 275 in Japan, seven in Sweden and 85 in West Germany. We have currently no details of the number installed in France.

Ultrasound Scanners

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ultrasound scanners are currently installed in England and Wales; how many are owned (a) by the private sector and (b) by the National Health Service; of the latter, how many were (i) purchased by health authorities and (ii) provided by private gift or public subscription; and if he will make available any information at his disposal on the number of such machines installed in other western countries, including the United States, Japan, Sweden, France and the Federal Republic of Germany.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that the information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Cyclotron Machine

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from which budget the money used to purchase a cyclotron machine for St. Thomas's hospital was taken.

Mr. Freeman: The Government grant of £6 million to the Cyclotron Trust will be funded from the Department's hospital and community health service budget. Details of the financial and operational arrangements for the proposed project have yet to be settled in consultation with those concerned.

Withington Hospital, Manchester

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will approve the decision of the South Manchester health authority to close a 24-bedded ward for the mentally ill at Withington hospital, Manchester; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The North Western regional health authority recently published an implementation framework, "Focusing on Care", which emphasises the development of district services and makes it clear that the closure of the four large mental illness hospitals in the North West region will be carried out only at a pace consistent with adequate provision for the mentally ill in the community. In addition to acute in-patient services in each district and a range of residential facilities designed to meet the needs of long term service users, the frame work envisages a range of day care facilities including more day hospital provision which all district health authorities will take forward within the annual capital spending programme for North Western region currently running at more than £90 million.

Acute psychiatric in-patient services for central Manchester are currently based well outside the authority's boundary and are due for renewal in August 1991. Options for new provision have been submitted to the regional health authority who expect to be able to announce in the autumn a three-year capital programme from 1990-91. These options have been developed taking account of medical opinion that the services would best be provided nearer to patients and if possible attached to the Manchester Royal Infirmary.

The South Manchester health authority announced on 13 July 1989 the temporary closure of ward P10 in Withington Hospital, Manchester from August 1989 when a refurbished ward P9 will become available for acute care in-patients in the psychiatric department of Withington hospital. As a result of discussions, I have been reassured that:

—no patients will be discharged from Withington hospital without the responsible consultant being entirely satisfied that adequate arrangements exist in the community to assist the patient and ensure continuing medical surveillance;

—no patient need be discharged from the Withington hospital as a result of the temporary closure of ward P10 which will not take place before the refurbished ward P9 becomes available;

—there will be 165 beds available in the South Manchester district for acute in-patient care for mentally ill patients. The average monthly occupancy over the past 12 months has been 153.

The South Manchester district health authority has been under acute financial pressure for a number of years and has had unfortunately to undertake a number of ward closures that have affected both Withington and Wythenshawe hospitals. There is an urgent need to re-appraise the duplicated provision of the whole range of district acute services in two major hospitals in the same district and situated within four miles of each other.

I plan to visit in the autumn the North West regional health authority in Manchester and Withington hospital and Manchester Royal Infirmary.

NHS Management

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will state the terms of reference of the National Health Service Policy Board, and the role and responsibilities of the National Health Service Management Executive.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: At its first meeting on 7 July the NHS policy board, established as a result of the White Paper "Working for Patients", adopted the following terms of reference:

"Key principles

The NHS Policy Board advises the Secretary of State on policy formulation for the NHS and the strategic oversight of the NHS. It does not concern itself with management responsibilities and operational detail, which are delegated from the Secretary of State to the NHS Management Executive.

Functions

In the light of these principles, the Board's functions are to:

1. support Ministers by bring both NHS and wider management perspectives to bear on the formulation of policy objectives for the NHS;

2. advise Ministers on the determination of the strategy within which the Management Executive will operate;

3. advise Ministers on the desirability and feasibility of operational objectives proposed for the Management Executive;

4. monitor the Management Executive's stewardship and performance.

Relationships with the Department of Health

The Policy Board draws on the advice and support of all those Divisions in the Department of Health which have responsibility for the development of policies applied in and through the NHS. It is particularly concerned with the overall pattern and balance of policies for the NHS, and with assessing the effectiveness of their implementation, not with the detailed formulation of specific polices."

It also agreed the Written Statement of the role and responsibilities of the NHS management executive, a copy of which I have placed in the Library.

Infant Deaths

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many babies died within one year of birth in 1987 and 1988;

(2) how many babies were stillborn in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Freeman: The information is shown in the table:

Number of infant deaths[1] and stillborn babies, England and Wales, 1987 and 1988

| | Infant deaths | Stillborn |

[1] Deaths under one year of age.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the total number of babies who died in 1987 and 1988, and to date in 1989 aged one week, two weeks, three weeks, four weeks, five weeks, six weeks, two months, three months, four months, six months, 14 months and 15 months;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the total number of babies who died in 1979, 1980, 1987, 1988 and 1989 aged one week, two weeks, three weeks, four weeks, five weeks, six weeks, 14 months and 15 months by area health authority;

(3) what was the total number of abortions performed at (a) 18 weeks, (b) 20 weeks, (c) 22 weeks, (d) 24 weeks,

(e) 26 weeks and (f) 28 weeks since 1968; how many were to save the life of the pregnant woman; and what percentage the latter represents of the former.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women were admitted to hospital for failed attempted abortion in each year since 1959.

Mr. Freeman: The available information is shown in the table taken from the hospital in-patient inquiry, a 10 per cent. sample study of National Health Service hospitals in-patient records. The last data year for this study was 1985.

The data shown are the number of patients recorded in this study with the principal diagnosis of failed attempted abortion, International Classification of Diseases (9th revision) code 638. There is no comparable code for earlier revision of the ICD, prior to 1979.

Number of patients (10 per cent. sample) with principal diagnosis of failed attempted abortion, England and Wales 1979-81 England 1982-85

| Year | Number in the sample |
|---|---|
| 1979 | 15 |
| 1980 | 8 |
| 1981 | 6 |
| 1982 | 11 |
| 1983 | 14 |
| 1984 | 8 |
| 1985 | 11 |

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received recently (a) supporting and (b) opposing the amendment of the Abortion Act 1967 to include the words "serious" and "substantially" in the criteria for an abortion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: None.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's policy on the availability of abortions to minors under the age of 16 years without parental knowledge or consent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Under the Abortion Act 1967 termination of pregnancy may be carried out if two registered medical practitioners are of the opinion, formed in good faith, that an abortion is justified in terms of the Act.

Parental consent to treatment of girls under 16 years of age, whether for abortion or any other condition, is not essential if, in the judgment of the doctors concerned, the treatment is in the girl's best medical interest and she has sufficient maturity and understanding to appreciate what is involved.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received (a) supporting and (b) opposing the introduction of legislation requiring that the parent or guardian of a minor under 16 years of age is informed before an abortion is performed; what percentage the latter represents of the former; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: One representation has been received on this subject and this supports a change in the law.

Embryo Research

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library his Department's response to the Glover report on embryo research, commissioned by the European Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Department has not responded as it was not involved in the commissioning or publication of the report. The Government do not in any case take a collective view on embryo research.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice and assistance was (a) sought by and (b) given to the Glover committee on embryo research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Dr. Glover and his committee did not seek any advice or assistance from the Department of Health.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what discussions he has held with other members of the Council of Europe on the issue of human embryo experimentation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Officials of the Department of Health have taken part in discussions of this issue by the Council of Europe's ad hoc committee of experts on bioethical issues (CAHBI).

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from the European Commission concerning his proposed Bill on embryo research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have not received any representations from the European Commission about this.

Mental Health Act Commission

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 are in hospitals covered by the Liverpool office of the Mental Health Act Commission.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 24 July 1989]: At 30 June 1989, the most recent date for which figures are available, there were 651 patients detained at the special hospitals at Moss Side and Park Lane. At 31 December 1986, the latest date for which a figure is available centrally for all detained patients in mental illness and mental handicap hospitals and the units covered by the Liverpool area of the Mental Health Act Commission there were 1,867 detained patients.

NHS Indemnity Scheme

49. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in introducing a National Health Service indemnity scheme.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: It remains the Government's intention to introduce new arrangements whereby health authorities would take financial responsibility for the negligent acts of their medical and dental staff in the course of their NHS employment. However this is subject to a satisfactory resolution of the outstanding issues, including the financial arrangements and the handling and financing of existing liabilities. If this can be achieved, it is proposed that the scheme should come into operation on 1 January 1990.

SCOTLAND

Trade Union Officials

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation to prevent district councils from paying the salary of a full-time trade union official; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. Paid facility time for accredited trade union representatives is a matter for individual employers, subject to the requirements of section 27 of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 and the provisions of the ACAS code of practice on time off for trade union duties and activities.

Police National Computer

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many accesses were made to each category of the stolen and suspect vehicle index of the police national computer over the last year; and what has been the percentage growth in use of these categories over the year;

(2) how many accesses were made to each category of the wanted and missing persons index of the police national computer over the last year; and what has been the percentage growth in use of these categories over the year;

(3) how many accesses were made to each index of the police national computer over the last year; and whether he will include in these statistics an indication of the number of access requests that could search more than one index;

(4) whether he has information as to the number of accesses made to the police national computer by each constabulary over the last year; and whether he can give the proportion of access requests made to the vehicle indexes of the police national computer.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is maintained on a Great Britain basis and I accordingly refer the hon. Member to the reply that he has received from my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Home Office.

YTS

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many trainees there are in Scotland participating in YTS.

Mr. Lang: On 30 June 1989 there were 49,602 young people participating in YTS in Scotland.

Local Government

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will seek to amend section 24(7) of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1975 to permit the commissioner to conduct investigations in respect of alleged maladministration affecting all or most people in a local government area.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so.

Well Woman Clinic, Glasgow

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what grounds Greater Glasgow health board closed the well woman and family planning clinic at Berryknowes Road, Glasgow; and what local consultations they engaged in.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This is a matter for Greater Glasgow health board but I will be replying to the hon. Gentleman's letter shortly.

Owner-occupation

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the trend in owner-occupation since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: One of the Government's principal housing objectives is to maximise the opportunities for home ownership. In Scotland, the proportion of houses in owner-occupation has increased from 35 per cent. in 1979 to over 45 per cent. at present, and over the 10-year period to 1988 the number of owner-occupiers has increased from 699,000 to 944,000. This substantial progress has been achieved largely by the introduction of the right to buy scheme for public sector tenants in 1980. Since then discount levels have been increased, and we have introduced a number of further improvements to the scheme to make it easier for tenants to purchase their homes.

Many other measures are aimed at continuing the growth of home ownership in Scotland. A major initiative has been the establishment of Scottish Homes, which has a wide range of functions, including the promotion of owner-occupation, especially for first-time buyers. We have asked Scottish Homes to introduce a scheme for house purchase under which the tenants' financial commitments will be related to their current rentt. This rens to mortgages scheme will be available to tenants of Scottish Homes and the Scottish new towns later this year.

There are other schemes which enable tenants of housing associations and local authorities to be offered cash incentives to purchase other properties; and the Scottish Homes low cost home ownership programme assists those who cannot purchase outright to make a first step towards owning their own homes.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of patients living in the Highlands and Islands conveyed to hospital by the Scottish ambulance service in hospital cars between 22 September 1987 and 21 December 1987.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The answer is 4,015.

Register House

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to reduce the entry charge to those seeking to undertake research at Register house.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Both the Scottish record office, at Her Majesty's General Register house, and the General register office (Scotland), at New Register house charge to recover the costs of various services they provide, but there is no entry fee as such to either.

Mental Health Unit, Glasgow

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the regrading and restructuring of the mental health unit of the Greater Glasgow health board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Statistical information on the effects of the regrading exercise on the nursing staff of the mental health unit is not held centrally. I understand that the health board is attempting to resolve a dispute with trade unions representing nurses in the unit so as to secure the lifting of an interim interdict which prevents the board from continuing with their proposals for restructuring the unit.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning nurse regrading in the mental health unit of the Greater Glasgow health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have received one anonymous letter purporting to come from a nurse employed in the mental health unit of Greater Glasgow health board.

School Meals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there has been a change in the take-up of school meals, resulting from the Social Security Act 1986, in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde, (c) Scotland and (d) England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Walker) on Wednesday 19 July at columns 199-200. Information about school meals in Strathclyde region is collected on an education division basis and is not available separately for Greenock and Port Glasgow. Information about the take-up of meals prior to 1989 can be found in the annual reports of the school meals census, copies of which are in the Library.

Questions about school meals in England and Wales should be addressed to my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Education and Science and the Secretary of State for Wales.

Taxi Drivers

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many private hire taxi drivers in each Scottish local authority area have been (a) reported and (b) charged with illegal operating activities; how many of these have been prosecuted; and how many of these have been found guilty in each year since 1983.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not separately identifiable in criminal statistics, which are centrally compiled.

Heather Burning

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will issue advice to farmers about the timing of heather burning in order to protect bird chicks; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The permitted dates for muirburn in Scotland are set out in the Hill Farming Act 1946. Advice on this legislation and on good management practice is contained in the "Guide to Good Muirburn Practice", jointly produced by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland and the Nature Conservancy Council and published for HMSO. A summary of this advice is contained in the leaflet "Muirburn—A Code of Practice" which is available free of charge from the Scottish agricultural colleges. In addition, the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland issues a press release each year to remind farmers and crofters about the date for the end of the muirburn season and the need to take proper precautions to prevent damage to wildlife and adjoining properties.

Suicide

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many suicides there were in prisons and young offender institutions in each of the past 10 years.

| 1984 | 5 |
| 1985 | 7 |
| 1986 | 7 |
| 1987 | 7 |
| 1988 | 7 |

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the number of incidents defined as suicide attempts in prisons and young offender institutions in each of the past 10 years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Statistics are not kept recording the number of suicide attempts.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who has responsibility for deciding whether an accident is to be classified as a self-inflicted wound or an attempted suicide in prisons and young offender establishments.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Governors of establishments make this decision, based on the advice of their medical officers.

Warrant Sales

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many warrant sales were carried out in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow and (b) Strathclyde in each of the past 10 years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of warrant sales reported to Greenock sheriff court (which has Port Glasgow within its jurisdiction) and the two sheriffdoms of north Strathclyde and of south Strathclyde, Dumfries and Galloway from 1979 to 1988 are set out in the table:

| | Greenock sheriff court | Sheriffdom north Strathclyde | Sheriffdom of south Strathclyde Dumfries and Galloway |

| 1988 | 3 | 123 | 116 |

Fishing Industry

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any proposals concerning the introduction of a quota system for the west of Scotland prawn fishery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Landings of nephrops (prawns) by United Kingdom vessels from the west of Scotland in recent years have been, on average, between 70 and 80 per cent. of the United Kingdom's total allowable catch. Current indications are that this situation is unlikely to change markedly in 1989 and it is not therefore considered necessary to introduce a quota system for this stock at this time. Fisheries departments will, however, continue to monitor uptake of this stock closely and will take steps to control this fishery, if necessary.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has concerning the introduction of a de-commissioning scheme for fishing vessels; if such proposals contain a suggested regulation stating that any such vessel must have a pressure stock licence before being accepted for de-commissioning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Fisheries Ministers are currently considering various issues concerning the structure of the fishing industry. A number of options, including decommissioning, are being considered as possible means of dealing with the present structural difficulties within the industry.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the weight and value of landings in each of the past 10 years; and what proportion of the total United Kingdom landings were for these years.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is given in the table:

Fish landings by United Kingdom vessels into Scotland

|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | | weight percent | value percent |

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the maximum value of phonecard permitted for purchase by prisoners; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: At Barlinnie and Perth prisons, where phonecards are in use, £1 cards are available for purchase by prisoners as necessary. Telephones for prisoners in other establishments accept coins.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the ratio of telephones to prisoners at (a) each prison, (b) Cornton Vale prison for women and (c) young offender institutions; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table. A range of factors bear on the number of telephones available for prisoners at establishments, including the level of demand for their use.

| | Ratio of telephones to number of prisoners/young offenders |
|---|---|
| Prisons | |
| (a) Aberdeen | 1:70 |

[1] Telephones for prisoners have not been installed at Peterhead.

[2] Consideration is being given to the installation of additional telephones at Polmont.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which prisons with authority to install telephones for prisoners are still without telephones; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Telephones for prisoners have not been installed at Peterhead prison.

Drainage Scheme, Inverness

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is satisfied that the independent environmental assessment into the proposed Inverness main drainage scheme, agreed to by Highland regional council, will be of sufficient scope to satisfy his criteria in making a subsequent decision on the planning application; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is for Highland regional council to determine the most appropriate method of complying with my right hon. and learned Friend's direction to provide an environmental statement. The statement will require to follow the criteria as laid down in the Environmental Assessment (Scotland) Regulations 1988 and in particular the advice given in schedule 3 of these regulations. When he receives the statement my right hon. and learned Friend will consider whether he requires further information before reaching a decision on the council's notice of intention to develop.

Fabrication Facilities, Lewis

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cumulative total of public investment in the development of the fabrication facilities at Arnish in Lewis.

Mr. Lang: for reasons of commercial confidentiality figures in the form requested are not available. However, figures published in British Business show that £1·37 million was offered to Lewis Offshore in 1975 by way of regional selective assistance. In addition, grants from the Highlands and Islands development board totalled £271,000.

Child Care

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if statistics are held centrally of places and shortages, by region or travel-to-work area, of child care facilities for working mothers.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Statistics of child care facilities provided by regional and islands councils are set out in periodic statistical bulletins entitled "Home Care Services, Day Care Establishments and Day Service" published by the social work services group, copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

Dundee High School

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much surplus European Community butter and meat was allocated to Dundee high school in the last year, and during each year since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 July 1989]: No surplus European Community food has been allocated to Dundee high school under the surplus food scheme, whereby butter and beef are made available for distribution free to people in receipt of income support or family credit, or of no fixed abode or living in welfare hostels.

However, Dundee high school is registered under the surplus butter to non-profitmaking organisations scheme and since February 1989 has been entitled to receive a maximum of 1,316 kg of reduced price butter per month.

Drugs (Ambulance Staff)

Mrs Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report those prescription-only drugs which ambulance staff in Scotland were allowed to administer to patients in their care prior to 30 June, and those which have subsequently been withdrawn.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The statutory list of prescription-only medicines which can be administered by ambulance staff to patients in life-threatening circumstances is as follows:

Adrenaline injection BP
Atropine sulphate injection
Chlorpheniramine injection
Cobalt edetate injection
Dextrose injection strong BPC
Diphenhydramine injection
Hydrocortisone injection
Mepyramine injection
Promethazine hydrocholoride injection
Snake venom antiserum
Sodium nitrite injection
Sodium thiosulphate injection
Sterile pralidoxime

The above medicines can be supplied to ambulance staff only on the instructions of the appropriate medical authority. The medicine for treatment of asthmatics, in use prior to 30 June, has now been re-established in ambulances.

The list of prescription-only medicines which may be carried by ambulance staff who have had extended training in accordance with National Health training authority guidelines is now the subject of discussions between health boards and the ambulance service.

These sums have been obtained by taking the average of Eurostat's monthly market exchange rates for each national currency, using a 12-month average for 1986-87 and a 13-month average for 1987-88. They do not, however, accurately reflect levy payment in the member states concerned because levy is not paid evenly throughout the course of the year. Information is not available on the monthly pattern of levy payments. This is why the figures originally provided were in national currency terms.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for East Lothian on 19 July, if he will give the average acreages of the whole farms which have been set aside in each county in England and Wales.

Mr. Maclean: The table shows county averages of the area set aside per farm by those participants in the scheme who in the crop year 1988-89 set aside the whole area used in the base year 1987-88 for relevant arable crops.

Brussels Agricultural Council

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Brussels Agricultural Council held on 24 and 25 July.

Mr. Gummer: The major issue at this meeting was the completion of the nine-month long negotiations over reform of the Community sheep regime, in which changes are required as part both of the CAP reforms generally and of the completion of the single market. After long and difficult discussions, in which many conflicting interests had to be reconciled, the Council reached agreement on the main elements of a new regime. Our key objectives —fair competition and no limit on the number of ewes eligible for premium—have been achieved. Other major points are:

- the introduction by 1 January 1993 of a single system of ewe premiums applicable throughout the Community;
- the replacing of intervention buying by provision for private storage aid;
- arrangements for transition from the various arrangements which member states apply now—including the phasing out of the variable premium in Great Britain by 1993;
- phasing out of clawback charges on Great Britain exports;
- after 1990, the sensitive area arrangements which have protected French and Irish markets from New Zealand imports will end;
- the separate stabiliser for Great Britain will end along with the variable premium;
- a separate all-Ireland region while the variable premium is being phased out, to protect the returns and competitive position of producers in Northern Ireland.

This was a very satisfactory outcome for the United Kingdom. The new regime will provide United Kingdom producers with a stable basis for the future and improve prospects for exporting. When the variable premium ends the new regime will be operating in such a way as to give our producers full and fair opportunities for trading within the Community. Flexibility will be allowed over the time table for phasing out the variable premium, and I shall be having discussions with the industry on this.

The proposals for headage limit were very significantly improved at the end of the negotiations as a result of sustained pressure from my right hon. Friend. The Commission had, with the support of most member states, proposed setting ceilings on the number of animals on which each producer could claim premium. It has been agreed instead that the full rate of premium will be paid on up to 1,000 ewes in the less favoured areas and up to 500 ewes elsewhere, and producers will receive 50 per cent. of the premium on all additional ewes without limit. This is a significant benefit for producers compared with the original proposals.

Some important details remain to be worked out and legal texts will come to the Council for consideration in the autumn. The Commission, however, has given clear assurances that it expects the measures to be budgetarily neutral from the end of transition. The Commission is to make proposals before the end of this year on changes in the stabiliser for the sheep sector.

The Council indicated willingness to adopt new arrangements for the import of mutton and lamb from New Zealand, on the terms negotiated some months ago by the Commission, when regulations on the new sheep regime are adopted, but was not—because of Greek opposition—able to achieve the required unanimity to pass new arrangements for the import of New Zealand butter. It was agreed instead to extend the present arrangements by a further two months.

The Council reviewed at length the state of the cereals sector including the operation of set-aside and the impact of drought. Many member states argued that because of reduced yields the Commission should take early action to suspend the operation of the additional coresponsibility levy. My right hon. Friend was prepared to agree with this if the Agriculture Commissioner proposed action, on condition that it was accompanied by provisions for a correction when firmer information was available and that next year's levy should be adjusted to take account of any inaccuracy this year. The Agriculture Commissioner, however insisted that, with information about the Community harvest still being uncertain, such action would be premature. My right hon. Friend yet again pressed the case for a fundamental review of the coresponsibility levy system for cereals, urging the Commission to come forward with the report promised in the last price review.

The Council had a first discussion of Commission proposals for changes in the milk quota system designed to bring down the volume of production in excess of quota, and to make additional quota available for certain groups of producers. These proposals will be considered further in September.

Finally, to give effect to part of the programme of assistance for Poland on which the Community recently decided, the Council agreed the emergency supply to Poland of stocks of various foodstuffs.

Potato Marketing Board

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many employees of the Potato Marketing Board are based at Between Towns road, Cowley.

Mr. Curry: A total of 125 employees are based at Between Towns road, Cowley.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will be in a position to make a statement on the future of the Potato Marketing Board.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Stroud (Mr. Knapman) on 20 July.

Straw and Stubble Burning

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his assessment of the impact on the environment including the ozone layer, of the burning of straw and stubble.

Mr. Maclean: The effect of straw burning on the ozone layer or global warming is negligible. My Department will, in 1990-91, be initiating research to measure dioxin emissions from straw burning. The careless burning of straw may cause nuisance, or damage trees, hedges or wildlife. This is why we have urged farmers to adopt alternative methods of disposal wherever possible; and to observe the local bye-laws and the NFU code of practice when burning has to be carried out.

Fishing Vessels

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any proposals for the introduction of a de-commissioning system for fishing vessles which does not require any such vessel to be in possession of a pressure stock licence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The possible introduction, and scope, of a decommissioning grants scheme remains as one of a number of options under consideration for reducing fleet capacity.

Food Irradiation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline his Department's procedure for consultation with outside bodies, including representatives of the food industry, consumer groups and pressure groups, prior to formal announcements of Government policy.

Mr. Maclean: When I am considering regulations or the amendment of regulations relating to food, I am required by section 118(6) of the Food Act 1984 to consult such organisations as appear to me to be representative of the interests likely to be substantially affected by the proposals in question. On other food matters both my colleagues and I and the officers of my Department maintain an ongoing dialogue where appropriate with the food industry, consumer groups and enforcement interests on the issues of the day and the possible solutions thereto.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those outside bodies he consulted and met prior to the formal announcement of Government policy on food irradiation; and if he will list the dates and durations of the meetings.

Mr. Maclean: Formal consultations were not undertaken prior to the recent announcement of Government policy on food irradiation: such consultations will be appropriate when detailed proposals are made.

Conservation

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 22 June, Official Report, columns 252-53, if he will list the year and the region in which the 20 conservation courses were held for agricultural development advisory service officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 July 1989]: The following is the information:

| | 1987 | 1988 | 1989 (to 22 June 1989) | 1989 (planned) |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Northern | — | 1 | — | 1 |
| Midlands and Western | 2 | 4 | 3 | — |
| Eastern | 3 | 2 | 1 | 2 |
| South-Eastern | 1 | 2 | — | 2 |
| South-Western | 2 | 1 | 1 | 6 |
| Wales | — | 1 | — | 1 |

Taking ADAS as a whole, most front-line advisory officers will have received conservation training by the end of the year.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training Scheme

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give for Great Britain and each region the number of YTS trainees in training as at December 1987 and December 1988, showing for each gender the numbers in each training occupational group.

Mr. Eggar: Due to the length of the reply, I will write to the hon. Member with the information and place a copy in the Library.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest available information from the YTS leavers' survey showing the earnings of those who remain in employment following the completion of YTS for both male and female, by each ethnic group and for each United Kingdom region.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is not available from the YTS leavers survey as the survey does not request earnings details.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the figures from the latest YTS leavers survey of the number of YTS leavers who recorded themselves as having some disability or handicap which affects the type of work they can do or the type of conditions they can work in, broken down to show whether they had been in YTS with (i) the private sector, (ii) the public sector, (iii) information technology centre, (iv) voluntary organisation and (v) for all types of providers.

Mr. Eggar: The latest period covered by the YTS leavers survey, March 1987 to February 1989, gives the results in the following table.

Table to show the number of young people self certified as disabled or handicapped which affects the type/conditions of work

| | Type of work | Conditions can work in |

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he now has information on how the 1989 European social fund allocation was divided in (a) actual cash, and (b) percentage terms between (i) central Government, (ii) local government, (iii) the voluntary sector and (iv) others.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The United Kingdom has been allocated £418 million from the European Social Fund for 1989. The breakdown in cash and percentage terms are as follows:

| | £ million | Percentage |
|---|---|---|
| Central Government | 236·0 | 56·5 |
| Local Government | 116·5 | 27·9 |
| Voluntary Sector | 25·9 | 6·2 |
| Others | 39·6 | 9·4 |

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Eggar: The number of letters received from hon. Members by departmental Ministers in January 1989 was 419; and 3,783 in the whole of this session up to 1 July 1989.

The number of letters sent to hon. Members by departmental Ministers in January 1989 was 358; and 3,766 in the whole of this session up to 1 July.

Information on the number of letters received from and sent to hon. Members by the rest of the Department is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the revised numbers of approved places allocated under employment training, what are the area budgets for the programme, and what are the allocations of supplementary grant, for each training agency area.

Mr. Nicholls: Up to 265,000 employment training places have been allocated for 1989-90. Detailed regional and area plans are under consideration by the Training Agency head office.

Liverpool City Council (Black Employees)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the percentage of black people employed by the Liverpool city council at the latest date.

Mr. Moynihan: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not separately distinguishable in statistics held centrally.

Benefit Claimants

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many claimants in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow and (b) Strathclyde were suspended from receipt of unemployment benefit during the period April 1988 to May 1989 for failing to demonstrate good cause for the termination of their last employment.

Mr. Nicholls: Information is not available in the precise form requested.

For the period 1 January 1988 to 31 March 1989, the number of persons in Scotland, who were disqualified for receiving unemployment benefit because they were considered to have left their employment voluntarily without just cause was 32,128.

Figures on the number of persons disqualified for leaving their employment voluntarily without just cause in the Greenock and Port Glasgow and Strathclyde areas are not collected separately, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Race Relations (Liverpool)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if, in the light of the report of the Liverpool 8 inquiry into race relations in Liverpool, he will initiate further Government measures in Liverpool 8 with a view to substantially reducing black unemployment in the area; and if he will give a report.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department operates a wide range of employment and training programmes designed to give unemployed people throughout the country the skills, confidence and motivation they need to compete for jobs. In many deprived areas these programmes are tailored to the needs of disadvantaged groups, including ethnic minorities, and we will continue to give a high priority to districts such as Liverpool 8. For example, Liverpool has been selected as one of the pilot areas for the new job interview guarantee which will give employers more incentive to recruit unemployed people from the inner cities. The pilot will be targetted on the Toxteth and Williamson square jobcentres.

Labour Statistics (Liverpool)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many black persons were unemployed in Liverpool 8 at the latest date; and what this represents as a percentage of the population;

(2) how many young black people have been unemployed in Liverpool 8 for more than (a) two years and (b) five years respectively.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The Government's priorities in helping small businesses are to create a climate in which they can flourish and to provide measures that support and stimulate their development. An improved climate has been achieved primarily through the Government's measures to control inflation and to reduce both the rates of taxation and the level of unnecessary burdens placed on small firms.

Measures operated by my Department to assist small businesses include:

The Small Firms Service which provides information and business counselling to new and established businesses. In the last financial year, the service answered over 281,000 enquiries (an increase of 6 per cent. on 1987-88), handled over 30,000 new counselling cases (an increase of 12 per cent. on 1987-88), and conducted over 43,000 counselling sessions (an increase of 10 per cent. on 1987-88);

The loan guarantee scheme. Over the past 12 months usage of the scheme has greatly increased. Applications are currently averaging 240 a month compared with last year's average of 164 per month. This increase has been due in part to the introduction of simplified procedures for loans up to £15,000 and a re-launch of the scheme in April 1989 when it was extended and enhanced following a major evaluation exercise. Changes made included increasing the maximum loan size fom £75,000 to £100,000;

The enterprise training element of employment training and the business enterprise programme. These help people set up in business through the provision of targeted training in all the basic aspects of business. The combined number of entrants to these programmes increased by 22 per cent. from 43,489 in 1987-88 to 53,003 in 1988-89. In addition, the graduate enterprise programme helps graduates take the first steps to setting up businesses on their own. The number of entrants to this programme rose from 155 in 1987-88 to 1,150 in 1988-89. Business growth training has now been introduced to provide help to established firms to develop their business and management skills.

My Department also provides financial assistance through the enterprise allowance scheme and makes substantial grants available to "Business in the Community", local enterprise agencies and the Prince's youth business trust, among others.

The Department monitors it's schemes with a view to assessing additionality, job creation, displacement and other relevant factors. Evaluation reports on particular schemes are published. Overall the success of these measures has been reflected in substantial and accelerating growth of the small business sector.

Over the period 1980 to 1986 the net increase in the number of VAT-registered businesses averaged nearly 500 per week. The average figure increased to nearly 900 a week in 1987 and indications are that the rate of increase in 1988 has been even faster, perhaps as much as 1,200 per week. Between 1979 and 1989 the number of self employed people increased by 61 per cent. to approximately 3·1 million.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social Fund Refusals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough areas of South Yorkshire, who were refused loans by social fund officers during the period April 1988 to the end of June 1989, on the basis that they had insufficient income to repay these loans, were advised to apply for community care grants; and, of this total, how many were granted.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The guidance in the "Social Fund Manual" (a copy of which is in the Library), makes it clear to social fund officers that on receipt of an application for a loan, they should bear in mind the possibility that a community care grant may be appropriate. It is not necessary for the applicant to be advised to apply separately for a grant and therefore the information requested is not collected. However, statistical information is available which shows that between April 1988 and the end of June 1989, on 122 occasions in the Doncaster area covered by the Doncaster, East and Doncaster, West local offices, and on 66 occasions in the Mexborough area covered by the Wath on Dearne local office, a grant was awarded instead of a loan for which an application was made.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough areas of South Yorkshire have been refused loans by social fund officers for the period April 1988 to the end of June 1989 on the basis that they have insufficient income to repay these loans.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information is not collected on the number of people refused loans or grants. The figures collected are based on applications. Between April 1988 and the end of June 1989, on 148 occasions in the Doncaster area covered by the Doncaster, East and Doncaster, West ILOs, and on 18 occasions in the Mexborough area, covered by the Wath on Dearne ILO, the social fund officer refused a loan application giving as a reason the applicants' inability to repay.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in (a) Greenock and (b) Port Glasgow who were refused loans by social fund officers during the period April 1988 to the end of June 1989, on the basis that they had insufficient income to repay these loans, were advised to apply for community care grants; and, of this total, how many were granted.

However, statistical information is available which shows that between April 1988 and the end of June 1989, on 18 occasions in the Greenock area, and on 78 occasions in the Port Glasgow area, a grant was awarded instead of a loan for which an application was made.

Family Incomes

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his reply to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett) of 30 March, Official Report, columns 545-8, showing (a) net spending power for a lone mother with two children aged four and eight years when (i) not working, (ii) earning £20 a week for part-time work, (iii) earning £40 a week for part-time work and (iv) working full-time and earning £60 through to £200 a week in steps of £10, (b) net spending power for a single-wage married couple with two children aged four and six years,

(i) not working, (ii) earning £20 a week part-time, (iii) earning £40 a week part-time and (iv) working full time and earning £60 through to £200 a week in steps of £10.

Benefits (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough areas of South Yorkshire are in receipt of (a) retirement pensions, (b) widows' benefits, (c) unemployment benefit, (d) sickness benefit, (e) invalidity benefit, (f) industrial disablement benefits, (g) industrial death benefit, (h) maternity allowance, (i) non-contributory retirement pension, (j) war pension, (k) attendance allowance and (l) invalid allowance.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that information is not available in the precise form requested. Nor are local figures held of the numbers of people receiving (a) retirement pensions, (b) widows' benefits, (f) industrial disablement benefits, (g) industrial death benefit, (i) non-contributory retirement pension, (j) war pension, (k) attendance allowance and (l) invalid care allowance.

With the exception of unemployment benefit the table shows, as at 30 June 1989, the latest date for which the information is available, the numbers of sickness/invalidity benefit and maternity allowance claimants at the Department's local offices at Doncaster, East, Doncaster, West and Mexborough which serve the Don Valley constituency although their boundaries are not conterminous.

| | Doncaster East | Doncaster West | Mexborough |
|---|---|---|---|
| Sickness/Invalidity Benefit[1] | 4,708 | 6,099 | 2,261 |
| Maternity Allowance | 29 | 50 | 4 |

Notes:
[1] The local office count of cases in action does not distinguish between sickness and invalidity benefit.
[2] Numbers shown are included in the figure for the Doncaster local authority area.

Turkish Asylum-seekers

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that asylum-seekers from Turkey who have entered the United Kingdom with a limited leave visa are eligible for income support.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In cases where a Turkish asylum-seeker is given only limited leave to enter this country, income support at a reduced rate may be claimed.

Residential Homes

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current minimum and maximum difference in (a) Inverclyde and (b) Strathclyde between charges levied by private residential homes and the maximum weekly payment made by his Department; and how many elderly people have been removed from residential homes in Inverclyde and Strathclyde in each of the last three years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The level of charges in a residential care home is a matter between the residents and the owners of the home. Information on the fees charged by individual homes and the numbers of people removed from homes is not collected centrally.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the maximum weekly payment made by his local offices in (a) Inverclyde and (b) Strathclyde to support elderly people in private residential and private nursing homes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The maximum weekly payments from income support towards fees in residential care homes and nursing homes respectively are:

| | £ | £ |
|---|---|---|
| For the elderly | 140 | 190 |
| For the very dependent elderly | 155 | — |
| For the terminally ill | — | 230 |

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the latest figures for the number of people caring for another person who, because a claim for attendance allowance has not been determined within the 26 weeks allowed, either (a) are required to be available for work as a condition of getting income support, or (b) would not be treated as available for work but are paid reduced income support, with the voluntary unemployment deduction applied on grounds of hardship.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret the information requested is not available.

Family Support

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Sir I. Gilmour), Official Report, 18 July, column 39-40, if he will show the amount of support received in 1978-79 and 1988-89 by the following categories (a) single payments for maternity expenses and any other single payments identifiable as support for families such as beds, safety gates and high chairs: (b) expenditure on welfare foods for pregnant women and under-fives and (c) free school meals.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. The single payments scheme came into existence in November 1980—succeeding exceptional needs payments for which there is no information on maternity expenses. The first data collected were in the December 1981 "Annual Statistical Enquiry". This showed that single payments totalling £2·6 million has been made for maternity expenses. However, as the information relates to payments made in the 12 months preceding the inquiry to claimants in receipt of benefit at the time of the inquiry it does not record all the single payments made in the year.

Social fund maternity payments replaced the single payments provision in April 1987. Payments totalling £15 million were made in 1988-89.

Neither the single payments nor social fund data identify payments made as support for families.

Responsibility for expenditure on welfare foods and school meals lies with my hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science, respectively.

Income Support

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West, of 4 July, Official Report, column 137, whether he will publish in the Official Report a table accounting for the differences between the illustrative income support rates in the technical annex to the 1985 White Paper and the rates introduced in April 1988, showing the effect of each of the factors contributing to those differences.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: As made clear in the document, the rates published in the technical annex to the 1985 White paper were purely illustrative. The actual income support rates were set taking account of the circumstances at the time.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what amount of deduction in the calculation of the April 1988 income support rates the adjustments to provide help towards the requirement to make a minimum contribution to domestic rates referred to in the reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West, of 4 July, Official Report, column 137, was included for the purpose of meeting part of the cost of that help; and what were the amounts of the adjustments before and after such deductions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: There were no deductions from the adjustments referred to.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what continuing monitoring he is making of the effect of the reform of social security; and what is his latest estimate of the percentage of claimants on income support who are receiving less than they would have under the previous rules for supplementary benefit uprated for price inflation.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We are continuing to monitor all aspects of the social security reforms.

Estimates of the effects of the reforms on income support beneficiaries were set out in the booklet "Impact Of The Reformed Structure Of Income-Related Benefits" published in October 1987, a copy of which is in the Library.

Social Fund

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish the annual report of the social fund commissioner.

Mr. Newton: I am pleased to announce that I have today published the social fund commissioner's annual report for 1988-89. I have placed copies in the Library.

The report describes, as required by statute, the standards of review achieved by social fund inspectors. I am grateful to the commissioner for this, for the advice and assistance she has given the social fund inspectors in undertaking their important role of independent review of social fund officers' decisions, and for setting up the organisation in this first and crucial year.

Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications were made for grants from the social fund in the year 1988-89 in the Paisley, North constituency.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Paisley, North constituency is served by the Department's office at Paisley.

Between 11 April 1988 and 31 March 1989, 1,308 applications for community care grants from the social fund were made to the Paisley office.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in (a) Greenock and (b) Port Glasgow have been refused loans by social fund officers for the period April 1988 to the end of June 1989 on the basis that they had insufficient income to repay these loans.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information is not collected on the number of people refused loans or grants. The figures collected are based on applications. Between April 1988 and the end of June 1989, on 112 occasions in the Greenock area, and on 87 occasions in the Port Glasgow area, the social fund officer refused a loan application giving as a reason the applicant's inability to repay.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what independent research into the social fund he has commissioned.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my hon. Friend the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) on 24 May 1989 at columns 544-45.

Community Care

Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many community care grants were refused by his Department's office in Paisley to people living in the areas of priority treatment known as Ferguslie, Shortroods and Moorpark, Renfrew; and if he will list the total number of clients refused in the Paisley, North constituency in 1988-89;

(2) how many community care loans were made to constituents of Paisley North and how much was loaned to clients in areas of priority treatment in (a) Ferguslie, (b) Moorpark and (c) Shortroods in 1988-89.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications have been made for community care grants at the social security offices in (a) Paisley, (b) Johnstone, (c) Port Glasgow and (d) Greenock.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information for the period 11 April 1988 to 30 June 1989 is contained in the table.

| Office | Applications for grants |
|---|---|
| (a) Paisley | 1,899 |
| (b) Johnstone | 1,179 |
| (c) Port Glasgow | 1,169 |
| (d) Greenock | 1,461 |

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were refused community care grants at each Renfrewshire social security office.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department's offices in Renfrewshire are Paisley, Port Glasgow, Greenock, and Johnstone, but the boundaries are not conterminous.

The information requested can be obtained from the data in the Library.

Ministerial Visit (Crosby)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his official visit to Crosby.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State visited the Department's local office in Crosby on 30 June 1989. Crosby is one of 23 pilot offices which are rigorously testing three major computer systems in our computerisation programme—the operational strategy—before it is extended to cover the rest of our local office network from October. The purpose of the visit was to meet the staff and to see how the operational strategy was performing in a pilot office. The office was open to the press on the day of the visit so that they could see the systems demonstrated. Despite industrial action by some staff my right hon. Friend was able to meet other members of staff and the visit was both informative and successful.

Loans (Renfrewshire)

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people received loans from each of his Department's offices in Renfrewshire since 1988-89.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department's offices in Renfrewshire are Paisley, Port Glasgow, Greenock, and Johnstone, but the boundaries are not conterminous.

Details of loan applications processed and awards made for each of the offices are available in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by each charging authority in Wales the income level at which (a) a single person aged under 25 years, (b) a single person aged over 25 years, (c) a single pensioner, (d) a pensioner couple and (e) a couple with two children, all with no savings, would lose entitlement to a community charge rebate assuming the safety-netted community charge figures for 1989-90 with the latest safety net arrangements.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 15 June at column 531-34 which gave the information requested using the assumption that the full safety net was in operation. The implications for the safety net of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales announcement on 20 July on local government finance in Wales in 1990-91 have yet to be determined.

Lone Parents

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much of benefit expenditure on lone parents including lone parent benefit, income support, family credit and housing benefit, is recouped from the absent parents; and what proportion of total outlay this amount represents.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 19 July 1989]: The Department has power to recoup benefit expenditure on lone parent families only where income support is in payment. Where parents are divorced or unmarried recovery applies only to benefit in respect of the children.

Based on the latest available figures for May 1988, lone parents receive income support of £1,789 million per annum net of £88 million maintenance paid direct to the lone parent. The Department collects a further £43 million from the absent parents. It is also estimated that a possible further £25 million may be saved in cases where DSS takes action on maintenance and the need for benefit is removed altogether.

Benefit expenditure saved therefore amounts to approximately 8 per cent. of what is estimated would have been spent on lone parent families but for the Department's action on maintenance. It is not possible to say how much of the total was recoverable.

Pensioners

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) of 3 July, Official Report, column 43, if he will place in the Library his calculation showing that the living standards of pensioners have risen by 23 per cent. since 1979 in real terms; if he will break his calculation down by decile and quintile group, with and without housing benefits; and if he will use equivalised and non-equivalised figures in each case.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 24 July 1989]: In 1979 pensioners average total net income was £72·90; by 1986 this had risen to £89·80 (both at 1986 prices and rounded to 10p). This represents a real terms increase of 23 per cent.

The real terms increase in pensioners average total net income by quintile is as follows:

Per cent.

| | Non-equivalised | Equivalised |
|---|---|---|
| Q1 (lowest) | 20 | 17 |
| Q2 | 23 | 20 |
| Q3 | 21 | 20 |
| Q4 | 20 | 21 |
| Q5 (highest) | 27 | 30 |
| All | 23 | 23 |

Source: Family Expenditure survey 1986.

The real terms increase in pensioners average total net income by decile is as follows:

Per cent.

| | Non-equivalised | Equivalised |
|---|---|---|
| D1 (lowest) | 18 | 16 |
| D2 | 21 | 18 |
| D3 | 23 | 19 |
| D4 | 23 | 20 |
| D5 | 21 | 20 |
| D6 | 21 | 20 |
| D7 | 21 | 20 |
| D8 | 20 | 22 |
| D9 | 22 | 23 |
| D10 (highest) | 29 | 35 |
| All | 23 | 23 |

Source: Family Expenditure Survey 1986.

It is not possible to perform the calculation with and without housing benefits because until 1983 help with housing costs was provided partly through supplementary benefit.

ENVIRONMENT

Private Tenancies

10. Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has made any estimate of the increase in the number of private tenancies as a result of the provisions of the Housing Act 1988.

Mr. Chope: No. The provisions of part I of the Housing Act 1988 deregulating the private rented sector have been in force for only just over six months and it is too soon to evaluate their impact. We shall carry out a detailed evaluation as soon as practicable.

Council House Sales

14. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of council house sales in Lambeth at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Howard: Lambeth sold about 520 dwellings in 1988-89.

48. Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of council house sales in Tower Hamlets at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Chope: Tower Hamlets has reported 1,276 sales under the right to buy, for the financial year 1988-89, this excludes May and June 1988 for which no monthly reports were made.

58. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants in England since May 1979.

Mr. Chope: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him on 28 June 1989 at column 480, by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Mr. Trippier).

Housing Allocation (Leicester)

16. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the housing allocation made to Leicester city council for the years 1989-90.

Mr. Chope: Leicester's basic allocation of £8,955 million was the largest for any local authority of comparable size outside London.

Local Authorities (Trading Practices)

18. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take action against those local authorities which attempt to evade the provisions of the Local Government Act 1988 by unfair trading practices.

Mr. David Hunt: Yes.

Local Government Finance

19. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of people, in percentage terms, who have complied with the community charge registration process in England and Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: We shall not have information on the total number included in community charges registers until December 1989. It is clear, however, that in most authorities the first stage of the registration process is proceeding well.

23. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the possible options for need assessments under the new system of local government finance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: On 12 July we discussed a report by officials, which contains a range of options for standard spending assessments, with the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance. My right hon. Friend will not be taking any final decisions until the autumn.

24. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the cost of introducing a system of local government finance based on capital value rates plus local income tax.

Mr. David Hunt: The Labour party's two-tax system could cost up to four times as much to administer as the existing rating system.

32. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the level of safety net for local authorities under Her Majesty's Government's new system of local government finance.

Mr. David Hunt: The safety net is the result of the old system of local government finance. I refer the hon. Member to the statement made to the House on 19 July by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for the Environment, which contained full details of the proposed safety net.

40. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to ensure that tenants in the private rented sector are not put in the position of paying the community charge without a corresponding deduction in the rate element of their rent.

Mr. David Hunt: Protected tenants paying rents which include rates will have the normal protection of the Rent Act 1977 for tenancies entered into before 15 January 1989, and may register fair rents which are exclusive of rates. The Housing Act 1988 will apply to most tenancies entered into after that date, and any rents determined by the rent assessment committee under that Act will be exclusive of rates. Any reductions in inclusive rents arising from the introduction of community charge should be settled on the basis of individual contracts. The Department will be producing shortly a booklet on the impact between the community charge and rents in the series "You and the Community Charge".

63. Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what medical advice he has considered in deciding to exclude severe dementia sufferers from community charge exemption.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Redcar (Ms. Mowlam) on 28 June at column 482.

75. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from Professor Elaine Murphy of Guy's hospital, London as to the viability of assessing severe dementia for the purposes of community charge exemption; and what response he has made.

Mr. David Hunt: Professor Murphy wrote to my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Local Government on 6 July about this matter. I am now considering her letter and have agreed to meet professor Murphy to discuss it.

78. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further consideration he has given to the impact of poll tax registration on the levels of electoral registration in the light of early experience of registration.

Mr. David Hunt: If there is any impact of community charge registration on electoral registration it can be connected only with the misleading use of the term "poll tax" for party political purposes.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any illustrative figures to show the level of poll tax to be levied in Nottingham in 1990-91.

Mr. David Hunt: I have no illustrative comunity charge figures for 1990-91. Illustrative community charges published on 19 July reflect 1989-90 local authority responsibilities and levels of expenditure.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the criteria determining whether a local authority should be (a) a gainer or (b) a loser from the community charge safety net (i) in the estimates given for hypothetical community charges in 1988-89 and (ii) in the estimates given on 19 July for hypothetical community charges in 1989-90.

Mr. David Hunt: Areas which are shown as gaining from the safety net are those in which the total of community charges assumed to be raised from residents is higher than the total of domestic rates. Conversely, areas contributing to the safety net are those where the total of community charges are assumed to be lower.

Details of the calculations for illustrative community charges for 1988-89 and 1989-90 were contained in the explanatory notes accompanying the tables placed in the Library on 23 June 1988 and 19 July 1989, respectively.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each charging authority the average rate per adult charged in 1989-90, showing also the averages for each region, inner London, outer London and the rest of the south east separately, and for England as a whole.

Mr. David Hunt: A rate per pound of rateable value was charged by each charging authority in 1989-90. There was no rate per adult.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what a senior ward sister currently living in a flat in Battersea would pay for her local services under (a) the community charge, and (b) a system of capital value rates and local income tax allocated on an 80/20 basis.

Mr. David Hunt: In 1989-90 a ward sister earning £15,000 living alone in a flat Battersea worth £70,000 would pay a community charge of £375 (disregarding the transitional safety net) and £639 under a system of capital value rates plus local income tax.

Homelessness

20. Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has developed any fresh proposals to reduce homelessness.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier today by my right hon. Friend to the hon. Member for Carlisle (Mr. Martlew) and for Leyton (Mr. Cohen).

25. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will seek powers to redirect the resources currently spent on bed-and-breakfast accommodation for homeless people towards the provision of purpose built accommodation for them.

Mr. Chope: I am currently reviewing the homelessness legislation and hope to announce conclusions soon. But it is for local authorities to determine how to direct resources to meet their local housing needs. My Department has consistently advised that the best use must be made of existing stock to house the homeless before recourse to temporary accommodation and that bed-and-breakfast hotels should be used only as a last resort, especially for families.

New Town Housing (Warrington)

21. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new town houses have been built in Warrington since the inception of the new town development corporation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: A total of 13,126 owner-occupied and rented dwellings have been provided in Warrington under the new town development programme, an excellent achievement by the development corporation.

International Initiatives

22. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps the Government are taking to develop international initiatives to conserve the world's environment.

Mr. Chris Patten: Global climate change represents the greatest threat to the world's environment and the Government have called for the support of all nations in preparing an international framework convention. This call was endorsed by the governing council of the United Nations environment programme (UNEP) in June and by the economic summit in Paris on 16 July. The summit also supported the United Kingdom's proposals to phase out the use of chlorofluorocarbons, to give added momentum to international work on integrating environment and economic decision making, to safeguard tropical forests and to strengthen the United Nations environmental institutions, especially UNEP.

Town Halls

27. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on expenditure by local authorities on the construction of new town halls.

Mr. David Hunt: In the financial year 1987-88, capital expenditure on new construction for general adminstration by local authorities in England was £123 million.

Vacant Properties

28. Mrs. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to ensure that local authority houses are not left vacant.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State awaits the results of a survey by our Department of local authority empty property and will then consider action, in consultation with the local authority associations.

Housing Corporation

29. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the expected level of provision of the Housing Corporation for 1991-92.

Mr. Howard: Current plans provide for gross capital expenditure by the Housing Corporation in 1991-92 of £1,328 million.

47. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of funding for the Housing Corporation in 1988-89.

Mr. Howard: The Housing Corporation's gross capital expenditure in 1988-89 was £791·3 million.

Unified Business Rate

30. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the transitional mechanisms to be introduced in connection with the unified business rate.

Mr. David Hunt: Some 150 initial responses have been received to our consultation paper and we have had many more representations subsequently.

44. Sir John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the National Hairdressers Federation in respect of the likely impact of the unified business rate upon hairdressing salons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The National Hairdressers' Federation's letter of 29 May was taken into account in settling the transitional arrangements announced by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State on 19 July.

English Heritage

31. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the chairman of English Heritage; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State met Lord Montagu on 5 May when he opened English Heritage's new offices in Newcastle and discussed a number of heritage issues.

Ivory Imports

33. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he gave to the position of the legitimate ivory trade in imposing a unilateral ban on ivory imports.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We recognised that the ban would affect the legitimate ivory trade, but this was outweighed by the need for immediate action to protect the African elephant pending decisions on a long-term strategy for its future survival.

Mortgage Repayments

34. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to assist people getting into difficulties with mortgage repayment.

Mr. Chope: Any person who falls into difficulty with mortgage repayments should contact his or her lender as soon as possible. Responsible lenders will be sympathetic and willing to help.

There are also independent organisations which offer advice to people in this situation. The Government give grants to 20 voluntary bodies which provide such a service.

Environmental Safety (Symbols)

35. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has discussed for introducing a recognisable symbol for environment safety on consumer products.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Officials, together with officials from the Department of Trade and Industry, have recently studied the issues raised by environmental labelling for consumer products and have spoken to a range of interested parties, including representatives of consumers, producers, retailers and environmentalists. This study has taken account of the experience of the Blue Angel environmental labelling scheme in the Federal Republic of Germany, and of developments in the European Community. We shall make known our conclusions on this study in due course.

Information Office

36. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes to establish an information office which will provide detailed evidence as to the state of the environment.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government are considering how best to present the public with the facts about the quality of the environment.

Unleaded Petrol

37. Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of new cars are capable of running on unleaded petrol.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Ninety six per cent. of new cars registered in May could use unleaded petrol. 70 per cent. could run on unleaded petrol straight away and the remaining 26 per cent. after adjustment.

Rugby Union

38. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of the Rugby Union; and what subjects he expects to discuss.

Mr. Moynihan: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 22 June at column 202.

Large Firms

41. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has had any recent discussions on environmental matters with the firms BP, Barclays Bank, Inchcape, BAT Industries or Shell.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I meet representatives of the oil industry to help promote the use of unleaded petrol. I discuss environmental matters generally with individuals, local authorities, voluntary organisations and industry on all possible occasions.

Local Government Services (Contracting Out)

42. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of councils in England and Wales now contract out local government services; and how much has been saved since 1981 as a result of such contracting out.

Mr. David Hunt: Under part I of the Local Government Act 1988, all authorities in England and Wales are required to introduce competition for certain services, starting on 1 August 1989. Previous studies of voluntary competition indicate that savings of 20-30 per cent. have been achieved.

Pollution

43. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment at what date part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 was implemented.

Mr. Moynihan: The main provisions of part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 were brought into force between July 1984 and October 1986. These provided for more effective protection of inland, surface and underground waters, the extension of controls to cover all coastal and estuarial waters and public involvement, for the first time, in the water pollution control system. These provisions are re-enacted and where appropriate strengthened in the Water Act.

Toxic Waste

45. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much toxic waste per annum is generated and treated or landfilled in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1987-88 the estimated arisings of special waste in the United Kingdom were 2,036,000 tonnes.

Sewerage Charges

46. Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the construction industry about the likely cost of sewerage and water connection charges following privatisation of the water industry.

Mr. Howard: I have had one meeting with representatives of the House Builders Federation, and my officials have held two meetings with them to discuss the detailed arrangements for introducing a charge at the time new connections are made to water mains and public sewers under powers included in the Water Act 1989.

Bathing Water

49. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many years were given to member states to identify a full list of bathing waters for the purposes of the 1975 bathing waters directive.

72. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many bathing waters complied with the 1975 European Community bathing waters directive in*(a)* May 1979 and (b) May 1989.

Mr. Howard: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Yardley (Mr. Bevan).

Estate Action

50. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much estate action money will be allocated to Lambeth this year.

Mr. Chope: This largely depends on Lambeth's progress in finalising its proposals for estate action work. The Department's estimate is that some £1 million will be allocated to the borough.

Open Spaces (Bristol)

51. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning action by the Bristol urban district council to acquire land used by people of Bristol as open space for unscheduled development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Moynihan: Bristol city council made representations, after it was consulted about the proposed vesting of land at St. Anne's road which is likely to be needed for a road junction improvement. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment decided not to proceed with the vesting order but to allow an opportunity for negotiation to see whether the development corporation can acquire the land by agreement.

Merseyside Development Corporation (Jobs)

52. Mr Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many jobs have been created within the area covered by the Merseyside development corporation since its inception.

Mr. Moynihan: Since the Merseyside development corporation was established, 3,500 permanent jobs have been created in the designated area. The corporation's regeneration programme has also led to on site construction jobs of about 1,000 man years work annually.

City Waterways

53. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the cleaning and dredging of city waterways.

Mr. Howard: The Department has no record of any recent representations.

Rents

54. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department has made any assessment of the increase in rents in the private sector following the introduction of market rents for new tenancies in January of this year.

Mr. Chope: It is too soon to make such an assessment.

62. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has made any assessment of affordable rent levels in the private and public rented sector.

Mr. Chope: Housing Benefit is intended to ensure that assistance is available to households whose rent might otherwise not be affordable.

First-time Buyers

55. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any further plans to assist first-time buyers.

Mr. Chope: Under this Government the number of owner-occupiers has risen dramatically by over 3 million. More people now own their homes than ever before. We do not believe that further general incentives to owner-occupation are necessary.

However, we are funding through the Housing Corporation shared ownership schemes run by housing associations which allow people to enter the housing market by purchasing part of the equity in their homes, and paying rent on the balance.

60. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider making changes to section 52 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 to help local first-time buyers along similar lines to those the Welsh Office has announced it is considering for Wales.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend's statement of 3 February at column 433 indicated the basis on which planning authorities in rural areas in England may wish to release small additional sites for development where there is evidence of a local need for low cost housing. The draft planning guidance issued by the Welsh Office on 30 June is on broadly similar lines, but with specific reference to conditions in Wales. It proposes no amendment of section 52.

My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Wales issued a consultation paper on 11 July (Official Report, column 483) which invited comments on separate proposals to amend section 52. In that context we shall consider any views on the need for changes to section 52 to facilitate the provision of low cost rural housing. Comments are invited by 11 September.

Competitive Tendering

56. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to be able to publish figures showing the savings accruing to local authorities as a result of competitive tendering.

Mr. David Hunt: The Department will shortly be issuing a questionnaire to authorities seeking information about the outcome of the first round of competition under the Local Government Act 1988, which starts on 1 August of this year. The results of this survey should be available early next year.

Chlorofluorocarbons

57. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made in persuading aerosol manufacturers to ban the inessential use of chlorofluorocarbons.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 24 May 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Walker) at column 584.

68. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the United Kingdom to meet the 50 per cent. reduction in chlorofluorocarbons use laid down in the Montreal protocol.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 18 May 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Rochford (Dr. Clark) at column 262.

Litter

59. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) of 28 June, Official Report, column 485, when he now expects to make an announcement on fixed penalties for littering.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State on 20 July 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) at columns 347-48.

Building and Maintenance (Competition)

61. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from organisations on his proposals to change the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980, with respect to competition for building and maintenance work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Rother Valley (Mr. Barron) earlier today.

Emergency Expenditure (Grant Penalty)

64. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning clause 125 of the Local Government and Housing Bill and the question of grant penalty being applied in the event of emergency expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I have received a number of representations concerning what is now clause 142 of the Local Government and Housing Bill. One of the features of the new local government finance system is that there will be no link between an authority's spending and the amount of revenue support grant it receives. Expenditure on emergency work will not, therefore, result in any grant penalty.

Vacant Properties

65. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council properties in the London borough of Wandsworth were empty on 10 July.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 24 July 1989 by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Mr. Trippier).

City Grant

66. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he takes to ensure that his discussions with developers and local authorities on city grant applications do not conflict with his position as the final authority on planning applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: City grant applications are not accepted for appraisal unless planning permission for the project has already been granted or is due to be considered shortly by the local planning authority. Projects are discussed and appraised only in relation to the criteria for City grant and, until there is a final determination of planning permission, I do not take a decision on the city grant application.

Hostels

67. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has developed any proposals to meet the permanent housing needs of residents of hostels and special needs housing projects in England and Wales.

Mr. Chope: The increased resources made available by the Government for capital expenditure on housing will enable more subsidised permanent accommodation to be provided, which can be used for residents of hostels and shared housing where appropriate. In addition, the future arrangements for Government support for special needs housing by housing associations are under consideration in consultation with the Housing Corporation, the National Federation of Housing Associations and representatives of the hostels movement.

Countryside Commission

69. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what meetings he has had recently with the chairman of the Countryside Commission; and what matters were discussed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have met the chairman of the Countryside Commission, Sir Derek Barber, along with ministerial colleagues, on several occasions this year to discuss issues related to the work of the commission and the development of policies for the countryside.

Landfill

70. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next intends to review the controls on landfill operations in England and Wales.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A thorough review of legislation relating to waste management is nearing completion. New legislation, which will include many measures to improve the control of landfills, will be introduced at the earliest opportunity.

Association of District Councils

71. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the Associtіon of District Councils; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State met leaders of the Association of District Councils at the meeting of the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance on Wednesday 12 July. The consultative council discussed the terminology for the new system of local government finance; projections of local authorities' spending in 1990-91; proposals for new standard spending assessments; and arrangements for the future review of standard spending assessments.

GREA (Barnsley)

73. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the grant related needs assessment for Barnsley metropolitan district council; and whether he will provide extra resources to that authority.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend the then Minister for Local Government met a delegation from Barnsley metropolitan borough council with the hon. Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. McKay) on 29 June. At that meeting, and in a letter subsequently received from the Leader of the council, Barnsley made representations on standard spending assessments, on the overall level of grant and on its own resources. Before taking any decisions on the grant settlement, we shall consider all respresentations made, including those by Barnsley.

Electricity Generation

74. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his assessment of the long-term relative environmental friendliness of the main alternative means of electricity generation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No means of electricity generation are entirely free of environmental effects. Both nuclear power and renewable energy sources have a valuable contribution to make to the aim of limiting the emission of environmentally damaging gaseous pollutants and of greenhouse gases, which result from the burning of fossil fuels.

Planning Appeals

76. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning appeals in the last 12 months for which figures are available have resulted in decisions which are contrary to local plans where these have been in place.

Mr. Chope: I regret that this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Marine Nature Reserves

77. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last discussed the status and numbers of marine nature reserves; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Ceredigion and Pembroke, North (Mr. Howells) on 28 June 1989 at column 492. Officials of the Department are in regular contact with NCC on these matters.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has received from the Nature Conservancy Council as to the difficulties experienced in progressing marine nature reserve designations; if he has any plans to review (a) the existing consultation procedure or (b) section 36 and 37 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My Department is in close touch with the Nature Conservancy Council on all matters connected with the designation of marine nature reserves, including consultation procedures. There are no plans at present to revise sections 36 and 37 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Sports Council

79. Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the chairman of the Sports Council; and what matters were discussed.

39. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Sports Council; and what subjects he intends to discuss.

Mr. Moynihan: My last formal meeting with the chairman of the Sports Council was on 3 July when we discussed the council's corporate plan. We meet at regular intervals to discuss issues relating to sport.

Data Protection

80. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many poll tax registration forms have been referred to the data protection registrar for alleged breaches of data protection principles.

Mr. David Hunt: I understand that the data protection registrar has requested all community charges registration officers to provide him with a copy of the form they are using to compile the community charges register.

White Paper

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, for each of the last three White Papers issued by his Department, for which legislation has been started, he will state the time elapsed between their publication and the First Readings of any Bills connected with them; and if he will do the same for the last three White Papers issued by his Department prior to May 1979.

Mr. Chris Patten: The last three White Papers published by my Department, in which legislation was proposed and has been subsequently started or completed, were "Privatisation of the Water Authorities in England and Wales", "Housing: The Government's Proposals" and "The Conduct of Local Authority Business—The Government Response to the Report of the Widdicombe Committee of Inquiry". These were published in February 1986, September 1987 and July 1988 respectively; and the First Readings of the Water Bill and Local Government and Housing Bill which resulted from them took place in the record of the last Government in this matter, but the information requested should be available in the Library of the House and the Official Report.

River Quality

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of United Kingdom rivers are in class 1 of river water quality and what is the comparable percentage figure for the European Community as a whole.

Mr. Howard: The 1985 river quality surveys indicated that about 83 per cent. of river lengths in the United Kingdom were classified as being of class 1 (good) quality. Comprehensive information on a comparable basis for other EC member states is not available. However, a study published in 1988 by the water research centre, in reviewing classification schemes across member states, showed that on the basis of comparisons made using the United Kingdom river classification scheme, only 39 per cent. of rivers in the European Community as a whole were of good quality. Only one other member state—Ireland at 84 per cent.—had a greater proportion of "good" quality rivers. A summary of these results is published in the Water Authorities' Association publication "Water Facts 1988".

97-107 Shaw Street, Liverpool

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the future of 97-107 Shaw street, Liverpool; and whether he will intervene to prevent the demolition of these properties.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is not aware of any representations following the then Secretary of State's decision on the Liverpool city council order. This decision was issued on 30 March 1989 and the city council has a five-year period within which it must take action.

A total of five statutory and 102 non-statutory objections were received in response to the compulsory purchase order, all of which were considered by my right hon. Friend before he issued his decision.

Civil Service (Relocation)

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Chris Patten: Around 38 per cent. of the Department of the Environment's staff of approximately 6,000 (excluding the Property Services Agency) are already located outside London, 24 per cent. outside the south east. All other posts have been assessed for relocation potential, and some 1,350 posts have been identified for detailed investigation. Studies covering 320 posts are complete, leading to proposals to move some 90 out of London, which are now being implemented. Studies covering the other posts will be carried out over the next two years or so, as operational requirements allow.

Seventy per cent. of the PSA's staff of 22,800 (including the Crown Suppliers) are already located outside London, 45 per cent. outside the south east. The agency is being restructured to become a more commercial organisation, and the scope for further relocation is being examined through the business planning process.

Aggregates (Demand)

Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the demand for aggregates.

Mr. Chope: When I announced the publication of MPG6 in March, I said that its purpose was to ensure that the construction industry continues to receive an adequate and steady supply of minerals at the best balance of social, environmental and economic costs; and that there was a need to apply the national and regional guidelines at the mineral planning authority level and that the Government believed that this should be treated as a priority task by the mineral planning authorities and the regional aggregates working parties.

I have now been advised by the national co-ordinating group that the recent and current level of demand for construction aggregates is running at a level substantially higher than that envisaged when MPG6 was prepared. I am also advised that in some parts of the country, the guidelines contained in MPG6 have not yet been fully implemented.

In these circumstances, the Government believe that it is very important that both industry and mineral planning authorities take positive steps to respond to the present situation. In particular both should ensure that the guidance given in MPG6 is implemented as a matter of priority. The following three points are of particular importance.

First, for aggregate minerals the aim should be to provide for the release of land to maintain a stock of permissions (a landbank) for an appropriate local area, sufficient for at least 10 years extraction unless exceptional circumstances prevail. This is not the case in many areas and industry and mineral planning authorities should consider urgently what steps should be taken to make further provision.

Secondly, the guidelines suggested how provision could be made for the period up to 2005. At present rates of consumption it will be needed over a shorter period than that. Authorities should recognise that to maintain landbanks in accordance with MPG6 and to ensure that future demand can be met, this provision may well need to be brought forward and made available at an earlier point in the period.

Thridly, when preparing and altering development plans, mineral planning authorities should have regard to the current situation, and policies should be formulated with an appropriate degree of flexibility.

The Department is making provision for an up-to-date survey of aggregates—AM89. It is important that this should be completed by the end of 1990. At that time we shall also be in a position to take account of such important factors as the results of our current research projects into alternative sources of supply and the planning considerations which affect minerals extraction. In the light of changing circumstances work on a revised forecast will begin soon in order that the results can be taken into account for the next edition of the guidelines.

Finally I would like to reiterate that the Secretaries of State attach importance to the speedy and effective implementation of the policies and guidelines contained in MPG6. These aim to ensure that the needs of society for minerals are satisfied with due regard to the protection of the environment. They look to mineral planning authorities and the industry to achieve this and they will have regard to this statement in considering development plans, planning applications and appeals.

I am drawing this statement to the attention of all mineral planning authorities and to the planning inspectorate and I am asking that national co-ordinating group to monitor the situation and provide a progress report in six months' time.

Landfill Sites (Harmful Gases)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to issue further policy guidance about planning powers in relation to landfill sites which may be generating harmful gases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Wales have today published a circular "Landfill Sites: Development Control" (Doe circular 17/89, Welsh Office circular 38/89). Copies of which will be placed in the Library.

The circular, which takes account of comments on a draft issued last December, gives further advice to local authorities about the use of their planning powers in relation to landfill sites in England and Wales which may be generating harmful gases.

Polymer Modified Bitumens

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those city councils who specify polymer modified bitumens.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected by the Department.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies he has made of the environmental improvement to the atmosphere that would be achieved if county council surveyors specified polymer modified bitumens.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Warren Spring laboratory, on behalf of the Department, is assessing the emissions of volatile organic compounds to atmosphere and the options for their control. Work on unmodified, thermal and blown bitumens is not yet complete.

Water Authorities (Advertising)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the cost of the Yorkshire water board's advertising annually from 1979 to 1989;

(2) what is the cost of the water authorities advertising in the current financial year both in total throughout the country and by region.

Mr. Chris Patten: These are questions for the individual water authorities concerned.

Noisy Parties

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he plans to take any steps to strengthen the powers of the police to deal with complaints about noisy late night parties.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The police have no powers to act against noise nuisance from premises. The Control of Pollution Act 1974 provides local authorities with adequate powers to control such nuisance.

Shellfish Farms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how shellfish structures or associated shore-based developments are classified under the planning system; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what powers he has to control the siting of shellfish farms and associated shore-based structures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The breeding and keeping of livestock (which can include fish and shellfish) for the production of food falls within the definition of "agriculture" in section 290(1) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971. Class A of part 6 of schedule 2 to the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988 grants permitted development rights for the carrying out on agricultural land of building works or any excavation or engineering operations reasonably necessary for the purposes of agriculture, subject to a range of conditions. In national parks and some adjacent areas the exercise of some of these rights is subject to approval by the local planning authority.

Class C of part 6 grants additional permitted development rights to carry out operations to construct fishponds or other engineering operations on agricultural land for the purposes of a fish or shellfish farming business registered under the Diseases of Fish Act 1983, again subject to a range of conditions. Any fish or shellfish farming development that does not satisfy the conditions of part 6 requires specific planning permisson. The Department's consultation paper on possible new permitted development rights in the countryside, issued on 8 May, invited views on whether it would be desirable to curtail permitted development rights for fish farming in national parks. Responses to this consultation paper are now being considered.

Shooting Rights

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) instructions, (b) advice or (c) requests he has given to the Nature Conservancy Council, or other bodies, concerning the prohibition of or making agreements regarding shooting rights in environmentally sensitive areas together with the relevant dates; what advice he sought or received from bodies with relevant interests; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There is agreement between the Department and the NCC that traditional country rights and uses of land should be interfered with only where they are in conflict with conservation interests.

Liverpool City Council (Employees)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the number of black people employed by the Liverpool city council, (a) at the latest date and (b) in 1980.

Mr. Moynihan: This information is not separately distinguishable in statistics held centrally.

Information

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the assembly and dissemination of environmental information.

Mr. Patten: I am concerned at the tendency for factual environmental information to be treated as political statements. I am therefore exploring ways of ensuring that objective assessments of environmental issues are taken out of political dispute.

Environmental Risk (Advice)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will establish an independent and authoritative national agency for monitoring and advising on environmental risk and regulatory performance.

Mr. Patten: Effective pollution control is best promoted through organisations tailor-made to regulate specific issues such as the National Rivers Authority, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and local pollution control agencies. There is no need for a new national agency.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government are going to respond to the fourth report of the House of Lords Science and Technology Select Committee on hazardous waste disposal.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We are today publishing a full response to the Committee's report. We are pleased to note that there are many points on which the Committee support the Government's present policies and proposals for legislative change. In particular both the Government and the Committee have expressed concern over the waste disposal control framework, delays by local authorities in completing waste disposal plans, landfill gas management and the control of imports. These are all matters on which we have already made progress.

We could not accept the Committee's recommendations on certain issues such as the registration of hazardous waste producers and statutory regional groupings of waste disposal authorities. Our response has included the reasons.

We welcome the opportunity the Committee's fourth report has provided for discussing the important issues. The Government have made advance towards solving the problems and improving the system of control since the Committee last reported in 1981.

Rate Support Grant (Calderdale)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the total rates in Calderdale was represented by the rate support grant in each year from 1979 to 1988.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 10 April 1989]: The percentage of Calderdale's expenditure, as defined for the purposes of calculating grant, which is represented by rate support grant in each year from 1981 to 1988 is as follows:

| | Per cent. |
|---|---|
| 1981-82 | 71 |
| 1982-83 | 65 |
| 1983-84 | 68 |
| 1984-85 | 67 |
| 1985-86 | 67 |
| 1986-87 | 56 |
| 1987-88 | 59 |
| 1988-89 | 56 |

It is not possible to provide information for 1979-80 and 1980-81 in the form requested, as the rate support grant system used prior to 1981-82 did not separately identify grant paid in respect of districts and counties.

Recycling

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to encourage the recycling of (a) used batteries, (b) household chemical wastes and (c) cloth; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 19 July 1989]: The Government encourage recycling whenever it makes economic and environmental sense.

Many batteries are already recycled. For example, some 80 per cent. of all lead acid automotive batteries are fully reclaimed. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will be considering how to respond to the proposed European Community directive on batteries.

Advice on the disposal of awkward household wastes was published in 1974 by HMSO. This includes guidance on chemical waste reclamation.

The recycling of textiles is a matter in the first instance for industry, which will encourage the recovery of all textiles for which there is a viable market.

Bottle Banks

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the ratio of bottle banks to head of population for all the European countries for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 20 July 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 6 February 1989 to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) at col. 518.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 24 July 1989]: My Department contributes to the Government policy of creating a climate in which small businesses can flourish, in particular by simplifying and removing unnecessary controls on them. The major deregulation initiatives carried through and in progress are set out in the White Paper "Releasing Enterprise" (Cm. 512). They include substantial changes to the planning system, the development of integrated pollution control, and the reform of the building regulations, all of which simplify procedures and remove unnecessary burdens on businesses of all sizes. Separate information on small businesses is not available.

Water Authorities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to use those statutory powers available to him to prosecute water authorities which do not comply with EEC directives.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 25 July 1989]: Where my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has enforcement powers relevant to implementation of EC directives, he will consider using them in appropriate circumstances.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will bring up to date the figures given in his written reply dated 16 December 1986, Official Report, column 438, concerning the specified rate of return on net assets for each water authority, together with a forecast for 1990-91; and if he will include figures showing (i) the net assets in 1987-88 in each case, (ii) the realised profit in 1987-88 in percentage and cash terms, (iii) the corresponding forecast for the current financial year, (iv) the target rate of return after privatisation and (v) the estimated effect the target rate would have on the cash margin in the current financial year.

Mr. Howard: The water authorities' performance against their specified return on assets is set out in their published annual accounts for 1987-88, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Copies of their unaudited accounts for 1988-89 were placed in the Library of the House on 6 July. Copies of their final reports and accounts, which will contain a statement of their performance against the specified return on assets will be laid before Parliament in August.

No target rates of return have been set for 1989-90 or for subsequent years.

Anti-abortion Rally, Westminster

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the use of Abingdon street gardens, Westminster, for an anti-abortion gathering, for the purposes of filming and sound recording, on 27 and 28 June, was authorised under the appropriate byelaws; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 July 1989]: The Department's press office facilities officer granted written permission to the Society for the Protection of Unborn Children for a photocall with Members of Parliament, at Abingdon street gardens, Westminster, on 27 and 28 June under the Royal and Other Parks and Gardens Regulations 1977, section 4, paragraph (7) and (16).

The permit generally covered filming, photography and sound recording.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Dog Handlers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the prison department has withdrawn payment of the grooming or care allowance to those prison officer dog handlers obliged to care for the dogs at home in their own time.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Prison officer dog handlers used to receive one hour plain time overtime per day to cover the time spent grooming, exercising and feeding the dog.

Fresh start working abolished overtime beginning in 1987. We accept the need to recompense dog handlers for their continuing responsibility for the care and maintenance of their dog and have made two offers to the Prison Officers' Association, both of which have been rejected. Negotiations should be resumed in the near future.

Conservative Party Conference 1988

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Sussex on the number of individuals upon whom he has records on computer relating to the 1988 Conservative party conference; for how long it is proposed to keep them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: No. This is an operational matter for the chief constable.

Immigration

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any circumstance applies, which is neither exceptional nor compelling under his guidelines, but which has arisen because of (a) a mistake or (b) a misrepresentation of a relevant fact by an immigration officer, resulting in a proposed removal, in which he will accept representations from right hon. or hon. Members; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether (i) a mistake or (ii) a misrepresentation of a relevant fact is an exceptional and compelling circumstance enabling representations to him from right hon. or hon. Members.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to his previous question, on 16 June 1989 at column 565.

Political Asylum

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Immigration Service Union about the granting of exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom to political asylum seekers as a result of his Department's backlog criteria; and what has been his response.

Mr. Renton: Officials in the refugee unit have corresponded with the metropolitan liaison officer at the union's national executive committee, answering inquiries about a range of issues relating to asylum procedures, including the granting of exceptional leave to remain.

For the four preceding parliamentary Sessions, I refer the hon. Member to the respective Journals of the House.

Prisons (Pin-up Pictures)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether all offensive pin-ups have now been removed from prison offices, particularly from rule 43 units for sex offenders.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Circular instruction 12/1989 (a copy of which is in the Library) advised governors in March this year that regional directors would be consulting and issuing guidance on the action which should be taken to prevent the display of offensive material in public and shared areas of prisons. This work is being carried forward, but information is not available centrally on the present position in individual establishments.

Prisons (Drug Addicts)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the available facilities in gaols in England and Wales for the treatment of known drug addicts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As the hon. Member is aware, the possibility of history of drugs misuse is one of the factors medical officers enquire into during the course of their examination of inmates being received into prison custody. The nature and extent of medical help offered is determined by the medical officer's clinical assessment of the individual case.

The policy statement and guidelines, copies of which are in the Library, referred to in answer to the question from the hon. Member on 9 February at column 760 describe the framework for the development of help for drug misusers in prison.

Prisoners (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. John Patten: I have nothing to add to the replies given to questions from the hon. Member on 2 May at column 31 and from the hon. Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman) on 22 June at column 187.

Female Prisoners (Drug Offences)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of female prisoners currently being held under sentence or on remand in a gaol in England and Wales whose area of origin is either west Africa, Latin America or Pakistan, and who have been convicted or are charged with a drug-related offence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The offences with which remand prisoners are charged are not recorded centrally until the completion of court proceedings. ## Prisoners (Drug Users)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of prisoners currently remanded or sentenced in gaols in England and Wales who are known to be drug users; and if he will make a statement.

They show that 2,628 were so reported during that year.

Friend the Member for Newbury (Sir M. McNair-Wilson) that it was not proposed to add water cannon to the range of equipment available to the police. That remains the position.

As the House was informed at the time, plastic baton rounds and CS equipment for use in dealing with serious public disorder were made available to police forces in Great Britain following the riots in 1981. My right hon. Friend announced the arrangements for supply of this equipment to police forces and the issue of guidelines covering its use in answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) on 19 May 1986 at columns 15 and 16.

Aid

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all countries which received assistance from his Department during the past 12 months.

Mr. Hurd: We have provided assistance to a number of countries in a variety of fields including the fight against drugs; training of police officers, prison officers and immigration officers; forensic science service assistance and training; and the provision of equipment.

The countries we have assisted in this way include Bermuda, Colombia, the Cayman Islands, Cyprus, Finland, France, Hong Kong, India, Jamaica, Lesotho, Oman, Pakistan, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey and the United States of America. In addition, one of Her Majesty's inspectors of fire service led a small team of London fire brigade officers to help in the aftermath of the earthquake in Armenia. A full list of the countries which we have assisted could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

London Fire Stations (Closures)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has regarding proposals to close six London fire stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I understand that London fire brigade's chief fire officer has recently completed a review of fire risk categorisation and standards of fire cover. The chief fire officer has yet to present his report and findings to the London fire and civil defence authority. Her Majesty's chief inspector of fire services was consulted by the chief fire officer about the methodology used in the review.

A fire authority which proposes to close a fire station is required to seek my approval to the closure under section 19 of the Fire Servcie Act 1947. No application for approval has yet been made. I remain committed to maintaining nationally recommended standards of fire cover.

Police National Computer

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any private limited company has ever had access to police files or to the police national computer.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No non-Government organisations have ever had direct access to the Police National Computer, but arrangements exist for information from police records, including records held on PNC, to be disclosed to selected organisations where this is clearly in the public interest. Access to force records is a matter for chief officers.

Mr. Hurd: I am placing in the Library a copy of a consultation paper which my Department is issuing today, jointly with the Lord Chancellor's Department, on possible reform of committal proceedings. The purpose of the paper is to obtain comments from practitioners and others on the suitability, practicability and implications for resource use of a possible new scheme to replace existing arrangements for mode of trial procedure and committal. Comments are requested by 3 November. In the light of the comments received, we shall consider further whether and, if so, how to bring forward detailed proposals for legislative reform.

Parking

Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in his consideration of the report of the parking enforcement working party.

Mr. Hurd: We have given careful consideration to the report's conclusions. We have decided that no change should be made at present to the operation of parking enforcement outside London. The problems of parking enforcement in London raise many complex issues, to which we are giving urgent consideration.

Durham Prison

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many strip searches have been carried out on women in Her Majesty's prison, Durham, in each of the last six months; and how many forbidden or dangerous items have been found.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Comprehensive records of strip searches are available only in respect of category A women prisoners, of whom there were four in Durham during the last six months. Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have received the report and its recommendations are currently being considered.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will authorise an increase in the amount of time allowed for exercise to women prisoners in Her Majesty's prison, Durham.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I will consider this in the light of the recent report by Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average number of prisoners who are employed; and what is the average working week, in Durham H wing.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Of the 37 women held in H wing of Her Majesty's prison, Durham, 36 are employed. The average working week is 25 hours.

Women Prisoners

Rural Initiatives

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has reached a decision on the future of the DRIVE grant scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The evaluation of the DRIVE grant scheme has demonstrated that the scheme has made a positive contribution to overcoming the problems of rural Wales. I have therefore decided that the scheme will be re-introduced from 1 September and will continue to be operated by the Development Board for Rural Wales and the Welsh Development Agency. The relaunched scheme will be competitive and will have the aim of increasing private sector investment on economic projects which create jobs and help to overcome deprivation in rural Wales. The scheme is expected to run until 1994-95 with up to £5 million of grant assistance available, and the scheme has the potential to generate more than £20 million of private sector investment and create over 1,000 jobs.

Statutory Instruments

Dr David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The total number of statutory instruments issued by my Department from November 1984 to 26 July 1989, for each calendar year, is as follows:

| 1986-87 | 12 | 13 |
| 1987-88 | 14 | 4 |
| 1988-89 | 6 | — |

These figures are in respect of statutory instruments issued solely by my Department relating only to Wales and do not include statutory instruments made jointly which cover England and Wales.

National Curriculum

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many national curriculum documents he has despatched to local education authority schools by heading and by volume; what is the estimated cost of (a) production and (b) despatch; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The following documents in connection with the national curriculum have been distributed to local education authorities and schools by the Welsh Office. Most of the documents are produced and distributed by the Department and costs cannot be separately identified:

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he will take to assist those schools and local education authorities who are having difficulty in obtaining in good time national curriculum documents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The distribution of national curriculum documents from the Department to schools normally takes place through local education authorities but some urgent documents have been distributed to local education authorities and all schools directly. Both methods have involved tight delivery schedules and material has been distributed as quickly as possible. Officials continue to seek improvements in the efficiency and speed of the distribution network.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1988-89.

(b) Capital aid of £1,547,000 for Belize and £615,000 for Honduras;

In 1989-90 we expect our aid to the region to remain at about the same level.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Jurors

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Attorney-General (1) if he will increase the levels of compensation paid for loss of earnings to those on jury service;

(2) what plans he has to increase the level of compensation paid for loss of earnings to self-employed people on jury service.

The Solicitor-General: The financial loss allowance, which may be paid to cover loss of earnings, was increased by a little less than nine per cent. on 3 July last.

Where the period over which earnings or benefit are lost or additional expense is incurred is not more than four hours in any day, the maximum sum now payable is £16·15; where the period is more than four hours, the sum is £32·35; and where a juror has served on more than 10 days, for each day over the tenth the sum may exceed that specified but shall not exceed £64·70. These limits are reviewed annually in accordance with Treasury guidelines. All such sums are tax free. No distinction is made between those who are self-employed and others.

The Prime Minister: We believe in giving practical encouragement to the growth of democracy in eastern Europe. For example, we have offered Poland £25 million over five years to help develop the expertise needed to run democratic institutions and a market-based economy. I am glad that the Paris summit decided to co-ordinate such efforts internationally. I welcome the seminar for Hungarian politicians being organised this week by the Great Britain/east Europe centre and look forward to further such ventures. We are ready to help other east European countries which embark on the road to democracy.

Health Care

Q92. Mr. Hind: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding the Government's achievements in expanding health care.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of such representations. Since 1979, the level of resources for the NHS has increased by 40 per cent. in real terms and gross annual capital expenditure now stands at £1·25 billion. The numbers of those providing care has also increased, with 14,000 more doctors and dentists and 67,000 more nurses and midwives. There are now 1·5 million more in-patient cases treated in a year, 3·75 million more out-patient attendances and over 500,000 extra day cases. Considerable improvements have been made on screening, transplants and infant mortality. The Government have received much support for their commitment and record on expanding and improving the level of health care and for their proposals to build on these successes to create a service which is even more responsive to the needs of local communities whilst allowing patients improved choice.

Biggin Hill (Selection Centre)

Q209. Sir John Hunt: To ask the Prime Minister what response she has made to the petition handed in to No. 10 Downing street on 14 July, with regard to the proposed closure of the RAF officer and aircrew selection centre at Biggin Hill.

The Prime Minister: I noted the petition carefully and I readily understand the strong feelings of those who wish to see the RAF's historic links with Biggin Hill retained.

Nevertheless, the RAF ceased flying from Biggin Hill in 1959 and the officer and aircrew selection centre is now the only unit based at the station. The decision to transfer this unit to the RAF college, Cranwell, was taken in the interests of efficiency, economy and the present day needs of the Royal Air Force. The memorial chapel will be retained at Biggin Hill as a permanent tribute to the station's role in the Battle of Britain.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Prime Minister what is the target date for the issue of the Cabinet Office's list of ministerial responsibilities encompassing the recent ministerial changes.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Department of Energy does not have data on retailers' margins. The figures from the Commission of the European Communities on the pump price (in pence per litre) of premium grade petrol in each of the member states, over the first four months of 1989 is as follows:

Efficiency

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress has been made towards achieving the aim of 20 per cent. energy saving in the United Kingdom economy, as identified by the Energy Efficiency Office.

Mr. Peter Morrison: When the Energy Efficiency Office was established in 1983, we believed that the nation could improve its energy efficiency by 20 per cent. leading to savings of £7 billion in our annual energy bill. At our last calculation in December 1987, the UK had so improved its energy efficiency as to be saving some £2.3 billion per year at 1983 prices. At this rate, the £7 billion or 20 per cent. saving is likely to be achieved by 1995.

On-shore Licensing

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to announce a third round of onshore licensing.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I have today placed in the Libraries of both Houses a copy of a notice inviting applications for landward exploration licences in a third round of onshore licensing. The notice will be published in the London and Edinburgh Gazettes at the earliest possible opportunity. Applications will be invited for any currently unlicensed areas in the United Kingdom within the boundaries defined by the Petroleum (Production) (Landward Areas) Regulations 1984, and in accordance with the guidance given in the Gazette notice. In addition, holders of old-style exploration licences (XLs) will be allowed to convert them to new exploration licences provided that they are ready to carry out a drilling programme.

Successful applicants will be offered landward exploration licences under the terms of the Petroleum (Production) (Landward Areas) Regulations 1984. The licences will be offered for a non-extendible term of six years and will entitle the licensee to carry out seismic survey and deep drilling work, subject to the need to obtain consent from the appropriate mineral planning authorities.

Application forms and guidance notes will be available from my Department. Applicants will be expected to offer a suitable programme of exploration, which will generally involve both seismic survey and drilling work, designed to cover the whole of the area they are applying for.

Applications will be returnable on 17 and 18 October 1989. I hope to be able to announce awards within a few months thereafter.

Renewable Energy Sources

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will estimate the contribution of renewable energy sources to Britain's energy needs in the years 1995, 2000 and 2010.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The most recent estimates of the potential contribution from renewable energy sources were published in energy paper 55, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House. The Government intend to set orders for up to 600 MW of renewable energy capacity during the 1990s, in addition to whatever is contracted by the end of this year under the non-fossil fuel obligation in the Electricity Bill. The proposed levels of these special tranches will be kept under review to ensure that when the obligations are laid they take fully into account the potential availability of renewable capacity.

Coal Mining

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, what assessment he has made of the impact on the local economy, of the rundown in the deep coal mining industry of (a) the south Yorkshire and (b) the north Yorkshire areas.

Mr. Michael Spicer: While no such specific assessments have been carried out, my Department helps to alleviate the difficulties caused by colliery closures through its funding of British Coal Enterprise Ltd.

Coal-fired Power Stations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the coal-fired power stations operating in the United Kingdom, their opening date and anticipated closing date.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is an operational matter for the CEGB. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member direct.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: The number of statutory instruments made by Ministers in my Department during each of the last five parliamentary Sessions, including the present Session to date, is:

| Parliamentary Session | Total | Negative | Affirmative | Not required to be laid before Parliament |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1984-85 | 195 | 4 | 3 | 188 |
| 1985-86 | 146 | 10 | 2 | 134 |
| 1986-87 | 56 | 6 | 2 | 48 |
| 1987-88 | 89 | 16 | 5 | 68 |
| 1988-89 | 34 | 6 | 3 | 25 |

Councillor Bett (Letter)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on his response to the letter from Councillor Graham Bett, the chair of Leicester city council's policy and resources (development schemes) sub-committee, dated 21 July.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend received a letter from Councillor Bett on 25 July and will be responding to him shortly.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the benefits of the combined heat and power schemes.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Where it is economic, combined heat and power technology produces net benefits which stem from its higher fuel efficiencies compared with conventional plant. There are likely to be environmental benefits as a result of the reduction in the amount of fuel needed to meet a given demand for heat and power compared with using separate technologies. It is in recognition of these benefits that the Government have supported and promoted the development of economic CHP schemes. They have introduced measures in the Electricity Bill to enable CHP to compete with other established electricity suppliers. For example, licensed CHP operators will have new powers to break streets to lay electricity lines and heat mains. The Bill also enables the Director of Electricity Supply to monitor and collect information on the use and application of CHP. Output from CHP schemes based on non-fossil fuels such as refuse or landfill gas will count towards the non-fossil fuel obligation.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the level of cash guarantee demanded by the East Midlands electricity board in respect of the combined heat and power scheme in Leicester.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a commercial matter between the East Midlands electricity board and Leicester Energy Ltd.

Leicester Energy Limited

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, in relation to the meeting held between Leicester Energy Ltd. and officials from his office in the recent past, he will state (a) the length of the meeting, (b) the date of the meeting, (c) the names of the officials attending and (d) what action was proposed by the Government to assist the project.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Officials of my Department's electricity division and Energy Efficiency Office have met representatives of Leicester Energy Ltd. on a number of occasions. Representatives of Leicester Energy Ltd. and of the East Midlands electricity board last met my officials on 19 July. The parties confirmed that their decision not to proceed with the Leicester project was taken on commercial grounds and therefore the issue of Government assistance was not raised.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is, for each year since 1974, the total public expenditure on energy conservation schemes.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Expenditure by my Department on energy efficiency programmes since 1979 is as follows:

| Year | £ millions |
|---|---|
| 1979/80 | 2·4 |
| 1980/81 | 4·5 |
| 1981/82 | 6·9 |
| 1982/83 | 9·4 |
| 1983/84 | 11·4 |
| 1984/85 | 17·5 |
| 1985/86 | [1]22·5 |
| 1986/87 | [1]24·5 |
| 1987/88 | 18·6 |
| 1988/89 | 18·5 |

[1] 1986 was Energy Efficiency Year.

Budget allocation for 1989-90 is £15 million. Information on years before 1979-80 is not readily available on a comparable basis.

Atomic Energy Authority

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what scope he envisages for the diversification of the business of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. Michael Spicer [pursuant to the reply, 24 July 1989, c. 723.] The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (AEA) recently commissioned consultants to assist it with its longer-term strategic thinking. In line with the consultants' recommendations, the AEA has decided to restructure its activities into a series of distinct businesses under the new corporate identity of AEA Technology. The businesses will be focused on the areas of work with the best commercial prospects. Each will have its own chief executive, who will be responsible for its efficient and profitable development. I understand that a number of key appointments will be announced shortly. The businesses will serve customers worldwide and will spearhead the effective commercial exploitation in selected markets of the unique skills which the AEA has built up over the years, largely in the service of the nuclear industry.

The Government welcome these developments. I believe that the AEA has the potential to improve the performance of a wide range of British industry. The Government also support its drives for increased exports and for greater efficiency.

The AEA has recently submitted a revised corporate plan on the basis of the new business structure. My Department will be discussing this with the AEA in the coming months. It will also be consulting the authority about any changes which may be needed in the working relationship between the Department and the authority to reflect these developments and to secure the best value for money from the authority's operations.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office Counter Services

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made by the Post Office in the implementation of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report on Post Office Counter Services at Crown offices.

Mr. Ridley: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report (Cmnd. 398) was published on 23 June 1988. In September 1988 the Post Office produced an initial progress report detailing its response to the 80 recommendations made by the MMC on various aspects of the operation of Crown offices and wider issues. Of these, 35 were identified as of priority. As indicated by the then Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in a written answer on 31 December, Official Report, column 271, the Post Office accepted 68 of the Commission's recommendations, rejected one and had reservations or qualifications about the remaining 11. The reply also indicated that my Department had agreed a detailed timetable for implementation of the accepted recommendations, many of which needed an extended period for implementation, and would be monitoring the Post Office's progress on the basis of reports in June 1989 and June 1991.

I have now received the Post Office's report on progress to May 1989 and I am placing copies in the Library of the House. Good progress has been made in a number of areas. The report indicates that 18 of the recommendations which were wholly or partly accepted, including eight of the priority recommendations, have been implemented. They include improvements to budgetary arrangements, management information and working procedures; and the inclusion in this year's corporate plan, which we are currently considering, of the analysis of options for the business recommended by the MMC.

Most of the remaining recommendations, including 24 of the priority recommendations, are on course for implementation within the agreed timetable. There has, however, been slippage on 14 of the recommendations. My Department will continue to monitor implementation of the outstanding recommendations and will pay particular attention to progress on those which are behind schedule. A further formal report will be made in June 1991.

Lloyd's

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on implementation of the recommendations of the Neill committee on regulatory matters at Lloyd's.

Mr. Redwood: Lloyd's was asked to implement the substance of the Neill report within two years. The Neill report contained 70 recommendations, of which 69 were addressed to Lloyd's, with the purpose of ensuring that regulatory arrangements at Lloyd's give protection for names comparable to that provided for investors under the Financial Services Act. The chairman of Lloyd's has sent me a memorandum which shows that, of the 70 recommendations, 65 have now been implemented. I will place copies of this memorandum in the Library.

The one recommendation which was for Government to implement called for Lloyd's to be put in the same position as the Securities and Investments Board and the self-regulatory organisations in relation to exceptions to the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary intends to lay a draft order before Parliament in the autumn.

Of the four other recommendations not yet implemented, Lloyd's has issued consulation papers relating to its proposals for a Lloyd's members' compensation scheme, and for financial standards applicable to underwriting agents. Lloyd's will implement these two recommendations as soon as possible after the process of consultation has been completed. Another Neill recommendation related to inception date accounting under which greater precision would be given to allocating risks to years of account. This is still being considered by Lloyd's and I have asked the chairman to keep in touch with me on the resolution of the difficulties. The remaining recommendation requires Lloyd's to consider at the end of 1991, if there is no marked shift in the distribution of auditing work, limiting the number of syndicates which may be audited by any one firm. Lloyd's is keeping this under continuing review and will take action as necessary.

The implementation of the substances of the Neill report has been a massive task for Lloyd's, and I commend the council of Lloyd's for the vigour with which it has tackled it. The objective of the Neill report in providing increased protection for names has been achieved.

As the council of Lloyd's recognises, regulation requires constant vigilance and review and regulatory arrangements cannot be set for all time. I will continue to keep in close touch with the chairman of Lloyd's on these matters.

Commodity Futures

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposes to take following the United States Commodity Futures Trading commission's assertion of extraterritorial jurisdiction implicit in the terms of the exemption order issued on 15 May 1989.

Mr. Redwood: My hon. Friend the Member for Warwickshire, North (Mr. Maude) wrote on 12 May to the chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission to express the Government's concerns about the need for moderation and restraint in the exercise of powers by one authority in respect of problems arising in the jurisdiction of another. In particular, he made clear our view that the CFTC should rely exclusively on the United Kindom regulatory system for the protection of United States investors who place unsolicited futures business with United Kingdom firms. We are continuing to pursue this issue with CFTC representatives, keeping in close contact with the AFBD and other interested parties in the United Kingdom, with the aim of securing satisfactory arrangements which safeguard the public interest in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the terms and conditions attached to the exemption order issued by the Commodity Futures Trading Commissionon 15 May 1989 under rule 30.10 of its rules, setting out the terms on which United Kingdom firms are permitted to transact business on United Kingdom markets for United States customers; and what assessment he has made of the problems which the exemption order will cause United Kingdom commodity trading companies.

Mr. Redwood: The terms and conditions attached to the exemption order issued by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission on 15 May were published in the United States Federal Register on 19 May. I am placing a copy of the relevant extract in the Library of the House. The order will enable those United Kingdom Commodity trading companies which seek exemption under it to market United Kingdom futures products in the United States without being subject to the full range of United States regulatory controls. As a condition of exemption, the CFTC has insisted on one main departure from United Kingdom regulatory requirements. Under SIB's Financial Services (Clients' Money) Regulations, experienced and professional United Kingdom clients are allowed to release firms from the obligation to hold their funds on trust in separate client accounts. This option would not be available to American investors whose funds must be segregated in all cases, in line with current domestic United States practice. The Government consider that on balance the exemption order will benefit British firms trading in the United States. We have however made clear to the American authorities our objection to the jurisdictional reach of the order, in particular its implied application to unsolicited business placed by United States clients with United Kingdom firms in the United Kingdom. We are seeking a satisfactory resolution to this problem in discussions with the CFTC.

Financial Reporting Council

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to make an announcement about the appointment of a chairman of the financial reporting council.

Mr. Redwood: I shall make an announcement as soon as the appointment has been made. It is too early to say when that will be.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The answer to the question is contained in the following table:

| Session | Parliamentary procedure of the statutory instrument | | | Total number of SIs |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | negative | affirmative | non layers | |
| [1]1988-89 | 82 | 5 | 11 | 98 |
| 1987-88 | 123 | 30 | 5 | 158 |
| 1986-87 | 34 | 11 | 16 | 61 |
| 1985-86 | 54 | 16 | 13 | 83 |
| 1984-85 | 71 | 14 | 14 | 99 |

[1] The number of Statutory Instruments for the 1988-89 session is up to and including 25 July 1989.

European Single Market

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many firms have approached his Department for information on 1992 to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The DTI has recorded over 246,000 requests for published information and other advice on the single market since the 'Europe open for business' campaign was launched in March 1988. The large majority of these requests have been from firms and business organisations. In addition, DTI Ministers and officials have spoken at more than 1,150 single market conferences and seminars since the campaign began; again mainly to business audiences.

Cans

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has made representations to the canning industry or the large retail groups against the use of cans combining aluminium and steel.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No.

Recycling

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps has he taken this year to encourage recycling in industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This year, my Department has continued to encourage recycling wherever economically viable. In addition, my right hon. Friend announced on 10 May details of the Department's new environment programme, which is aimed at raising industry's awareness of environmental issues, encouraging companies to take advantage of the growing market opportunities, at home and abroad, for environmentally benign products and pollution abatement and clean technology, and promoting waste minimisation, recovery and recycling. We are already among the leading nations in reclaiming such metals as copper, lead and zinc from scrap, and industry, local authorities, voluntary organisations and the general public are collaborating more and more to boost recovery of post-consumer wastes, such as glass, paper, aluminium and steel cans, and plastic bottles.

Most recently, my Department has established a new business and environment unit to give even more focus to our initiatives in this important area.

Balance of Trade (Manufactures)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish a table in the Official Report showing in terms of sterling at specified rates of exchange the overall and per capita surplus/deficit on trade in manufactures in 1959, 1967, 1977 and 1988 in the case of the United Kingdom, United States of America, Germany, Japan, France and Italy.

Mr. Redwood: The information is in the following tables:

Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report for the latest available date the figures for the share of the United Kingdom market taken by imports from the European Economic Community corresponding to ratio 1 in table 10 of the "Monthly Digest of Statistics"; and if he will provide a forecast in both cases for December 1988 based on the trade returns.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I assume the hon. Member is referring to table 15.10 of the "Monthly Digest of Statistics". It is estimated that, in 1987, 20 per cent. of the United Kingdom market for manufactured goods was taken by imports from the European Community. These estimates are readily available only on an annual basis, and there are no figures available yet for 1988.

Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the increase in imports and loss of exports as a result of access to the domestic and overseas markets of British companies acquired by foreign competitors.

Mr. Redwood: There are no estimates of the trade effects of acquisitions of British companies by foreign competitors. Such acquisitions can provide important benefits to the economy and also have to be balanced against British company acquisitions of overseas companies.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the top 10 exports in each of the last 10 years; and if he will show the total value of each in each year.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Information on the divisions of the standard international trade classification accounting for the greatest value of exports is given in the following table.

Manufacturing Output

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the percentage increase in output between 1959 and 1973 and 1973 and 1988 in, respectively, electrical engineering and instrument engineering goods together with (i) the percentage increase for the group using, respectively, 1959, 1970, 1975 and 1985 weights and (ii) the increase in import penetration between 1968 and 1977 and 1968 and 1988.

Mr. Redwood: I regret that an answer could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the percentage increase in output between 1959 and 1973 and 1973 and 1988 in, respectively, food, drink and tobacco, paper, printing and publishing, coal and petroleum products, cement, bricks, pottery, glass etc., timber, furniture etc. and other miscellaneous manufacturing together with (i) the percentage increase for the group using, respectively, 1959, 1970, 1975 and 1985 weights and (ii) the increase in import penetration between 1968 and 1977 and 1968 and 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I regret that an answer could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the percentage increase in United Kingdom output between 1959 and 1973 and 1973 and 1988 in, respectively, chemicals, manmade fibres, textiles clothing and footwear and leather, motor vehicles, trains, ships, aircraft etc. and mechanical engineering together with (i) the percentage increase for the whole group using, respectively 1959, 1970, 1975 and 1985 weights and (ii) the increase in import penetration between 1968 and 1977 and 1968 and 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I regret that an answer could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Competitiveness

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will bring up to date the index on competitiveness given in his answer of 22 October 1979, Official Report, columns 56-60.

Mr. Redwood: The current estimates for the indices provided in the previous answer are available in tables D3 and F3 of the "Annual Supplement to the Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", a copy of which is in the Library.

BAT Industries

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will refer the bid by Hoylake for BAT Industries to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Redwood: The bid by Hoylake for BAT is currently under consideration by the Director General of Fair Trading, who will advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in the normal way on whether the proposed acquisition should be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. It would be inappropriate to comment on this case in advance of the director general's advice.

Professions (Competence)

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what criteria determine that examinations for competence are not considered a restriction to entry into a profession, with potentially undesirable consequences for competition, for dentists, doctors, solicitors, barristers, chartered accountants and stockbrokers, but are for members of FIMBRA who practice as independent financial advisers.

Mr. Redwood: FIMBRA has not introduced such a requirement, and so far as I am aware no such proposal has been discussed with the Director General of Fair Trading or his staff. No determination of the possible competitive effect of such a requirement has therefore been made. If such a requirement is introduced, it will in the first instance be for the director general to consider its effects on competition.

Exhibitions

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many exhibitions Ministers from his Department have visited in an official capacity in the last 12 months or other convenient period, both within the United Kingdom and overseas; and if he will give comparable figures for the previous 12 months.

Mr. Ridley: Specific records are not kept, but I understand that previous Ministers in my Department visited at least 10 overseas exhibitions in the last 12 months compared with at least four in the previous 12 months. It would be too costly to identify figures of visits to United Kingdom exhibitions.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how he intends to maintain reliable intra-European Community trade statistics post-1992 without adding to the form-filling burdens on business establishments;

(2) what assessment he has made of the rôle of reliable intra-European Community trade statistics for post-1992 business marketing and investment purposes.

Mr. Redwood: Following completion of the single market in 1992, the current source of intra-European Community trade statistics—customs' documentation—will probably disappear. An EC Commission proposal for a revised collection system has been put forward to be considered by EC Ministers later this year. This system involves collecting trade statistics directly from industry. However, with the elimination of customs' documentation and formalities, importers and exporters within the Community will benefit from a major reduction in costs and overall form-filling burden.

The Government's aim is to ensure that any new statistical system achieves a reasonable balance between the burdens imposed on those who have to provide statistics and the needs of Government and industry for reliable figures.

In order to assess these two aspects of any new system, a consultation exercise has recently been undertaken to obtain the views of industry. Individual businesses, trade associations and freight forwarders have all been included in the consultation. The results of this exercise are currently being assessed and will be used to help decide the United Kingdom's negotiating position in discussion on the new collective system.

More information about the proposed new statistical system and details of the consultation exercise were included in an article in British Business on 19 May 1989.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will ensure that any changes in multi-fibre arrangement quotas within the member states, consequent upon the fulfilment of the single European market, post 1992, will not add further to import penetration of textiles, knitted and clothing products in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Redwood: The present extension of the multi-fibre arrangement expires in 1991. Its future is a matter for negotiation in the current Uruguay round of multilateral trade negotiatons.

It is the Commission's general view that the maintenance of indiviudal member state quotas will be inconsistent with the completion of the single market after 1992. How far this might extend to the treatment of textiles and clothing and, in that event, the likely implications for trade flows have yet to be discussed. Current arrangements in the Community's bilateral textile agreements already provide however for automatic transfer or quotas between member states up to a certain percentage which increases annually.

Anti-dumping Rules

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy to seek immediately a change in the European Community's application of the anti-dumping rules so that given a prima facie case of dumping a provisional duty could be introduced, with the required onus of proof, thereafter, being placed on the supplying country.

Mr. Redwood: The GATT anti-dumping code to which the EC is a party permits provisional anti-dumping duties only when a preliminary finding of dumping has been made and there is sufficient evidence of injury. However, the provisions of the code are under review in the current Uruguay round negotiations.

Socks

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has on the increase in the level of sock imports from Indonesia (a) between 1987 and 1988 and (b) between 1 January and 30 April 1989; and if he intends to support the introduction of the multi-fibre arrangement quota on socks originating in Indonesia.

Mr. Redwood: Imports from Indonesia of socks and certain other hosiery products covered by multi-fibre arrangement category 12 rose from 2,365,000 pairs in 1987 to 10,767,000 pairs in 1988, an increase of 355 per cent. In the first four months of 1989, 3,276,000 pairs of these products were imported, compared with 1,095,000 pairs in the same period in 1988, an increase of 199 per cent. These imports accounted for 4·4 per cent. of the United Kingdom market for category 12 products in the first quarter of 1989, compared with 1·5 per cent. in the same period in 1988.

My Department is currently considering a request from the Knitting Industries Federation for restraint action against these imports under the terms of the EC-Indonesia bilateral textiles agreement. United Kingdom producers currently hold almost 70 per cent. of a domestic market which has been growing and I will need to take this and other factors into account when assessing their case. In particular, it will be necessary to demonstrate clearly that the imports from Indonesia are causing or threatening to cause disruption to the United Kingdom market before a decision could be taken to submit the case to the EC Commission for consideration by the Community.

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has on the level of sock imports from Turkey (a) between 1987 and 1988 and (b) in the first four months of 1989; and if he intends to invoke the safeguard mechanism in the European Community-Turkey agreement in this respect.

Mr. Redwood: Imports from Turkey of socks and certain other hosiery products falling within multi-fibre arrangement category 12 rose from 6,775,000 pairs in 1987 to 13,692,000 pairs in 1988, an increase of 102 per cent. In the first four months of 1989, 3,542,000 pairs were imported, compared with 2,544,000 pairs in the same period in 1988 an increase of 39·2 per cent. These imports accounted for 4·8 per cent. of the United Kingdom market for category 12 products in the first quarter of 1989, compared with 3·4 per cent. in the same period in 1988.

In order to invoke the safeguard mechanism of the EC-Turkey association agreement, it is necessary to provide evidence to the EC Commission and Council which clearly demonstrates serious injury as a result of imports from Turkey. Such evidence is not available at present. However following representations from the Knitting Industries Federation, officials are monitoring the situation closely.

Certain categories of knitwear and clothing imports from Turkey are covered by informal voluntary restraint arrangements agreed between Turkish garment exporters associations and the EC Commission. The United Kingdom has already taken the opportunity of consultations within the framework of these arrangements to ensure that the EC Commission raised our concerns about sock imports with the Turks. Consultations will continue in September.

Philippines

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will estimate the volume and value of trade in fruit between the Philippines and the United Kingdom; and what tariff or other conditions apply to this trade.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The United Kingdom imported 15,300 metric tonnes (£6·6 million) of fruit from the Philippines in 1988. There were no exports.

Full details of specific customs duties are given in the integrated tariff of the United Kingdom, chapters 8 and 20, a copy of which is available in the Library. Imports of prepared or preserved pineapples comprise some two thirds of fruit imports from the Philippines; these receive a general scheme of preferences concession on the normal full tariff rate.

There are plant health standards that have to be met by certain fresh fruit imports.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the principal trading goods and commodities between the United Kingdom and the Philippines.

Mr. Redwood: [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The principal traded goods have been defined in terms of divisions of the standard international trade classification. The information is given in the following tables:

United Kingdom imports from the Philippines in 1988

| Division | Value £ million |

| 24 Cork and wood | 45·3 |

Scottish Trade Missions

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the total amount spent by his Department in each year since 1979 on assisting Scottish trade missions; and if he will provide comparable information in respect of each planning region of England.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 20 July 1989]: The table is based on readily available information. Although the costs are shown by organising sponsors located in the areas specified, it is important to note that participation in a mission is on a United Kingdom-wide basis and that consequently all companies are eligible for consideration irrespective of their or a sponsor's location.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for the last 20 years how many deaths and serious accidents are attributable to faulty electrical installations.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The information is not available either in the form requested or for the whole of the last 20 years.

Mergers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will refer the proposed merger between Hodgson Holdings undertakers and Kenyon Securities undertakers to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Redwood: [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The proposed merger between Hodgson Holdings and Kenyon Securities is currently under consideration by the Director General of Fair Trading who will advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in the normal way on whether the proposed merger should be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. It would be inappropriate to comment in detail on the case in advance of the director general's advice.

Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what is his estimate of the percentage United Kingdom content of United Kingdom exports in 1959, 1970, 1979 and 1988 or the latest available date of finished manufactures less erratics made in the United Kingdom, taking into account the increase in imports of basic materials, semi-manufactures and intermediate finished manufactures;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report his estimate of the percentage United Kingdom content in 1959, 1970 and 1988 of United Kingdom exports of, respectively, motor cars, commercial vehicles, clothing, textiles, mechanical engineering products and electrical engineering products, taking into account the increase in imports of materials and components used in each of these industries and assuming that the import content of exports is the same as that for the sector as a whole.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

North East Shipbuilders Ltd.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any meetings took place or written correspondence was exchanged between his Department and the European Commission relating to the sale of North East Shipbuilders Ltd. between 17 April and the date of the meeting between the right hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton) and Sir Leon Brittan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A full account of exchanges between my Department and the European Commission is contained in the note that my right hon. Friend has recently placed in the Library.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the reply by the right hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton), to the hon. Member for Dagenham (Mr. Gould), Official Report, 13 July, column 1151, whether it was his Department or British Shipbuilders who informed the bidders for NESL of the anticipated difficulties with the European Commission; and whether this advice was provided in writing.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Advice was given orally by my officials.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on which date the right hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton) met Sir Leon Brittan to discuss the sale of North East Shipbuilders Ltd.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend met Sir Leon Brittan to discuss this matter on 27 June 1989.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date his Department was first made aware of a renewed interest in the purchase of North East Shipbuilders Ltd by the Egon Oldendorff line of West Germany.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: British Shipbuilders informed my Department on 13 April that an approach it had received from a further interest in North East Shipbuilders Ltd would be confirmed in writing that day.

Balance of Trade (Manufactures)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, further to his reply of 30 November, Official Report, column 251, showing the balance of trade in manufactures in terms of 1988 prices, he will provide the outturn figure for 1988 and that for the first five months of 1989 together with the figures for each year in current prices; and if he will provide the corresponding figures for trade in manufactures with the European Economic Community.

Mr. Redwood: The figures for manufactures, excluding erratics, for 1988 and 1989 to date at 1988 prices are:

Manufactures less erratics (BOP basis) at 1988 prices

£ billion

| | Exports | Imports | Balance |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1988 | 59·3 | 74·8 | −15·6 |

[1] The figures for 1989 are for January to May 1989 at an annualised rate.

British Tourists

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in giving protection to British tourists travelling abroad by making tour operators responsible to British courts for statements made in their brochures.

Mr. Forth: Negotiations on a draft EC directive on package travel continue. Meanwhile, the Association of British Travel Agents (ABTA) has recently revised its code of conduct for tour operators in consultation with the Office of Fair Trading.

I welcome the new code. I believe that consumers will benefit in particular from the clear statement of their responsibilities which tour operators will now be required to provide in their brochures and booking conditions.

Salmon Farm, Sian Bay

Mr. Morley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish the advice that the Nature Conservancy Council submitted on the recent granting of a sea-bed lease for the purpose of salmon farming at Sian bay, Sutherland; whether the applicant submitted an assessment of the likely environmental impact of the salmon farm; and if he will publish the names of all those conservation or environmental organisations which objected to the proposal.

Mr. Lawson [holding answer 20 July 1989]: I have been asked to reply.

The Crown Estate does not publish submissions made on applications for sea-bed leases. Such submissions may, of course, be obtained from the parties concerned. The scale of the development at Sian bay was below the level requiring an environmental impact assessment. Submissions were received from the Nature Conservancy Council, the Countryside Commission for Scotland and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

Liverpool Freeport

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether city grants will continue to be made available for the next stage of the Liverpool Freeport park development.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 17 July 1989]: I have been asked to reply.

The availability of the Government funding will depend upon whether the proposed development can satisfy all the criteria of city grant and in particular whether the project offers good value for money.

TRANSPORT

40-tonne Lorries

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bridges on the A1 trunk route are unable to carry 40-tonne lorries.

Mr. Atkins: In November 1987 we announced a programme of assessment and strengthening of bridges on motorways and all-purpose trunk roads to ensure that they can carry modern heavy lorries. This programme is continuing. It is too early to say how many, if any, of the bridges on the A1 require strengthening.

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has given any indication in the European Community Council of Ministers that the United Kingdom will move towards 40-tonne lorries on its roads before 31 December 1998 if it becomes practicable to do so.

Mr. Atkins: Last month the EC Transport Council agreed 31 December 1998 as the date when the deregulations from EC road vehicle weights will end. We undertook to use our best endeavours to advance this date as far as practicable. We have suggested that an addendum reflecting these statements at the Council meeting be made to the minutes of the meeting.

Clapham Train Accident

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration the railway inspectorate has given to the possible implication of the Clapham train disaster that a large number of people standing could result in more casualties, when considering London Underground Ltd's specification for new rolling stock involving fewer seats and more standing space per train; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The railway inspectorate has considered the relevant evidence given to the formal investigation into the railway accident at Clapham junction. This indicates little significant difference in the type of severity of injuries received by passengers in a severe railway accident, whether they are sitting or standing. However, some lessons have been learned regarding the interior design of railway rolling stock. These will be borne in mind when considering the specification for London Underground Ltd's new rolling stock and before that stock obtains formal approval.

Airport Capacity, South-East

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that the letter dated 14 July from the Federation of Heathrow Anti-Noise Groups about airport and runway capacity in the south-east is carefully considered; and if he will make appropriate arrangements to establish reliable forecasts for future air passenger demand and for the size of aircraft that will be in the airline fleets to meet that demand.

Mr. McLoughlin: The federation's letter will of course be given careful attention. A copy is being passed to the Civil Aviation Authority, who will be advising my right hon. Friend next summer on strategic options for meeting demand at United Kingdom airports in the long term. My Department last published air traffic forecasts in December, and will be updating these in due course. The authority will be concerned with average passenger loads in carrying forward its present commission.

Buses (Wheelchair Access)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many buses currently in operation on London Regional Transport routes are accessible to wheelchair users.

Mr. Portillo: London Regional Transport has 45 buses which operate scheduled services and are accessible to users of wheelchairs. Additionally, London Regional Transport funds the London Dial-a-Ride service which operates 141 wheelchair accessible buses, providing door-to-door services.

Underground Stations (Exits)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many London Underground stations have only one public exit from the platforms to the street; and what proposals he has discussed with London Underground Ltd. to provide these stations with secondary exiting.

Mr. Portillo: There are 118 stations with only one exit at street level, of which 29 are deep-level stations. In pursuit of recommendation 124 of the Fennell report, London Underground Ltd. has embarked on a programme of surveying stations with disused lift-shafts and passageways, to identify possible secondary exits and to establish the cost of conversion.

Routemaster Buses

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Routemaster buses have been sold by London Buses Ltd (a) to other operators within the United Kingdom, (b) for scrap and (c) to foreign owners.

Mr. Portillo: The disposal of surplus vehicles is a matter for London Buses Ltd.

Harbours (ERDF Funding)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, in respect of each county in England and Wales, those harbour projects which have been funded or part-funded by the European Community regional development fund during the period April 1979 to March 1989; and if he will state the level of funding in each case.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information requested is not immediately available. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible, hopefully within a few days.

Bus Deregulation, London

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what timetable he now envisages for the deregulation of bus services in London.

Mr. Portillo: No decisions have yet been taken on the timetable for deregulation of bus services in London, but it is our stated aim to achieve this by the early 1990s.

East London Rail Study

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department will publish the east London rail study.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Arbuthnot) on 26 July.

Roadworks

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Government have any plans to introduce legislation to oblige local authorities to recover their costs plus a margin for profit from suppliers of services seeking road closures and to charge a full rent at a rising daily rate in all cases of roadworks for the installation, repair and renewal of such services based on the amount of traffic diverted or inconvenienced and the duration of the work.

Mr. Atkins: Proposals for legislation to reform the Public Utilities Street Works Act 1950 were circulated in May to interested parties for comment. A copy of these proposals is in the Library. The proposals included a provision to enable highway authorities to recover from utilities certain of their costs such as those incurred by making temporary traffic orders. A provision to oblige highway authorities to charge rent for roadworks was not included. We have received several responses putting forward suggestions aimed at reducing the impact of utilities' works on road users, including charging for the road space occupied by those works. We are considering the responses to consultation.

Dock Labour Scheme

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to ensure that those dockers formerly employed at Denton's Wharf and G. E. Grays, but who were on the temporary unattached register at the abolition of the dock labour scheme, are paid full compensation for redundancy.

Mr. McLoughlin: The liability for paying the compensation due to the former registered dock workers employed by Denton's Wharf Limited and G. E. Gray and Son (Shipping) Limited rests with those companies. The Department has explained the position to them and has repeatedly urged them to resolve the matter quickly. I understand that Denton's Wharf Limited has accepted its liability and will be taking steps to pay the compensation shortly, but that G. E. Gray and Son (Shipping) Limited is still awaiting legal advice. Under the terms of the statutory compensation scheme, the Department can pay the full amount of compensation due to redundant former registered dock workers only in cases where a company has become insolvent.

Road Humps

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on road hump regulations.

Mr. Atkins: The Department consulted over 125 bodies on proposals for revised road hump regulations and over 50 responded. The consultation was in two parts. On relaxation of criteria currently set in the regulations, the response was almost uniformly favourable. On the wider relaxation encompassing proposals for the introduction of sub-30 mph speed limits, again responses were generally favourable.

We are now proceeding towards making new regulations which will implement all the new proposals. A number of points of detail were raised and we shall be dealing with these in new advice for local highway authorities.

The new regulations are a further step forward in civilising the motor car and in giving local authorities greater freedom of action.

Seat Belts

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to carry out research into the practicality of fitting seat belts on school buses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 21 July 1989]: We are satisfied that it is practicable to fit seat belts in coaches and minibuses, although they would not be justified in city buses.

It is our firm belief, on the basis of all the accident experience, that seat belts can make a major contribution to the survival of accidents in most types of motor vehicle, including coaches and minibuses.

We regard it as one of our priorities, as we work towards a single set of safety requirements for Europe after 1992, that good quality, easy-to-use retractable seat belts should be fitted to all the seats in coaches and minibuses, and that they should be worn. We are taking every opportunity to press the European Commission, the member states and the bus industry on this point.

M25

Mr. Ground: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the review of the M25 referred to in the White Paper "Roads for Prosperity" will be published.

Mr. Parkinson: The M25 review is being published today. The consultants, Rendel Palmer and Tritton, have produced a range of recommendations which will need careful study. The proposal to widen the motorway to dual four lanes has already been announced in the recent roads White Paper. We shall need to weigh up the traffic and environmental implications of their recommendations with care. We shall consult widely, and shall announce further plans for action later this year. The consultants' views do not necessarily represent Government policy.

I am placing copies in the House Libraries.

A1

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the current works of repair to the A1 between London and Dishforth, the dates works started and the expected completion dates.

Mr. Atkins: The following major maintenance works are in progress on the A1 between London and Dishforth.

| Location | Works | Start date | Expected duration |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cambridgeshire Wothorpe | Bridge repairs | 17 July | 9 weeks |
| Lincolnshire Cromwell to Muskham | Carriageway repairs | 5 June | 19 weeks |
| Foston | Carriageway and bridge repairs | 18 July | 13 weeks |
| South Yorkshire A1(M)/M18 interchange northwards for 1·5 miles | Carriageway repairs | 28 June | 23 weeks |
| West Yorkshire Leeds, A64 junction northwards for 1·5 miles | Carriageway | 19 July | 3 weeks |

Motorways

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the motorways in England which are two lanes each way and for which widening plans have not been announced.

Mr. Atkins: No widening plans have been announced for the following sections of dual two-lane trunk motorway:

| Motorway | | Length (miles) |
|---|---|---|
| M2 | Junctions 3–7 | 21·0 |
| M3 | Junction 8–A33 | 12·5 |

[1] Denotes dual 2-lane motorway with short stretches of dual 3-lanes or climbing lanes.

[2] "Roads for Prosperity" (Cm. 693) announced a study into the capacity of this section of the A1(M).

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his current plans for widening the M2; and what are the statistical bases for his decision to not yet announce plans to make it a three-lane each way motorway for its full length.

Mr. Atkins: A scheme for widening the M2 to dual three-lanes between junctions 1 and 3 is programmed. Subject to detailed investigation, it might also provide for the third southbound lane to continue some way beyond junction 3 as a crawler lane.

Taking account of a transfer of Channel-bound traffic to the M20 on its completion, the forecast traffic flows do not justify widening the remainder of M2. The position will be kept under review.

Rail Accident, Temple Mills

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the railway accident involving a train carrying nuclear material at Temple Mills on the evening of 18 May; what steps he is taking to avoid its reccurrence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: A locomotive hauling a wagon which contained a nuclear flask overturned after the driver had passed a shunting signal which was showing no aspect. The signal should have been showing a red (danger) aspect but its light bulb had been damaged by vandals. The incident occurred at a low speed and the wagon holding the nuclear material was not derailed. Health physicists from the CEGB Bradwell nuclear power station examined the flask and confirmed that there had been no leakage and no contamination. British Rail has investigated the incident, established the cause and has taken appropriate steps.

The incidence of vandalsim is to be deplored. I understand that there was no previous record of malicious damage to the signal in question which controlled the passage of trains within a siding. If a signal on a running line is damaged to the extent that it shows no aspect, it is detected and the previous signal would automatically revert to danger. British Rail is fully aware of the need to safeguard against such interference but it cannot totally prevent trespass.

M11 Link Road

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what criteria he selected land to replace land lost in Leyton at the Eastway sports centre due to the proposed M11 link road; what assessment he made of the benefits for Leyton residents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend is required to apply the same criteria in all cases when selecting exchange land for public open space proposed to be taken for trunk road schemes. The land must generally be not less in area than the open space to be acquired and it must be equally advantageous to the public. Lee Valley regional park authority has accepted the exchange land offered as a suitable replacement for Eastway sports centre. The centre provides facilities for the public from a wide area well beyond the immediate locality of Leyton and Hackney. The area of land to be taken is relatively small and in our view will result in no significant loss of amenity for users of the centre. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has been consulted about the suitability of the exchange land and is considering whether to issue a notice of intention to grant a certificate under section 19 of the Acquisition of Land Act 1981. If he does, the notice will invite interested persons to make objections to, or representations about, the proposals. Any unresolved objection would be likely to be heard at the public local inquiry into the draft compulsory purchase order for the road scheme arranged to start in Leyton on 12 September.

Bus Doors

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what responses his Department has received to his draft regulations which include provisions relating to the risk of people being trapped in power-operated bus doors; whether he proposes to improve the regulation or provide additional funds for more widespread application of the safe centre exit door mechanism on buses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: There was general support for the measures proposed for centre exit doors. A number of consultees wished to see the measures applied to buses already in service. We shall be consulting the bus industry further on that point. We aim to make the regulations in the autumn.

M2 (Maintenance Work)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many lane closures have been imposed on the M2 motorway as a result of maintenance work between May and September in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Atkins: The information is not readily available in the form or for the period requested.

The incidence of lane closures—affecting both carriageways of the motorway and involving contraflow working—for major maintenance work between May and September in each of the last three years was as follows:

| Year | Length (junction to junction) | From | To |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1989 | 3-4 | 1 May | Present |
| | 5-6 | 19 June | Present |
| 1988 | 5-6 | 1 May | 30 September |
| | 5-7 | 9 May | 2 July |
| 1987 | 5-7 | 9 June | 30 September |

In addition there were periods when lanes were closed for minor repairs such as barrier repairs and patching. The majority of these occurred in off-peak periods between 09.30 and 16.00 hours.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The number of Department of Transport statutory instruments made in each of the last five parliamentary Sessions, including the 1988-1989 Session, is:

| Parliamentary Session | Total | Negative | Affirmative | [1]Others-printed | [2]Local-not printed |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|

Underground Train Safety

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations cover the evacuation of driver-only underground trains should a fire break out while it is in a tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: There are no statutory regulations. The matter is one for the railway operator. Every effort is made to design underground rolling stock so that the risk of fire breaking out is minimised or, if fire does occur, that it will not disable the train. In the event of a fire the driver's first responsibility is to get the train to the nearest station and inform the line controller by radio. No passenger has been injured by a fire on a train within the period 1984 to date. I understand from London Underground Ltd. that a programme to remove inflamable material from rolling stock has begun.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1988-89.

Mr. Atkins: The Department spent £121,014 in 1988-89 on the full range of official hospitality.

Car Sales

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the number and value of new cars leased or sold in the United Kingdom in 1988 and 1989 to date together with his estimate of the proportion (i) imported and (ii) paid for directly as a business expense; and what proportion of the real cost of owning a comparable car is now added to the income of employees for tax purposes.

Mr. Atkins: From January 1988 to the end of June 1989, 3·5 million new cars were registered in the United Kingdom. Of those registered in Great Britain, 54 per cent. were imported and 52 per cent. were registered in the name of a company.

The benefit of a company car provided for a director or employee earning £8,500 a year or more is taxed by reference to a set of scale charges. Both the scale charge applicable to a particular company car and the cost of owning a comparable car depend on a number of factors. The proportion of the cost of private ownership represented by the scale charge will therefore vary from case to case.

Information on the value of these cars is not available.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Crack

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Warrington, South, 29 June, Official Report, column 535, if he will explain the reasons which led to the conclusion that it would be counterproductive to reveal the inner-city areas targeted by drugs education co-ordinators in their campaign to persuade teenagers to say no to crack.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government believe that the threat of crack is best tackled locally, since the nature and scale of the problem, and hence the most suitable response, will vary from place to place. Drugs education co-ordinators and their colleagues in local youth, community and voluntary organisations are well placed to assess actual or potential problems in their areas and initiate responses. We have made clear to local agencies our readiness to provide appropriate support for their initiatives.

Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mrs. Rumbold: As a first step in its review, the Department has considered what work could be relocated from London and the south-east to the existing office in Darlington. Thirty posts were transferred in 1988; a further 50 posts will be transferred in 1990 and will be filled mainly by locally recruited staff. A scrutiny will be mounted later this year to consider a longer-term strategy. I expect the results to be available by mid-1990.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to publish the replacement circular for DES circular 1/83 on special educational needs.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend hopes to publish the new circular in the foreseeable future.

Schools (Meals and Transport)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1978-79 public expenditure on (i) school meals and (ii) school transport in cash and in real terms.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is as follows:

Expenditure[1] on school meals and home to institution transport 1978-79 to 1987-88—England

£ million

| | School meals | | Transport | |

| 1987-88 | 443 | 443 | 222 | 222 |

[1] The figures are based on LEA expenditure returns to the Department of the Environment.

[2] The cash figures for the earlier years have been repriced to 1987-88 prices using the Gross Domestic Products (Market Prices) Deflator.

Note: The figures in the table are all net of income received from pupils and adults who pay for their meals or their transport.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Details of statutory instruments subject to parliamentary control made by the Secretary of State during the last five Sessions, are as follows:

| Year | Total | Negative Instruments | Affirmative Instruments |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1988-89 | 52 | 50 | 2 |
| 1987-88 | 33 | 30 | 3 |
| 1986-87 | 22 | 20 | 2 |

| 1984-85 | 12 | 10 | 2 |

Haberdashers' Aske's Schools, Deptford

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will consider public representations on an application for leave under section 14 of the Education Act 1944: if he will postpone a decision on the application being made by the governors of the Haberdashers' Aske's Hatcham schools in Deptford until after the school holidays, so as to allow parents and the governors of neighbouring schools sufficient opportunity to make representations; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend, the former Secretary of State, set out the factors he would take into account in considering an application for leave under section 14 of the Education Act 1944 in his answer of 23 January 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford, (Mr. Dunn) Official Report column 383. Plainly, these will include the views of governors, parents, and others. My right hon. Friend will take a decision as soon as he is in a position to do so.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, in deciding whether to grant leave to the governors of Haberdashers' Aske's Hatcham girls school, Deptford, to discontinue the school for the purpose of establishing a city technology college he will take into consideration the no vote by a majority of parents to the question, "Do you wish the school to become one of a pair of city technology colleges?"

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend, the former Secretary of State, set out the factors we would take into account in deciding such an approach by the governors of the Haberdashers' Aske's schools in his statement of 23 January 1989 at column 307. These will include such views as were expressed to the governors during the public consultations they undertook before they made this approach.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science in the event of city technology colleges being established on the site of the Haberdashers' Aske's Hatcham schools in Deptford, what requirements he will place on the admission policy and catchment area of these city technology colleges to ensure that they benefit children drawn from the north Lewisham and the Deptford task force areas in particular; and how the catchment area for the city technology schools will relate to that of the proposed Bacons city technology college in docklands.

Mrs. Rumbold: As we shall shortly be considering this approach by the governors of the Haberdashers' Aske's schools under the provisions of section 14 of the Education Act 1944, it would be inappropriate to comment on these questions of detail in advance of that decision. The catchment area of each city technology college is subject to a specific agreement between the sponsors and my right hon. Friend; and we have always made it clear that each will focus on disadvantaged areas.

Teacher Training

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what funds are available for the training of teachers in the new national curriculum; what are his plans to help already trained teachers with in-house training; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Specific grants are available for additional expenditure by local education authorities to support the introduction of the national curriculum, including in-service training for teachers. These will support £100 million expenditure in 1989-90. We have allowed schools two extra closure days for training, and the National Curriculum Council has provided advice and training materials.

County Councils

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what limit he intends to impose on county council spending on capital projects in the public sector; and if he has any plans to allow the county councils to spend their own money, above the capital allocation approved by the government, for the refurbishment and maintenance of ageing school buildings.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Local Government and Housing Bill which is currently before the House provides for a new system for the control of local authority capital finance. Under that system, which we propose to introduce in 1990-91, the Government will not control an authority's spending on capital projects but it will limit the level of such spending which can be financed by borrowing or the use of other credit arrangements. Authorities will be free to incur additional capital spending which might be financed from revenue or by the use of the permitted proportion of capital receipts. Decisions about the appropriate level of credit approvals for 1990-91 and future years will be announced in the autumn.

Higher Education (Grants)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has to increase capital grant for higher education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Decisions on the level of public provision for the education service, including provision for higher education capital, will be taken during the current public expenditure survey round.

Academic Pay

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what proposals he has under consideration to enhance academic pay in higher education to achieve closer parity with recent graduates and postgraduates working in comparable non-academic professions; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what proposals he has under consideration for increased levels of pay for research in higher education, and for similar enhancement of postgraduate awards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend is not at present considering any such proposals in respect of pay: a settlement has recently been made, with his agreement, for salaries of academic and related staff in the universities, including those engaged in research. The employers are negotiating salaries with representatives of the lecturers. In the Government's view, salaries should be set so as to recruit, retain and motivate the staff concerned.

The levels of postgraduate studentships are determined by the award-making bodies, in consultation as appropriate with the Department and amongst themselves, in the light of all the relevant factors, including the number and quality of applications for support and other claims on their resources for training and research funding. My right hon. Friend has, however, recieved advice on this and other matters from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils. This is being published today.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what agreements have been entered into, and what draft proposals for agreement are in existence, between him and any promoters of any city technology college, under (a) section 105 of the Education Reform Act and (b) any other relevant provision; what are the main elements of those agreements; and if he will deposit copies in the Library.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has entered into a number of preliminary agreements with individual CTC sponsors to purchase land or buildings for CTC development and to incur transitional costs to be met before CTCs open. These are confidential to each project. All CTCs will be subject to a detailed funding agreement made under section 105 of the Education Reform Act 1988. This will cover capital and recurrent expenditure and set out the terms and conditions on which grant will be paid. A model which forms the basis of such agreements is being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has available to his Department as to the salaries of teachers and head teachers in city technology colleges.

Mrs. Rumbold: Our recurrent grant to city technology colleges is based on an average of expenditure by local education authorities on secondary schools in similar areas. This includes expenditure on the salaries of teachers and headteachers. The precise level of staff salaries in CTCs is a matter for their boards of governors.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the expenditure per pupil on (a) books, (b) computers and allied equipment, (c) other equipment, (d) head teachers' salaries and (e) teachers' salaries in respect of (i) pupils in city technology colleges and (ii) pupils in maintained schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest available data on outturn recurrent expenditure in maintained secondary schools are set out in the table. Comparable data for city technology colleges are not yet available.

Average Expenditure[1] per Pupil in Maintained Secondary Schools

| England 1987-88 | £ |
|---|---|
| Text and library books | 15 |
| Educational equipment[2] | 47 |
| Teacher salaries[3] | 1,075 |

[1] The figures are based on LEA expenditure returns to the Department of the Environment and pupil number returns to the DES. They are given in cash terms.

[2] A breakdown of expenditure on different types of educational equipment is not available.

[3] A breakdown of expenditure between head teachers' salaries and other teachers' salaries is not available. The teacher salaries figure given in the table includes the salaries of head teachers.

Examinations

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will consider setting a minimum required amount of coursework or attendance before a school pupil is allowed to sit a public examination.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is for individual schools to enter their pupils as candidates for public examinations. In doing so, they must naturally have regard to pupils' fitness to sit the examination, including such matters as the courses they are undertaking and the standards they have attained.

Advisory Board for the Research Councils

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has received advice from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils in relation to the public expenditure survey for 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The advice is being published today and copies are available in the Library. I would like to express my appreciation to Sir David Phillips and the board for the work which has gone into its preparation. I shall be considering the advice in the normal way during the 1989 public expenditure survey discussions.

Universities (Grants)

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list the grants made available to universities in Great Britain in the financial year 1988-89, on the advice of the University Grants Committee and the computer board.

The balance remaining in the Deposit Account at 31 March 1989, which is not liable to surrender to the Consolidated Fund, was £18,737,000. This sum includes £1,725,000 in respect of the Engineering and Technology Programme.

Note:* In addition a further £72,000 was transferred to the Deposit Account to meet expenditure by Universities for the Engineering and Technology Programme. Other payments comprise £647,0000 paid to the Rutherford and Appleton Laboratories (SERC) for networking projects.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

British Telecom Services

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he has any plans to require British Telecom to introduce itemised billing within the next 12 months for its services to the House.

Sir Geoffrey Howe [holding answer 26 July 1989]: The monitoring of British Telecom's operation in the House over the next 12 months is not expected to involve the preparation of itemised bills.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Lord President of the Council how much it will cost to maintain the British Telecom monopoly provision of services to the House of Commons over the next 12 months; and what is the figure with the option of using Mercury's services.

Sir Geoffrey Howe [holding answer 26 July 1989]: On the basis of figures given for 1988 in appendix 1 of the first report of the Services Committee for Session 1988-89 (HC 143), the total cost of telecommunications services for the 12 months to 31 March 1990 is estimated to be £1,689,000, of which call charges will account for some £618,600. It is estimated that a change to Mercury outgoing telephone lines as proposed by CCTA would save some £50,000 to £75,000.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will ensure that Oftel's policy of promoting competing telecom operators, for the benefit of consumers, is adopted by the House.

Sir Geoffrey Howe [holding answer 26 July 1989]: The effect on the House of Oftel's national policy of promoting effective competition between telecommunications organisations was considered by the Services Committee in its first report of this Session (HC 143). I have nothing to add to the statements made in that report.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will ensure that there will be close and careful monitoring of the existing services provided by British Telecom to the House during the next 12 months.

Sir Geoffrey Howe [holding answer 26 July 1989]: Such an exercise is already being considered by the authorities of the House in response to the first report of the Services Committee of this Session (HC(1988-89)143) on "Telecommunications: The Provision of Services to the House."

NATIONAL FINANCE

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if any consignments of ivory have been seized or detained at ports of entry since 12 April.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Yes, but records of such seizures held centrally are incomplete at this stage. Records of detentions are not maintained centrally and the information sought could be obtained only at disproportionate expense.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has regarding cargoes of raw and worked ivory currently held at British ports of entry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Consignments of ivory continue to be intercepted by Customs and may be detained or seized according to the circumstances. The Department of the Environment is consulted as necessary in individual cases.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the elements of economic activity by which he measures gross domestic product; and whether there are any significant differences in measurement between the United Kingdom and other members of G 7.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Economic activity, as measured by the gross domestic product (GDP), includes all those activities which result in the production of goods and services exchanged for money. These include the production of physical commodities, that is, the products of the agriculture, extractive, manufacturing and construction industries. It also covers service-producing activities: transport and communication, wholesale and retail distribution, hotels and catering, financial services, hospitals and education, as well as public administration and defence.

Additionally, some activities not exchanged for money are included. Three main examples are: the provision of owner-occupied housing; the non-trading use of fixed assets owned by the Government and by private non-profit-making bodies; and the cost of employees' income in kind.

Further information on measurement of GDP may be found in the introductory section of the 1988 edition of "United Kingdom National Accounts", otherwise known as the "CSO Blue Book", and "United Kingdom National Accounts: Sources and Methods", both of which are available from the House of Commons Library.

GDP and other national accounts estimates supplied to international organisations are based on the United Nations system of national accounts (SNA). These estimates are similar to the Central Statistical Office's estimates appearing in the CSO Blue Book and other CSO publications, with small variations mainly reflecting presentation rather than differences of substance.

Balance of Payments

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the balance of payments surplus or deficit in each year from 1964 to the nearest available date.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Figures for the current account balance are published in Economic Trends, annual supplement, 1989 edition, table 29 (for the years 1964 to 1987) and in Economic Trends, June 1989, table A1 (giving the latest estimate for 1988). Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Independent Taxation

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress towards the introduction of independent taxation in April 1990.

Mr. Lilley: Preparations are well in hand for the introduction of independent taxation in April 1990.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much total employment has risen since 1983.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Since March 1983, the work force in employment has increased by 3,123,000.

CBI

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the chairman of the Confederation of British Industry; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Adams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet representatives of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss United Kingdom economic policy.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend meets representatives of the CBI from time to time, and a wide range of subjects is discussed.

Economic Growth

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the rate of economic growth in the lastest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The output measure of gross domestic product is estimated to have grown by 2½ per cent. in the year to the first quarter of 1989. But this figure was depressed by accidents in the North sea oil sector. Excluding North sea oil, output grew by 4 per cent. in the year to the first quarter of 1989.

Public Spending Planning

Ms. Short: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will makes statement on the public spending planning total.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The public expenditure planning total is the aggregate used by the Government for planning and control purposes. The outturn for 1989-90 is expected to be in line with the plan of £167·1 billion.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Treasury is taking to ensure adequate levels of efficiency and value for money in Her Majesty's Government's public expenditure programmes.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the speech my predecessor gave on 21 June, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. This speech describes the very considerable progress which the Government are making to secure greater efficiency and value for money in the public services.

Income Tax

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the income of a single person on ~~half average~~ earnings went on income tax in 1979-80 and 1988-89.

Mr. Lilley: In 1979-80 a single person on half average male earnings paid 16·4 per cent. of his earnings in income tax. In 1988-89, he paid 15·2 per cent.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has revised the figures given in his reply dated 10 April, Official Report, column 348, concerning the number of tax units and tax liability by range of total income; and whether he will publish in the Official Report a table breaking down the figures to show (i) steps of £1,000 between £10,000 and £15,000 (ii) for £15,000-£17,499 (iii) £20,000-£24,999 and (iv) £100,000 and above.

Mr. Lilley: The figures in the reply of 10 April to the hon. Member, Official Report, column 348, have not been revised.

I regret that reliable estimates for more detailed income ranges are not available, as estimates are based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes. All estimates are provisional and subject to some degree of uncertainty.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people make up the 1 per cent. of taxpayers who pay the most tax; and at what level of income this 1 per cent. begins.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 25 July 1989]: In 1989-90 the top 1 per cent. of income tax payers includes about 210,000 single people and married couples with income of over £60,000 per annum. This estimate is based on their income subject to tax, before deduction of tax reliefs and personal allowances.

Manufacturing Profitability

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the increase in manufacturing profitability during the latest full year for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest full-year estimate of manufacturing companies' profitability, as indicated by the net rate of return on capital employed, is for 1987. Manufacturing profitability increased from 7·5 per cent., in 1986 to 9·2 per cent. in 1987. The level of manufacturing profitability in 1987 was the highest since 1969.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will provide an up-to-date estimate of the yield of stamp duty on the sale of domestic premises in the current financial year and in 1988-89, with a breakdown by regions where possible.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Interest Rates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the effect of high interest rates on (a) the inflow of short-term capital, (b) the supply of credit and (c) the supply of money; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1970 the rate of inflation, the average rate of interest, the public sector deficit, the trade deficit and the estimated inflow of foreign funds.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer when resources permit.

Foreign Funds

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the inflow of foreign funds in 1988 to finance the purchase of (a) British companies and (b) other assets; and if he will provide an estimate for this year to date;

(2) what effect the inflow of foreign funds is having on asset prices and on the rate of inflation.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer when resources permit.

Current Account Deficit

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much of the budget surplus in 1988 was used to neutralise the effect on credit and the money supply of the current account deficit; and how this was achieved;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report his estimate of the monetary counterpart of the current account deficit in 1988 and in the first five months of the current year;

(3) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1970 the balance of payments with the EEC and with the rest of the world on current account less viable trade at current and at 1988 prices; and to what he ascribes the change of mind.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer when resources permit.

Lending (Overseas Residents)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the amount of sterling lending to overseas residents in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer when resources permit.

Output Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will bring up to date the information on output per head of the working population given in his reply of 8 November, Official Report, column 111.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested is given in the following table:

| | Output[1] |
|---|---|
| 1959 | 69·2 |
| 1963 | 74·8 |
| 1968 | 87·3 |

1. Based on mid-year estimates of the work force.
2. 1959 is given as the first year because consistent figures on employees are not available earlier.
3. Figures refer to United Kingdom.

European Single Market

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect he expects the single market to have on the balance of trade with the EEC in invisibles; and if he will list the sectors for which exports are expected to increase faster than imports.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer when resources permit.

Taxation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the percentage of total personal income taken by (a) direct taxes on household including rates and (b) employees social security contributions in 1973-74, 1978-79 and 1988-89.

Mr. Lilley: I will answer when resources permit.

Pension Fund Holidays

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report the value in 1988 and the current year to date of pension fund contribution holidays taken by employers and employees respectively, together with his estimate of the amount of tax due thereon.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: As at 25 July, the figures for the current Session, 1988-89, were as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Affirmative Statutory Instruments | 7 |
| Negative Statutory Instruments | 38 |
| Total | 45 |

For early parliamentary Sessions, I refer the hon. Member to the respective sessional Journals of the House of Commons.

Finished Manufactures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of United Kingdom exports of finished manufactures now consist of imports of personal computers and of the products of screwdriver plants; how many constituents of the index of manufacturing output are based on other than net output; and what is their weight.

Mr. Redwood: I have been asked to reply.

Information in respect of personal computers and screwdriver plants is not available.

For an explanation of the methods and sources used for the index of manufacturing output, I refer the hon. Member to the article "The Rebased Index of Production" which was published in Economic Trends (February 1989), a copy of which is available in the Library.

Manufacturing Output

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for 1973, 1978, 1987 and 1988 the estimated increase in the value and weighted average volume of output of manufacturing industries less food, drink and tobacco, paper, printing and publishing and other minerals and mineral products.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

The values of output required may be derived from the summary tables to the annual census of production for the years in question. The index of production for the required aggregate is given in the table:

Index of Industrial Production (1985 = 100)
Manufacturing industries less food, drink and tobacco, paper, printing nd publishing, and extraction of minerals n.e.s.

| | Value |
|---|---|
| 1973 | 113·0 |
| 1978 | 107·4 |
| 1987 | 106·2 |
| 1988 | 114·0 |

Tax Incentives

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to amend the tax reforms to give incentives to mothers who choose not to go out to work but stay at home to raise their families.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 25 July 1989]: I have no plans to do so.

Millionaires

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of millionaires in Britain.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The latest provisional estimate is that about 18,000 individuals owned wealth exceeding £1,000,000 in 1986.

Public Spending

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment of the implications for public spending of the sustained fall in unemployment.

Mr. Nicholas Scott: I have been asked to reply.

We estimate that spending on the Social Security programme would be about £3·3 billion higher than planned in the current year if the sustained fall in unemployment over the last three years had not taken place.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Lacky Bridge Checkpoint

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many soldiers were released for other duties as a result of dismantling Lacky bridge permanent vehicle checkpoint.

Mr. Cope: Although I am not prepared to give specific information about the number of troops involved in particular tasks, the removal of the permanent vehicle checkpoint will mean a useful addition to the number of soldiers available for other duties in the Lacky bridge area, and will allow them to operate in a more flexible, mobile and unpredictable manner.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the 13 confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in Northern Ireland have been in dairy cows; and how many have been in beef cattle.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There have been 15 confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in Northern Ireland, the most recent being confirmed on 18 July.

All the animals affected were cows belonging to dairy breeds and all originated in dairy herds. By the time of diagnosis, two of these cows had been transferred to suckler herds used to raise calves for beef production.

Fixed Penalty Tickets

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fixed penalty tickets have been issued in the last 12 months; and how many of these have been paid.

Mr. Cope: In the 12 months ended 31 May 1989, 64,539 fixed penalty notices were issued of which 55,822 have been paid to date.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many fixed penalty tickets have been issued by traffic wardens in the Lenadoon and Ardoyne areas of west Belfast and how many have been paid in the last 12 months;

(2) how many fixed penalty tickets have been issued in respect of parking in an area unmarked by double yellow lines or other road markings adjacent to bollards at the car park entrance to Murrayfield shopping centre;

(3) how many fixed penalty tickets have been issued in Larne, County Antrim by traffic wardens in the last 12 months; and how many of these have been paid.

Mr. Cope: Records are not maintained of the geographical distribution of fixed penalty notices and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Traffic Wardens

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many traffic wardens are employed in Larne, county Antrim.

Mr. Cope: Four.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many traffic wardens are employed in the Lenadoon and Ardoyne areas of west Belfast.

Mr. Cope: None.

Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will amend the Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order (S.I., 1983, No. 764) by deleting at line 4 of section 33 the word "shall" and replacing it with the word "may" and by deleting the word "shall" at line 8 of the same section and replacing it by the word "may".

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. The existing provisions of article 33 of the Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1983 were designed to replace the permissive provisions of previous legislation which were clearly not having the desired effect of requiring dog owners to keep their animals under control. This was a matter of serious public concern at the time of making the order.

The reason for the inclusion of article 33 (1) in its mandatory form was to effect the removal of an anomaly in the existing law whereby humans did not have the same protection from attack as livestock.

Before the introduction of the Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1983 the provisions of the Dogs Act 1906 as amended by the Livestock (Protection from Dogs) Act (Northern Ireland) 1968, section 3, required courts to order the destruction of a dog which had caused injury to sheep. There was no comparable provision for humans and this, naturally, led to considerable Government and public concern when biting dogs were free to repeat their attacks. This point was also reflected in the report of the 1976 working party on dogs.

The making of a destruction order does not, of course, necessarily mean that a dog will automatically be put down since the Dogs Order makes provision for appeal.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list any cases in the past seven years where transfers of prisoners from Great Britain were refused by the Northern Ireland Office.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The Northern Ireland Office does not have overall responsibility for decisions on transfer requests from inmates in Great Britain. The final decision is taken by the Secretaries of State for the Home Department or for Scotland as appropriate. Twenty-eight requests have been refused on the Northern Ireland Office's recommendation since 1982. It would be a breach of confidentiality to name the individuals who made these requests.

Fishing Industry

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time fishermen there are; and if he is in a position to estimate the number of people employed (i) full-time and (ii) part-time in the non-catching section of the fishing industry.

THE ARTS

South Bank

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister for the Arts what information he has regarding the impact on the activities of the south bank arts complex by the proposed works for British Rail's Channel tunnel link.

Mr. Luce: I understand that representatives of the South Bank board will be having discussions with British Rail in the near future.

CIVIL SERVICE

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister for Civil Service if he has received any recent representations about pilot or permanent workplace creches and similar incentives further to encourage the return to employment of women in the Civil Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce (holding answer 25 July 1989): My officials recently had an ad hoc meeting with the Council of Civil Service Unions to review developments. I am encouraging Departments to assist recruitment and retention by setting up and supporting value for money child care schemes. In my Department, to date, the Civil Service college, Sunningdale, has plans for a nursery and the equal opportunities division co-ordinates the Westminster multidepartmental holiday scheme for five to 12-year-olds.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Members (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many overseas visits by hon. Members or former hon. Members his Department has sponsored in the past two years.

Mr. Sainsbury: Fourteen hon. Members have travelled to the United Nations General Assembly in New York under FCO sponsorship (seven in 1987-88, seven in 1988-89). There have been no visits under the FCO sponsored visitors scheme. That figure does not include visits overseas by FCO Ministers, or hon. Members travelling in a ministerial capacity.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions, including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The details are as follows:

| Session | Number of SI's issued | Negative resolution | Affirmative resolution |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1984-85 | 37 | 4 | 15 |
| 1985-86 | 28 | 4 | 8 |
| 1986-87 | 52 | 13 | 3 |

| 1988-89[1] | 26 | 5 | 2 |

[1] To date

Malaysia

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, consequent upon the execution of Derrick Gregory, he will make it his policy to review all British aid to Malaysia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have already expressed our disappointment that the Malaysian Government were unable to respond favourably to our appeals for clemency. Nonetheless, Derrick Gregory was fairly tried under Malaysian law. He himself never denied his guilt. It is not appropriate to link this case with United Kingdom aid to Malaysia.

Bulgaria

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent there has been an increase in the United Kingdom's diplomatic activities in Bulgaria over the past year.

Mr. Waldegrave: There has been no increase in United Kingdom activities in Bulgaria over the past year. We have consistently pressed the Bulgarian authorities to respect the rights of the ethnic Turkish minority and to fulfil all their CSCE commitments.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1988-89.

Mr. Sainsbury: The forecast outturn for spending on official hospitality by both wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the financial year 1988-89 is estimated to be £5·3 million.

African Elephants

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will hold discussions with the Governments of Botswana and Zambia about compensation for forgoing elephant cropping; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have no plans to do so. In preparation for the next meeting of parties to the convention on international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora in October, the Republic of Cameroon is consulting African Governments on how best to afford protection under the convention of the African elephant.

Overseas Opposition Parties

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning guidelines followed when offering assistance to opposition parties overseas, and when they were first formulated.

Mr. Sainsbury: There are no general guidelines on assistance to opposition parties overseas. Decisions are made on a case-by-case basis.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide details of the assistance offered to opposition parties overseas for the most appropriate period for which such details are readily available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Hong Kong

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his answer of 20 July, Official Report, columns 333-34, he will give details of the two seizures made by the special task force in Hong Kong.

Mr. Sainsbury: On 21 June 1989, a cargo of 58·9 kg. of ivory tusks was seized. The importer was fined HK$ 10,000, and the ivory has been mandatorily confiscated in accordance with Hong Kong law. The second case is still sub judice.

Democracy (Warsaw Pact Countries)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent offers have been made to Warsaw pact countries to assist in strengthening internal political democracy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We very much welcome steps taken in some Warsaw pact countries towards a more democratic system. We are glad to offer practical help where we can. We have, for example, established a "know-how fund" for Poland to help develop the skills needed to run a democratic and market-based economy.

Israel

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ask the Israeli Government for an explanation of the circumstances of the death of Yasser Abu Ghosh of Beitunia.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. We hope that the inquiry announced by the Israeli authorities will be thorough and impartial.

European Parliament

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he anticipates giving the further reply promised in his answer to the hon. Member for Northampton, North of 10 April, Official Report, column 358, relating to European Parliament Members' expenses.

Mr. Maude: The information is as follows:

Separate figures for accommodation and travel are not available.

Chile

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the co-operation of Her Majesty's Government with the democratic opposition in Chile in the light of the next presidential election there.

Mr. Sainsbury: We welcome the good progress being made towards a restoration of democracy in Chile. With our partners in the Twelve, we continue to encourage that process. We regularly invite to Britain representatives of Chilean political parties.

Namibia

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom help to the United Nations for fair and free elections in Namibia; and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the presence in Namibia of South African troops during pre-election time.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are giving our full support to the United Nations operation in Namibia. We have contributed a signals unit to the UN force (UNTAG) and are making a major financial commitment to the cost of UNTAG. We have contributed £500,000 towards the costs of repatriating Namibian refugees and have also contributed about £650,000 worth of food aid. We support the provisions in the United Nations plan for the restriction to base and phased withdrawal of South African forces from Namibia.

Central America

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding Her Majesty's Government policy towards the Esquipulas II agreement and dialogue with those central American countries parties to it.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have consistently supported efforts to promote a peaceful negotiated settlement to the various conflicts in central America within the framework of the Esquipulas II and subsequent agreements. With our EC partners, we participate actively in the dialogue with the central American countries through the San Jose series of conferences.

Peru

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, since prisoners in Peruvian gaols have to provide for their own upkeep, what steps are being taken by Her Majesty's Government to ensure British nationals detained in Lurigancho prison have sufficient funds to obtain sustenance.

Mr. Sainsbury [pursuant to the reply, 20 July 1989, c. 335]: The Peruvian prison authorities provide sustenance for all persons detained in their prisons. The food served is Peruvian fare.

All British nationals currently detained in Lurigancho prison are in receipt of funds from their relatives and friends in the United Kingdom for additional prison comforts.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what information he has about the detention of John Boxall and Brian Tristram in a Peruvian gaol since 6 December 1988 and the reasons they have been detained without trial.

Mr. Sainsbury [pursuant to the reply, 20 July 1989, c. 335]: Mr. Boxall and Mr. Tristram were detained by the Peruvian police on 6 December 1988 on suspicion of drug trafficking. They were formally charged on 27 December 1988 and remanded to Lurigancho prison. The judicial investigatory process is continuing. The delay in bringing them to trial is not unusual.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to ensure that John Boxall and Brian Tristram both of the county of Bedfordshire will be speedily brought to trial in Peru.

Mr. Sainsbury [pursuant to the reply, 20 July 1989, c. 335]: Mr. Boxall and Mr. Tristram are legally represented and it is for their legal representative to seek to ensure that their trial is held as speedily as possible. He has taken action to this end. It would be contrary to internationally accepted practice for us to seek to interfere in the judicial process of an independent sovereign state. We would not tolerate such interference in our own judicial processes.

EMPLOYMENT

White Papers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if, for each of the last three White Papers issued by his Department, for which legislation has been started, he will state the time elapsed between their publication and the First Readings of any Bills connected with them; and if he will do the same for the last three White Papers by his Department prior to May 1979.

Mr. Nicholls: The last three White Papers produced by this Department for which legislation has started are: "Building Businesses . . . Not Barriers", Command 9794, 22 May 1986; "Employment for the 1990s", Command 540, 5 December 1988 and "Employment in the Ports: The Dock Labour Scheme", Command 664, 6 April 1989. Proposals first published in Command 9794 were incorporated in the 1988 Employment Bill which was first read in the Commons on 30 November 1988. Clause 21 of the Bill (now the Employment Bill 1989) was incorporated on 16 March of this year and derives from Command 540. The Dock Work Bill had its First Reading on 7 April of this year.

It is not for me to answer for the record of the last Government in this matter, but the information requested should be available in the Library of the House and the Official Report.

Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will place a copy of the Atkinson/Revington study of regional office organisation in the Training Agency in the Library; and what monitoring Training Agency regional offices will carry out with regard to training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Eggar: The document is an internal organisational review and is not appropriate for deposit in the Library. Training Agency regional officers will monitor a TEC's performance to check contract compliance and to ensure that each TEC is performing in line with the targets and objectives set out in the agreed business plan.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many YTS places were agreed by each payment type; how many young people were in training by each training type; and what was the proportion of those in training relative to the number of agreed places by standard Training Agency region, for Great Britain as a whole, and for each of the last three months.

Mr. Eggar: Since the introduction of the new funding structure for YTS in April of this year, the number of agreed places is no longer available by payment type. The tables give the other figures requested.

[1] Training Agency figures have been compiled on a similar basis to those prepared by Health and Safety Executive on employed persons. However, the Training Agency's figures will include a number of accidents to trainees in educational establishments and road traffic accidents which may not have been reportable to the Health and Safety Executive had the individuals been employed.

[2] Major injuries are classified according to the severity criteria laid down in the Reporting of Injuries, Disease and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the average length of stay of trainees on YTS for the most recent convenient period by Training Agency region.

Mr. Nicholls: The average length of stay of YTS trainees is not available by region; however the national figure is around 69 weeks for trainees with two-year entitlement and 36 weeks for trainees with one-year entitlement.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the average length of stay of 16, 17, 18 and 19-year-olds, respectively, on YTS by Training Agency region for the most recent convenient period.

Mr. Nicholls: Average length of stay is calculated using a complex model; the information requested can be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the numbers of 16, 17, 18 and 19-year-olds, respectively, on YTS by Training Agency region for the most recent convenient date.

Figures for entrants showing what proportion are men and women, duration of unemployment prior to joining the programme, their ethnic background and whether disabled or having a health problem are given in table 2. The proportions are cumulative to the end of April (to the end of March for people with disabilities), and are the latest available.

Job Start

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish up-to-date figures showing the total number of payments made under the job start scheme, together with a breakdown of the wages of jobs covered by the scheme in the same format used in the reply given on 10 December 1987, Official Report, columns 231-32.

Mr. Nicholls: The total number of payments made under the job start programme from 1 July 1986 to 30 June 1989 is 35,393. The breakdown of wages of jobs covered by the scheme is as follows:

1 July 1986 to 30 June 1989

| £ | |
| Under 40 | 1,064 |

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The number of statutory instruments made by the Department of Employment in the last five parliamentary Sessions is as follows:

| Year | Negative resolution | Affirmative draft |
|---|---|---|
| 1984-85 | 32 | 8 |

Agricultural Inspectors

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many agricultural inspectors have been employed by his Department for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The total number of agricultural inspectors employed by the Health and Safety Executive in each year since 1979 is as follows:

| 1 April | Number |
|---|---|
| 1979 | 190 |
| 1980 | 178 |

The commission and executive plan to have 175 agricultural inspectors in post by April 1990.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of environmental training courses that have been organised for agricultural inspectors for each year since 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Environmental training for agricultural inspectors has formed part of the Health and Safety Executive's training programme for enforcement of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 (FEPA). Thirteen FEPA courses were held between February 1986 and February 1987. Such training also forms part of the intensive training of all new agricultural inspectors recruited to HSE.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the role and duties of his agricultural inspectors.

Mr. Nicholls: Her Majesty's agricultural inspectors are appointed by HSE under the provisions of section 19(1) of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 for carrying into effect the relevant statutory provisions within their field of responsibility namely, agriculture, horticulture, forestry and allied industries. Their work also involves an enforcement role under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985.

Inspectors are responsible for seeing that HSE's objectives are met. The aim is through selective inspection, advice, persuasion and where necessary the enforcement of legal requirement, to secure good standards of health and safety in the agricultural industry and to see that reasonable steps are taken to ensure that agricultural activities do not endanger the public.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what new areas of responsibility were placed on his agricultural inspectors as a result of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive's agricultural inspectors are authorised to enforce the Control of Pesticides Regulations (CoPR) 1986 made under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. The regulations provide protection for the users of pesticides, the public and the environment by imposing statutory controls on the sale, supply, advertisement, storage and use of pesticides. Inspectors provide advice and guidance on the legislation and carry out enforcement duties on those premises where HSE is already the enforcing authority.

The Government increased the commission's financial provision for 1988-89; the additional resources will be used in part to increase numbers of inspectors in the agricultural inspectorate to enforce CoPR.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to increase the number of agricultural inspectors employed by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Ministers agreed in the last public expenditure round to increase financial provision to the Health and Safety Commission and Executive for 1989-92, and this will allow for an increase in the total number of agricultural inspectors employed.

The commission and executive plan to have 175 agricultural inspectors in post by April 1990, compared with 167 in post on 1 July 1989.

A recruitment board has just completed interviewing candidates, and offers of appointment will be made shortly; a further recruitment exercise is planned for later in the year.

Dock Labour

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what financial provision has been made to finance the dissolution of the National Dock Labour Board.

Mr. Fowler: The Department of Employment is seeking to make provision of £6,000,000 for the dissolution of the National Dock Labour Board; and for connected purposes. Parliamentary approval will be sought in a supplementary Supply Estimate for the Department of Employment: employment programmes and central services, Class VII, Vote 2. Pending that approval urgent expenditure will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

Collieries (Safety)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many underground fires occurred in British Coal collieries between April 1987 and September 1988; and at how many collieries there were three or more such fires;

(2) how many cases of underground fires at British Coal collieries between April 1987 and September 1988 fire or smoke alarms or similar monitoring devices were alerted; and what were the reasons for any failures.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 25 July 1989]: During this period there were 99 outbreaks of fire below ground at British Coal collieries and eight had three or more such occurrences. Information is not available on the number of devices alerted or failures that have occurred.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Incomes

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how would his estimate of the number of working families affected by marginal tax rates of over 40 per cent. be affected if take up of family credit and housing benefit were 100 per cent. and if the effects of the parental contribution to student grants were also taken into account.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested in the first part of the question is not available. Any overlap between families with children on income-related benefits and parents making a contribution to mandatory awards is likely to be negligible. Questions concerning parental contributions to mandatory grants are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has studied the state pension schemes in other European Economic Community countries with a view to the completion of the internal market in 1992; and if he will publish the comparable figures for retirement pensions for each of the European Economic Community countries for an adult male worker with a lifetime's contribution record.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department has kept itself informed about the pension schemes in other European Community countries, and since 1977 has published an annual review of the various schemes in the form of the "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the European Communities", copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each group listed in his answer of 14 November 1988, Official Report, columns 517-18, the number of state pensioners receiving income support; the total number of state pensioners in that group; and the cumulative cost at each incremental stage of increasing the level of income support for the elderly by six successive increments of £1 and £1·50 for singles and married couples.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available estimates are as follows:

| | Millions |
|---|---|
| Number receiving Income Support and Retirement Pension | |
| Singles | 1·27 |
| Couples | 0·20 |

| | Millions |

Claimants (Credit Transfer)

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will make it his policy to encourage claimants to opt for automatic credit transfer.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Current policy is to encourage people to have their benefits paid into bank accounts by automated credit transfer. This method of payment is cheaper, more convenient for many, and reduces the risk of fraud. A leaflet explaining the advantages of ACT is included with retirement pension and child benefit claim forms.

At present, 38 per cent. of new pensioners and 32 per cent. of new recipients of child benefit choose to be paid by this method.

Mortgages

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what percentage of families with children have mortgages, distinguishing between working and out-of-work families and between those who earn (a) under £150 per week, (b) £150-£200, (c) £200-£300 and (d) over £300.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will write to my right hon. Friend.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions, including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is in the table. For earlier Sessions, the figures are for only those statutory instruments issued by the Department of Health and Social Security which relate to social security matters.

Mobility Allowance

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the numbers of (a) appeals to a medical board for mobility allowance and (b) allowances then awarded over the latest 12-month period for each area in England;

(2) what was the number of claims for mobility allowance made over the latest 12-month period for each area in England;

(3) what was the number of claims for mobility allowances over the latest 12-month period which have been successful at the first stage, after examination of doctor's reports, for each area in England.

Mr. Scott: I regret that it is not possible to provide information in the form requested. For the information which is available, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands) on 17 January 1989 at column 120.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people who, but for their age, would be eligible for mobility allowance.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 20 July 1989]: We estimate that there are a further 1,150,000 people who would qualify for mobility allowance if the age limits were abolished, thus tripling the current caseload at a cost of nearly £1½ billion. This estimate is based on projections of the numbers who are already receiving the allowance.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will publish in the Official Report his estimate of the increase in public expenditure in 1988-89 and his forecast for 1989-90 as a result of the increases in housing benefit required to compensate for increases in, respectively, rents and rates.

Mr. Scott: Increases in rents above the level of inflation increased housing benefit expenditure by an estimated £140 million in 1988-89 and by a further £210 million in 1989-90.

Rate rebates are not treated as public expenditure but real increases in rates are estimated to have increased spending in these years by about £30 million and £35 million respectively in England and Wales.

Transfer of Work

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the trial exercise to transfer certain accounting work presently carried out at the Post Office at Chesterfield and Edinburgh to the Department of Health and Social Security in Northern Ireland has been successfully carried out.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The trial has been fully evaluated in consultation with the Post Office and results have shown that the work can be carried out more efficiently and economically at the paid order store in Northern Ireland.

It has been agreed that the remainder of the work should be transferred to Northern Ireland on a phased basis, starting with Scotland in October 1989. It is planned to be completed by March 1991.

The transfer will have no affect on the counter network.

Widows

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has and from what sources, on the proportion of widows, under 45 years who remarry.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [pursuant to the reply, 22 May 1989, column 435]: I regret that the reply given has been found to contain an error. The amended reply is as follows:

> Latest available information indicates that the proportion of widows under 45 remarrying in 1987 was approximately 10 per cent.

Table 3 of the article by John Haskey, of OPCS, entitled "Widowhood, widowerhood and remarriage", published in "Population Trends" No. 30 (January 1983), shows that of those widows aged 40-44 who had remarried in 1980-81, 90 per cent. had done so within 10 years of their being widowed.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing how many children there are in families who did not take up their entitlement to supplementary benefit and family income supplement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 15 February 1989]: In 1985, families eligible for supplementary benefit but who did not claim are estimated to have included 160,000 children. The corresponding figure for family income supplement, based on the two years 1985 and 1986 and excluding the self-employed, was 231,000.

Pensioners

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many pensioner couples not entitled to income support will receive (a) an increase in rent rebate of £2·28, (b) an increase in rent rebate of 70p, (c) an increase in community charge rebate of 53p and (d) become newly entitled to housing benefit in October;

(2) what is the number of single pensioners not entitled to income support who, (a) will become entitled to housing benefit, (b) will receive an increase in weekly rent rebate of £1·63, (c) will receive an increase in weekly rate rebate of 50p and (d) will receive an increase in weekly community charge rebate of 38p when applicable amounts are raised in October.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 14 July 1989]: The numbers likely to be affected by the October 1989 pensioner premium changes in housing benefit only are estimated in the table.

Benefits

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish new estimates of the take-up of supplementary benefit, housing benefit and family income supplement; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have today placed in the Library technical notes setting out take-up estimates for supplementary benefit and housing benefit for 1985. A further note provides family income supplement take-up estimates based on the two years 1985 and 1986. These estimates confirm previous results and indicate that overall almost £9 out of every £10 of available income-related benefit expenditure is claimed. They also show that overall almost four out of every five people who are eligible for these benefits claim them. This demonstrates that income-related benefits are an efficient and effective way of helping those in financial need.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all the changes in social security law since May 1979 which have affected the entitlement of (a) 16 to 17-year-olds, (b) 18 to 20-year-olds and (c) 21 to 25-year-olds to supplementary benefit or any other benefit or which have affected the entitlement to any benefit of their parents in the same format as his answer to the hon. Member for Derby, South of 20 December 1985, Official Report, column 422.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the main changes in social security law since the end of 1985 specifically affecting the entitlement of young people and their parents, showing who was affected by the change and the relevant legislation in the same form as in the Official Report, 20 December 1985, column 422-6.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answers 12 June and 29 June 1989]: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given to the hon. ### National Insurance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his estimate of the cost to the national insurance fund in the current financial year of restoring the earnings-related supplement on the basis which applied before the Social Security (No. 2) Act 1980 for unemployed people only; what would be the saving in tax and other benefits; and how many males and females would benefit;

(2) what is the current reduced rate of national insurance contribution for (a) married women and (b) widows; how many are still paying contributions at this rate, and what is the forecast for 1990-91; how many would otherwise be paying at the rate of nil per cent., five per cent. and seven per cent.; and what is the estimated cost to the national insurance fund in the current financial year;

(3) whether he will bring up to date for the current financial year the information given in his answer of 10 December 1986, Official Report, column 204, to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby, concerning the distribution of incomes and national insurance contributions, adding (a) the saving on the abolition of the reduced rate contribution and (b) the numbers contracted-in and contracted-out together with their contributions;

(4) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the estimated income of the national insurance fund from national insurance contributions in the current financial year, the income which would accrue if the upper earnings limit on all contributions is removed and the income which would be lost if (i) the contribution rate for single persons is reduced to 5·5 per cent., (ii) the rate for married persons is dropped to 4 per cent., (iii) £3,000 is deducted from earned income for contribution purposes, rising to £6,000 for a contributor with a non-earning spouse and (iv) the reductions in (i) to (iii) are in operation at the same time;

(5) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for those contracted-in and for those contracted-out, the national insurance contributions rates, including the class 2 and class 4 contributions and the reduced rate, in 1989-90 together with (i) the total number in each category, their sex and their maritial status and (ii) the aggregate contributions in each category and the earnings to which they relate;

(6) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for those below and those above pensionable age the estimated number of earned incomes subject to employers' national insurance contributions in steps of £1,000 between £15,000 and £25,000 and in £5,000 steps thereafter, showing single persons and one-earner and two-earner married couples together with the amount collected;

(7) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of male and female contributors expected to pay national insurance contributions (a) in the current financial year, and (b) in 1978-79, broken down into each class and at each rate together with the numbers contracted in and contracted out; and if he will add his forecast of the amount paid or due in each case at current and 1989-90 prices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the figures for the expected yield of national insurance contributions in the current year, as stated in the oral answer of 3 July to the hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway), Official Report, column 11, and in the written answer of the same date to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers), Official Report, column 40, were calculated, what the actual yield is expected to be; and whether he will publish in the Official Report a table accounting for the difference between the expected yield and the estimate of £27,887 million given in the Government Actuary's report on the 1988 Uprating Order (Cm. 537).

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 17 July]: The estimates of the expected net yield of national insurance contributions, as stated in the reply given by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) on 3 July at column 11, and the estimates of national insurance fund contributions as stated in the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and the Disabled to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers) on 3 July at column 40 were calculated by the Government Actuary and are consistent. The figures differ because the estimated total net yield of national insurance contributions at column 11 includes the National Health Service allocation, which is paid out of contributions and meets part for the cost of the National Health Service. The NHS allocation is not paid into the national insurance fund. The total amount of money collected by contributions is equal to the sum of the national insurance fund's contribution income which are given at column 40 and the National Health Service allocation. Both estimates were consistent with Budget estimates of national insurance contributions.

A full reconciliation of the estimates published in the Government Actuary's report on the 1988 Uprating and Rerating Orders (Cm. 537) and the estimates published on the 3 July 1989 in the Official Report is contained in the table.

The recently announced extra growth in the numbers of personal pensions means that the Budget estimates of the net yield of contributions in the final line of the table and the net income of the national insurance fund from contributions, but not the estimates of the NHS allocation, might be about £2 billion less than previously estimated. Fuller details of these, and other, estimate changes that will have occurred since the Budget will be published in the autumn statement.

Notes:

All estimates are net of Statutory Sick Pay and Statutory Maternity Pay and include, except where stated otherwise, State scheme premiums. (All Budget estimates are rounded to the nearest £100 million: figures do not add up to totals due to rounding.)

[1] State scheme premiums were estimated to be £250 million in 1989-90 in the Government Actuary's Report (Cm. 537). State scheme premiums are included in estimated net yield of contributions and in the estimates of the National Insurance Fund's income from contributions. The Fund's estimated income form contributions was given as £28·1 billion on this basis in the answer to the honourable member at Official Report, 12 July at Column 504.

[2] The Government Actuary in preparing his report on the Uprating and Rerating orders was instructed to assume that average earnings would rise by 7·5 per cent. between 1988-89 and 1989-90. The estimates reflect more up to date estimates of earnings growth in 1989-90 which were used when the Budget estimates were framed. Estimate given in Official Report, July 3 at Column 40.

[3] Estimates were published in the Financial Memorandum to the House of Lords Print of the Social Security Bill. The full cost of the Budget changes on the National Insurance Fund given at Official Report, July 3 at Column 40 was calculated as £800 million foregone contributions income arising from the Budget changes to primary Class 1 contributions and £200 million extra expenditure arising from the abolition of the retirement pension earnings rule.

[4] The estimate of net contributions collected in 1989-90 was given as "more than £32 billion" in the Official Report, 3 July 1989 Column 11 and the estimate of the National Insurance Fund's income from contributions (£28,200 million) was given in Official Report, 3 July 1989 at Column 40. These estimates are on a Great Britain basis: estimates in the Financial Statement and Budget Report were on a United Kingdom basis.

SCOTLAND

Council House Sales

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many right-to-buy sales of (a) detached houses, (b) semi-detached houses, (c) terraced houses, (d) flats or maisonettes and (e) four in a block type dwellings by each local authority in Scotland and for Scotland as a whole were completed during each year from 1980-81 to 1988-89.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The breakdown requested was not collected prior to 1986. Information collected centrally prior to 1986 does not differentiate between sales under the right-to-buy provisions and voluntary sales to sitting tenants. Tables giving the information available have been placed in the House Library.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the value of right-to-buy discounts in thousands of pounds by each local authority in Scotland and for Scotland as a whole during each year from 1980-81 to 1988-89.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information collected centrally prior to 1986 does not differentiate between sales under the right-to-buy provisions and voluntary sales to sitting tenants. The available information is set out in the following table.

Litter

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to deal with the problem of litter in public places; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We are determined to take vigorous and effective action to deal with the problem of litter. I am today publishing details of our proposals for legislation designed to improve the appearance and standards of cleanliness of public places in Scotland, and to enable and encourage local authorities, other landowners and individual citizens to take more effective action against litter and those who drop it. These proposals are broadly similar to those published on 20 July by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment, for Transport and for Wales to apply in England and Wales.

Our proposals include:

a power for district and islands councils to introduce fixed penalty schemes for littering;

an increase in the maximum fine for littering under the Litter Act 1983 from £400 to £1,000;

a duty on local authorities to keep clean all land in their beneficial occupancy or control, open to the air and to which the public have access; this duty would include both litter and dog faeces;

a similar duty on certain landowners with statutory functions;

a power for district and islands councils to impose by designation order a similar duty on owners of certain defined categories of land in other ownership (such as car parks, shopping precincts and forecourts of commercial premises);

rationalising street cleaning responsibilities by making district and islands councils wholly responsible for cleaning of all roads (except motorways);

a statutory code of practice to which all those under the duty would be required to have regard, specifying standards of cleanliness and advising on the best means of achieving these;

a system of enforcement whereby (a) an aggrieved citizen can apply for a court order directing a local authority, or any other landowner under the duty to keep clean, to discharge the duty; (b) the local authority has power to issue litter abatement notices requiring a private landowner to discharge his duty; and (c) the local authority has default powers to carry out cleaning work itself, and recover costs; and the extension of section 1 of the Litter Act 1983 to all areas covered by the duty to keep clean, and the widening of its scope.

I am arranging for copies of the consultation document to be placed in the Library of the House. Copies are also being sent to interested parties, inviting comments by 29 September. Subject to responses to the consultation, the Government intend to introduce the necessary legislation at the earliest opportunity.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions, including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested concerning statutory instruments prepared in the Scottish Office for the calendar years from 1984 to date is as follows:

| Year | Total orders issued | Negative orders issued | Affirmative orders issued |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1984 | 230 | 100 | 7 |

Sand-eels

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research has been undertaken since 1 January into the sand-eel population in waters around Scotland, and in particular, around Shetland.

Mr. Lang: Regular samples have been taken of commercial catches both at Shetland and off the west coast of Scotland since the fishery began in April. In addition, a survey of the spawning grounds around Shetland was undertaken in February 1989, and larval and 0-group sand-eels around Shetland were assessed in May and June. A survey of the fishing grounds at Shetland is also to be undertaken later this summer.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he proposes to increase the amount and extent of research being undertaken by his Department into the sand-eel population in the waters around Scotland, and in particular around Shetland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Scientists from the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland marine laboratory regularly sample commercial catches of sand-eels in Scottish waters, and earlier this year undertook surveys of larval and 0-group sand-eels and the spawning grounds around Shetland. A further survey of the Shetland fishing grounds is planned for later in the summer. The programme for further research on sand-eels in 1990 and subsequent years is currently under consideration.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, following from his announcement on licensing arrangements for the Shetland sand-eel fishery, whether he will estimate the level of fishing which the Shetland sand-eel stocks will be able to support during the first six months of 1990.

Mr. Lang: An assessment will be made before the end of the year of the appropriate level of fishing for 1990.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any proposals to introduce a licensing system for the sand-eel fishery in the Minch similar to the one recently introduced for the Shetland sand-eel fishery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: A licensing scheme for sand-eel fisheries in Scottish inshore waters (including the Minch) was introduced with effect from 1 July 1989 under the Sand-eel Licensing Order 1989. The detailed arrangements applying to west coast sand-eel fisheries for 1989 were announced on 13 July by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is considering the introduction of alternative methods of estimating sand-eel stocks to the present retrospective method, virtual population analysis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: New methods for assessing fish stocks are continually under development and scientists at the Aberdeen marine laboratory are in the process of refining the present methods for sand-eels using detailed fishing effort data and the results of research surveys. Given the data presently available, however, there is no known method of estimating the sand-eel stock size that is likely in the near future to provide a more accurate assessment than is obtained by virtual population analysis.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the percentage of stock of 1 group sand-eels that was taken by the Shetland fishery prior to and after the end of June in each of the past 15 years.

Mr. Lang: The information requested, which has been derived from the most recent assessment by the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea, is as follows:

Percentage of stock of 1-group taken in Shetland fishery

Water Pollution

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what responses have been received on his Department's consultative proposals for tighter controls over the most dangerous substances entering water; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Office proposals were set out in a consultation paper issued on 19 December 1988. Responses were received from 20 organisations representing industrial, environmental, agricultural, water and local authority interests. A summary has been placed in the Library.

The respondents generally gave a strong welcome to the Government's proposals for the principle of a unified approach involving the use of both environmental quality standards and technology-based emission standards for controlling discharges of the most dangerous substances. Comments were invited and received on a number of matters of detail, and these have been taken into account in the conclusions reached.

A key element of the proposals which was welcomed by many respondents, was the drawing up of a priority Red List of dangerous substances. The provisional list included in the consultation paper has been slightly amended in the light of the consultations and of new and corrected data now received. The initial priority Red List will be:

| Substance | CAS number |
|---|---|
| Mercury and its compounds | |
| Cadmium and its compounds | |
| gamma-Hexachlorocyclohexane | 00058-89-9 |
| DDT | 00050-29-3 |
| Pentachlorophenol | 00087-86-5 |
| Hexachlorobenzene | 00118-74-1 |
| Hexachlorobutadiene | 00087-68-3 |
| Aldrin | 00309-00-2 |
| Dieldrin | 00060-57-1 |
| Endrin | 00072-20-8 |
| Polychlorinated Biphenyls | 01336-36-3 |
| Dichlorvos | 00062-73-7 |
| 1,2-Dichloroethane | 00107-06-2 |
| Trichlorobenzene | 12002-48-1 |
| Atrazine | 01912-24-9 |
| Simazine | 00122-34-9 |
| Tributyltin compounds | |
| Triphenyltin compounds | |
| Trifluoralin | 01582-09-8 |
| Fenitrothion | 00122-14-5 |
| Azinphos-methyl | 00086-50-0 |
| Malathion | 00121-75-5 |
| Endosulfan | 00115-29-7 |

This list is the same as that announced by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment in the House on 10 April, (Official Report, volume 150, column 405). In making his decision, my hon. Friend took account of the comments and suggestions expressed in the Scottish consultation exercise.

Further substances may be added to the list from time to time where there are sound scientific reasons for doing so. These will be identified along the broad lines set out in the annex to the consultation paper. The selection scheme is being further developed and modified in the light of comments received. Candidate substances identified by the scheme will be subject to a second-stage assessment, taking particular account of the risk posed for the aquatic environment, and to consultation before addition to the list.

Those respondents to the consultative paper who commented on the mechanism of control all favoured the principle that discharges from prescribed processes should be subject to control by the Scottish river purification authorities rather than controlled centrally. Strict environmental quality standards should be set for all Red List substances where they do not exist at present. River purification authorities' discharge consents will ensure that these standards are met as a minimum requirement. Enabling powers for this purpose are available in schedule 23 to the Water Act 1989, which substitutes new and amended provisions in part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974.

Such discharges would be subject to a requirement, to be introduced progressively for existing plant, that the process should be operated according to the best available technology not entailing excessive costs with a view to minimising discharges of the most dangerous substances.

We shall be issuing shortly a further consultation paper which considers how the work of the river purification authorities in dealing with Red List substances should be co-ordinated with that of other pollution control agencies.

The 1988 consultation paper discussed the question of inputs of Red List substances to water through indirect or diffuse sources. Several respondents agreed with the paper that diffuse sources are an important input for many dangerous substances. After considering the comments received, we still believe that existing controls over the supply, use and disposal of substances should generally be sufficient to deal with any potential problem from diffuse sources, but we shall be asking river purification authorities to put in hand more rigorous monitoring for priority substances and we are considering the need for new powers relating to the storage and more general use of certain hazardous substances.

Measures are also required for controls over discharges to sewers where these discharges contain Red List substances. We shall be making proposals for how this should be done in the consultation paper referred to earlier.

DEFENCE

Aldermaston

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what staffing and recruitment initiatives he is taking to ensure that the atomic weapons establishment, Aldermaston, has sufficient resources to manage the research work on a warhead for a new air-launched missle.

Mr. Alan Clark: Every effort is made to ensure that the atomic weapons establishment has sufficient manpower for its priority tasks, including where appropriate work related to possible future systems. Special pay additions have been introduced, and major recruitment campaigns are maintained. The situation is kept under close and careful review.

Exercise Migrant Merlin

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of, and what numbers are involved in, exercise Migrant Merlin to take place in October.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Exercise Migrant Merlin is 15 Infantry Brigade's annual exercise and will be held between 7 and 21 October on Salisbury plain. It is designed to provide battalion and brigade level training in essential wartime tasks. These include area defence, observation, patrolling, and limited attack exercising. A maximum of 3,000 troops are expected to participate at any one time; with the exceptions of the brigade headquarters, these will all be Territorial Army personnel.

Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made in his Department's review, with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Alan Clark: The most significant element of MOD relocation planning has revolved around two major groups within the procurement executive.

The proposed move of 1,500 quality assurance posts from Woolwich and Bromley to Teesside was announced in the House on 9 March 1989. Consultations are continuing with the trade union side about the move, which would take place over the period 1993-95.

A feasibility study report of relocating some 3,500 posts in the land and air systems controllerates is currently with Ministers. Given reasonably early agreement on site selection, the effective date for these moves could be in the timescale 1993-95.

Additionally, a number of smaller moves, totalling about 1,000 posts from London, have been agreed (and some have taken place) since the 1988 relocation initiative.

The MOD will continue to pursue a policy of relocating work from London and the south-east to less advantaged regions whenever possible and the TU side will continue to be consulted on all relocation studies.

RAF Depots

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the RAF aircraft storage depots in Britain.

Mr. Neubert: There are four RAF aircraft storage depots in Britain, which are located at Abingdon, Kemble, St. Athan and Shawbury.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the RAF equipment supply depots in Britain.

Mr. Neubert: There are three RAF equipment supply depots in Britain which are located at Carlisle, Quedgley and Stafford.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the RAF petroleum supply depots in Britain.

Mr. Neubert: Following the transfer of former Department of Energy depots to the Ministry of Defence on 1 April 1989, there are now some 44 RAF petroleum supply depots at various locations within the United Kingdom. However, it would not be in the public interest to give details of these sites.

USAF Petroleum Depots

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the United States Air Force petroleum supply depots in Britain.

Mr. Neubert: There are no United States petroleum supply depots in the United Kingdom. Storage facilities are made available as necessary at RAF depots.

Defence Estimates

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the reasons for the increase in project cost for the Sonar 2054, set out in the major equipment projects tables in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989" and the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988".

Mr. Alan Clark: I presume that the hon. Gentleman is questioning the difference in the figures given in the Statement on the Defence Estimates (SDE) 88 and SDE 89. The £310 million given in SDE 88 represents the then approved programme. The £400 million given in SDE 89 includes further production orders and pay and price variations.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the reason for the slippage of one year in the in-service date for the type 2400 submarine, set out in the major equipment projects tables in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989" and the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988".

Mr. Alan Clark: The slippage of one year to the delivery date for the type 2400 submarine is due, first, to industrial action at VSEL during 1988; and secondly, because of the number of technical problems with new to service equipment on this, the first of a new class of diesel-electric submarines.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the provision of a constant speed drive generating unit on the new European fighter aircraft; whether he has considered the Lucas system and that of Bendix/Ferranti; and if he has considered the respective weights and efficiency of power supplies in reaching a decision between the competing systems.

Mr. Alan Clark: The United Kingdom and our EFA partners, in conjunction with the EFA prime contractor (Eurofighter), are in the process of evaluating the merits of the competing bids for the EFA main generating system development contract. All relevant factors, including those mentioned by the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton), are being taken into account and a decision is expected in the very near future. In the circumstances it would be inappropriate for me to comment on the respective merits of either bid.

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to meet his counterpart in the Federal Republic of Germany to discuss progress on the contract awards for the EFA project.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decision has been reached on the development contract for the European fighter aircraft radar.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to the development and production of two different versions of the European Fighter Aircraft, based upon two different radar systems.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Members.

RAF Finningley

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been carried out at RAF station Finningley, along the lines of those carried out at RAF station Manston, in respect of using RAF station Finningley as a joint military-civil airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: RAF Finningley is a busy training station and the scope for civil flying is limited. My Department has not undertaken any studies on the greater civil use of the airfield but remains ready to discuss any viable proposals with the appropriate authorities.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Sir Hugh Rossi: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the guidelines issued by the Property Services Agency containing advice on the use of chlorofluorocarbons on the Government estate extend to cooling systems for munitions storage, Her Majesty's ships and submarines and communications network; and what plans exist to ensure the safe disposal of chlorofluorocarbon refrigerant material and chlorofluorocarbon 11 from such cooling systems.

Mr. Alan Clark: The guidelines issued by the Property Services Agency (18 May 1989) on the use of CFCs in Government estate contain principles which were already being implemented within MOD. Government policy is being applied to CFCs in Her Majesty's ships and submarines and communications network. The means of ensuring the safe disposal of CFCs already in MOD possession is the subject of current discussion.

Trident

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Trident programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Trident programme continues to progress to time and to budget.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about progress on the Trident programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. David Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how military and reconnaissance aircraft were disposed of at sea, following British nuclear tests; and what purposes were served by such dumping.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am not aware that any British military or reconnaissance aircraft were disposed of at sea. However, it was noted that a Grumman Avenger aircraft from HMS Warrior at operation Grapple was lost overboard in an accident.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what manner water was imported into Christmas Island during British nuclear tests there in the 1950s; from where; and how it was monitored.

Mr. Alan Clark: Royal Navy ships fitted with special distillation equipment delivered on average 100 tons of fresh water per day for use ashore on Christmas Island. This was in addition to the main source of supply of treated surface water in which no radioactivity associated with the nuclear tests was detected. I refer the hon. Member to the replies given on 7 November 1988 columns 31-32 and 31 October 1988 column 528 which answered similar questions. The RAF was mainly responsible for monitoring all water and ensuring that it met public health standards.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the 12th Independent Field Squadron are now deceased; and what information he has as to the causes of death.

Mr. Alan Clark: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to a similar question on 22 December 1988 at column 376.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Fijian forces have been studied by the National Radiological Protection Board; and if he has received representations from the Fijian Government about the health and welfare of their nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Alan Clark: Fijian forces were not included in the study carried out by the NRPB and ICRF. I am not aware of any representations from the Fijian Government about the health and welfare of their nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will release details of unit/service mortality amongst British nuclear test veterans and the causes of this mortality.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost and, depending on the level of detail, could in any case be subject to the Data Protection Act.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what conclusions he draws with regard to his policy towards the compensation of British nuclear test veterans from the report of Dr. Karl Morgan of the health physics division of Oak Ridge national laboratory in Tennessee, dealing with the consequences of United States veterans' exposure during nuclear tests in the 1950s and 1960s.

Mr. Alan Clark: Government policy on this matter is based on the conclusions reached in the National Radiological Protection Board report released last year, which concluded that no harm due to ionising radiation was suffered by participants in the United Kingdom nuclear test programme. However, the Government would be ready to pay compensation to those participants who suffer ill health from a disease if it could be shown, even on a balance of probabilities, that the incidence of that disease was linked to participation in the United Kingdom nuclear test programme. Individual reports, such as that to which the hon. Member refers, will not change Government policy unless they influence the NRPB conclusions; that is a matter for the NRPB who are the independent experts on these matters. I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 23 May 1989, at column 464.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have taken place into beta dose erythema conditions amongst British nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Alan Clark: No studies of beta dose erythema have been carried out on British nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the function of the RAF balloon unit during British nuclear tests in the 1950s; to what proximity members of the unit approached ground zero; and with what frequency.

Mr. Clark: The function of the balloon unit was to operate a balloon system for hoisting devices under test to the prescribed altitude ready for detonation. Members of the balloon unit were withdrawn to a safe distance of not less than 12·5 km from ground zero at the time of detonation. After detonation balloon unit personnel returned to ground zero only when the induced radiation had fallen to such levels that the exposures were not sensibly greater than zero.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which military unit or squadron spent the most time in active service in the Christmas islands, during British nuclear tests there (a) cumulatively and (b) consecutively.

Mr. Clark: HMS Resolution remained in active service in the Christmas islands during the British nuclear tests from December 1957 until June 1964. 73 E and M Squadron RE remained in service from December 1957 to January 1964 and the RAF Unit Christmas Island was present from October 1957 until June 1964.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who undertook the descaling of desalination tanks on Christmas Island, during British nuclear tests there in the 1950s; where these samples were taken for examination; and if the results of these examinations are publicly available.

Mr. Clark: The storage of drinking water at Christmas Island was the responsibility of the Army. The checking of the quality of fresh and raw water from ground sources and shore distillers prior to and in storage was the responsibility of the RAF medical service. There was no reason to descale the desalination tanks since they were only for the storage of clean potable water. The RAF medical service reports, under normal rules, would have been destroyed after two years.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why an operation/biopsy took place on Mr. Andrew Dickson of Wakefield during his active service on Christmas Island; what was the purpose of this operation; and why it took place on the island rather than via referral to Honolulu.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is not the policy of this Department to discuss the detail of individual medical cases, which are covered by the rules concerning medical confidentiality. This policy accords with that of the NHS.

Radiation Contamination

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what threshold of radiation contamination exists with respect to genetic effects.

Mr. Alan Clark: The assumption is made for radiation protection purposes that there is no threshold for the types of radiation effect that produce mutations in the hereditary information in cells.

Saudi Offset Committee

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what current proposals have been (i) discussed and (ii) agreed with the Saudi Government offset committee; what are the estimated amounts involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: In addition to the venture proposals referred to by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member on 19 June 1989, col 56, I am pleased to say that three further venture proposals have subsequently been put to the Saudi Government offset committee for its consideration.

As announced in a news release by my Department today the third proposal involves an imaginative series of potential collaborations from Royal Ordnance plc to develop jointly Saudi Arabia's defence industrial infrastructure. The fourth proposes that the United Kingdom company Technicare International Limited and the Saudi company Yusuf Bin Ahmed Kanoo collaborate on setting up a number of computer training centres in Saudi Arabia and number five is for a joint venture between Fryma Fabrics Limited of the United Kingdom and Nafa Enterprises of Riyadh to establish a manufacturing plant in Saudi Arabia to produce polyethylene yarn and tape and also to knit the yarn into agricultural and horticultural netting. All five initial proposals are presently being considered by the Saudi Government offset committee.

All of the proposals will be the subject of further detailed feasibility studies before implementation and it is not yet possible to give an accurate assessment of the investment which will be involved. The present indication is that the total investment in the five project proposals should be in excess of £100 million over a period of 10 years or more.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will write to the hon. Member.

Nimrod Airframe

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long the Nimrod airframe is likely to remain in RAF service; and whether his Department is currently looking at replacement options.

Mr. Alan Clark: We expect the Nimrod to give many more years of useful service. The question of a replacement will be addressed at the appropriate time.

Tornado

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Tornado aircraft have crashed since the aircraft entered service.

Mr. Neubert: Since the aircraft entered service, 20 RAF Tornado aircraft have been damaged irreparably in accidents. The public release of aircraft accident statistics for other nations is a matter for the respective Governments.

Procurement Executive

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many senior officials in the Ministry of Defence procurement executive have had previous long-term experience of working in the defence industry or any other manufacturing industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information requested is not readily available. The majority of the senior staff in the procurement executive are career civil servants and comparatively few have worked for a prolonged period in industry. However, the commercial experience of staff in the procurement executive is steadily increasing as a result of a substantial programme of interchange with industry and through increased efforts to recruit those who have worked in the defence and other industries.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to appoint more civilians who have had long-term experience working in defence-related industries to the procurement executive.

Mr. Alan Clark: Yes. We are already running continuous recruitment campaigns seeking to fill posts at the lower and middle management levels of the procurement executive with people who have worked in industry. At the more senior level, we shall shortly be seeking to recruit two or three project managers with industrial experience.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the current target for the employment of civilian specialist computer science staff in the procurement executive;

(2) what is the total number of civilian specialist computer science staff currently employed in the procurement executive;

(3) what the target for the employment of civilian staff in the procurement executive in each year between 1980 and 1989;

(4) what was the total number of civilian staff employed in the procurement executive in each year between 1980 and 1989.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member.

Property Disposal

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the Army establishments, estates or property his Department intend to close or sell in the next five years;

(2) if he will list the RAF establishment estate or property that his Department intends to close or sell in the next five years;

(3) if he will list the Royal Navy and Royal Marine shore establishments, estates or property which his Department intends to close and sell in the next five years.

Mr. Neubert: I will write to the hon. Member.

Co-operation Projects (France)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the current collaborative projects or co-operative arrangements that involve the French.

Mr. Alan Clark: A list of the collaborative equipment projects in which both the United Kingdom and France participate, reflecting the position as at 1 March 1989, appears at table 6, chapter 4 of volume 1 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989.

In addition, an Anglo-French reciprocal purchasing initiative was launched in September 1987. Under this initiative, we have set up machinery to establish closer links between the two countries and each now publishes its contract opportunities in bulletins available to industry in both countries.

Nuclear Delivery System

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration his Department is giving to the use of the multinational MSOW as a nuclear delivery system.

Mr. Neubert: None.

Defence Industry

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent study of the capability of the United Kingdom defence industry has been carried out by his Department; and what judgment he has as to which area of domestic defence manufacturing capability should be preserved for strategic reasons.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Ministry of Defence keeps the capability of the United Kingdom defence industry under review. Our aim is to achieve value for money in the supply of equipment to our armed forces and our consideration includes, on a case-by-case basis, the advisability of ensuring a continuing United Kingdom source of supply.

Senior Officials (Appointments)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records are kept by his Department of the number of senior Ministry of Defence officials and senior service personnel who have left his Department to take up appointments in defence-related industries.

Mr. Alan Clark: This information is not available.

Hong Kong

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he or any other Minister in his Department last visited British forces in Hong Kong; and when he or any other Minister from his Department next intends to visit.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The last MOD ministerial visit to Hong Kong was that made by my predecessor in January 1988. A further visit should take place within the next 12 months.

Helicopters

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the other helicopter options that are being looked at as an alternative to EH101 to fill the Royal Air Force's battlefield support requirement.

Mr. Alan Clark: In accordance with normal procurement practice, we shall consider all appropriate helicopter types, including—where relevant—combinations of types, in order to determine whether the utility version of the EH101 helicopter continues to represent the most cost-effective solution for meeting the future requirement for support helicopters. This work will be taken forward during the project definition phase of the RAF EH101 programme, the first stage of which will be completed by April 1990.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with representatives of McDonnell Douglas concerning the possible purchase of Apache helicopters for the Army Air Corps.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any Army Air Corps or RAF pilots have been involved in any recent trials of the Blackhawk helicopter.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Ministry of Defence has not undertaken any recent trials of the Blackhawk. However, a flight observer from A&AEE, Boscombe Down, has flown in a Blackhawk which is used by Rolls-Royce as its flight test vehicle for the RTM 322 engine, as part of the MOD's monitoring of the RTM 322 development.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any Army Air Corps personnel or pilots from ETPS, Boscombe Down have recently test flown the AH64 Apache.

Mr. Alan Clark: A number of Army Air Corps pilots and test pilots from A&AEE, Boscombe Down, have flown the AH64 Apache during the last 12 months.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Royal Navy variant of EH-101 is to be fitted with a ship sonar when it becomes operational.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is intended that the RN anti-submarine warfare (ASW) variant of the EH-101 helicopter will be equipped with sonobuoy systems for the detection of submarines under water. Consideration is also being given to fitting an active dipping sonar but no decision on the choice of equipment has yet been taken.

Mig Crash (Belgium)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any RAF interceptor aircraft were airborne in the vicinity of the pilotless Mig 23 aircraft that crashed in Belgium earlier this month.

Mr. Neubert: No.

Martin Maineth SLAT System

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Royal Navy or RAF have tested or taken part in the testing of the Martin Maineth SLAT system.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member.

Basic Trainer Aircraft

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether, in line with his Department's objective of achieving value for money, there has been any recent cost/benefit analysis of his Department's choice of the Tucano basic trainer over the PC-9.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ships (Leasing)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Royal Navy or RFA vessels are currently leased to other countries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Rating Reform

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the Member for Western Isles on 20 June, Official Report, column 75, (1) whether he plans to issue written guidance to armed service units in respect of poll tax payments in England and Wales;

(2) if he will publish the written guidance issued to armed service units in respect of poll tax payments in England and Wales.

Mr. Neubert: Such guidance has already been issued, and I have placed copies in the Library of the House. It has been widely promulgated within the services and substantially reflected in a practice note published by the Department of the Environment. I have no plans for any further publication.

United States Defence Secretary

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the subjects discussed in the course of his meetings with Mr. Cheney, United States Secretary for Defence, during his recent official visit to the United States of America.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: During his recent visit to Washington my right hon. Friend discussed a wide range of matters of mutual interest with Mr. Cheney.

Air-to-Surface Missile

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on the possible procurement of a tactical air-to-surface missile.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill) on 17 July at column 71.

Central America

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which central American countries have received assistance from his Department in the past three years; and which countries are currently receiving assistance.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Belize has had an established programme of military assistance from the Ministry of Defence since independence in 1981 and that assistance continues. In addition, in 1987, one cadet from El Salvador attended the basic officer course at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst.

Russian Speakers

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel are fluent Russian speakers; and what this figure was in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Neubert: A total of 162 serving military personnel are qualified as Russian interpreters, of whom 32 serve in the Royal Navy, 94 in the Army and 36 in the Royal Air Force. Records are not held in a form which would enable the historical information requested by the hon. Gentleman to be readily provided, but I understand that the number of Russian interpreters has increased modestly in recent years.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what incentives are currently operating to encourage military personnel to take Russian language training.

Mr. Neubert: Financial rewards are provided in the form of lump sum grants for successful completion of the various levels of Russian language training in the services, with smaller grants being awarded upon requalification in that language. Additionally, members of the Services are encouraged to participate in Russian language training provided at voluntary weekend courses at university and other self-help courses, for which some financial assistance is given.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current level of funding for Russian language training for military personnel, and what it was for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Neubert: I regret that the detailed information sought by the hon. Gentleman concerning expenditure over the last 10 years is not readily available. However, Russian language training at the Defence School of Languages at Beaconsfield is being provided at a cost of about £420,000 in the current year. There is no reason to believe that this differs to any significant degree from the general level of expenditure in the past.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his assessment of the efficiency of current technology to ascertain whether nuclear weapons are being carried at sea.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member.

Defence Procurement

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if, pursuant to his answer of 20 July, Official Report, column 322, he will place copies of all the articles and speeches in which Ministers and senior officials have addressed the implications of 1992 for defence procurement in the Library;

(2) if he will place a copy of the proceedings of the forum held by his Department for industry on the future of defence procurement in Europe in April in the Library.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the annual level of production of intermediate-level nuclear waste by his Department for each year prior to 1983 for which data is available.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to the hon. Member.

NATO Exercises (Observers)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the annual cost in 1987 and in 1988 to his Department of providing appropriate facilities for Warsaw pact military personnel to observe NATO military exercises under the auspices of the Stockholm agreement;

(2) what was the annual cost in 1987 and in 1988 to his Department of providing appropriate facilities to Warsaw pact military personnel to enable them to make challenge inspections of NATO military exercises.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will write to the hon. Member.

HMS Dreadnought

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the agreement on charges paid for HMS Dreadnought to be stored at Rosyth.

Mr. Alan Clark [holding answer 25 July 1989]: Dreadnought has been stored afloat at Rosyth since 1983. Although she occupies a berth inside the basin (ie inside the licensed area) no specific provision was made in the term contract for payment to be made by the Ministry of Defence to BTL by way of berthing charges for her.

Exercise Wintex 89

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how may home service force personnel took part in Exercise Wintex 89.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 19 July 1989]: No member of the home service force took part in exercise Wintex 89.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Naval Reserve personnel took part in Exercise Wintex 89.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 19 July 1989]: Over 600 personnel of the Royal Navy Reserve took part in exercise Wintex 89.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Territorial Army personnel took part in exercise Wintex 89.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 19 July 1989]: About 500 personnel of the Territorial Army took part in exercise Wintex 89.

Venture Glider

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has reached a decision on the type of motor glider selected to replace the Venture at volunteer gliding schools.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to the reply, 13 July 1989, column 588]: Following a competition, the Grob 109B motor glider, of GRP construction, has been selected to re-equip the air training corps. An order was placed with Burkhart Grob on 25 July 1989 for 53 aircraft. The order also includes the provision of a fatigue test specimen, training and the supply of spares.

HEALTH

Regional Health Authorities (Staff)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by each regional health authority for each year since 1979 the numbers of staff expressed as a whole-time equivalent and as actual full-time and part-time members in the following categories (a) ancillary, (b) administration and clerical, (c) nurses and midwives and (d) professional and technical.

Mr. Mellor: Such information as is available has been placed in the Library. Information for the years 1979 and 1982 (inclusive) is available on a whole-time equivalent basis only.

"Actual full-time and part-time members" has been interpreted as numbers (headcount).

Management Consultants

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current annual expenditure in the National Health Service on management consultants; what have been the comparable figures over the past 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The employment of management consultants is a matter for individual health authorities and their accounts do not separately identify any expenditure consequently incurred.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a list of the community health councils in England together with their expenditure of public funds in the latest available year.

Mr. Freeman: The expenses of community health councils are met by and form part of the total expenditure of the health authorities concerned. Information derived from the annual accounts of district health authorities in England for 1987-88 (the latest year available) have been placed in the Library.

NHS Pay

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement about pay in the Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: Increases for doctors, nursing and midwifery staff and the professions allied to medicine have been implemented following recommendations of review bodies. Settlements have also been negotiated for certain other groups. Just over 90 per cent. of all NHS staff are covered by these settlements for 1989-90.

Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Mellor: A team of officials is close to completing a thorough, systematic review of the location of our headquarters work. We expect to have a report of the team's findings shortly.

Drugs Budgets

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those factors that family practitioner committees will take into account in deciding whether a general practitioner is justified in exceeding his indicative drugs budget.

Mr. Mellor: A GP practice will be considered justified in exceeding its indicative drug budget if this should prove necessary to provide patients with the drugs they need.

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sanctions regional health authorities will be able to impose should the majority of general practitioners in all or any of their family practitioner committee areas overspend their drugs budgets.

Mr. Mellor: Those GPs who overspend their indicative budgets will face disciplinary proceedings only as a last resort and solely when there is clear evidence of over-prescribing which, by definition, would be to the detriment of their patients.

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the allocation of drugs budgets to regional health authorities under the reorganisation of the National Health Service will be fixed.

Mr. Mellor: Each year each regional health authority will be allocated a firm budget to cover expenditure on medicines in the family practitioner services within the region. The budgets will be set at sensible and realistic levels to ensure that patients receive the medicines they need and that medicines will be paid for at reasonable prices.

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether, in his proposals for the National Health Service, the allocation of drugs budgets by regional health authorities to family practitioner committees will be in the form of a fixed amount of indicative spending limits.

Mr. Mellor: Regional health authorities will allocate their firm budgets for actual expenditure on medicines among their family practitioner committees (FPCs) which will in turn determine individual FPCs' overall indicative prescribing budgets.

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether, in his proposals to reorganise the National Health Service, he intends to fix a cash limit for the drugs budget of the family practitioner services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The financial arrangements for drug budgets are set out in working paper 4 of the NHS review series "Indicative Prescribing Budgets for General Medical Pracititioners". The precise mechanisms are still under consideration.

Eye Test Charges

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current estimated saving from eye test charges; and what was the original estimate.

Mr. Mellor: The latest estimate of savings in a full year is £90 million (England). The original estimate for the current year was some £70 million.

Scientists

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the report of the Whitley council management side working party on recruitment and retention of scientists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I understand that the report of the management side working party on recruitment and retention of scientists is confidential to the management side and will not be published.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish a pay review body for medical scientists working in the National Health Service, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 July 1989]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart) on 24 July at column 536.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve recruitment and retention of biochemists, physicists, other scientists and clinical psychologists in the National Health Service.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve the level of remuneration, recruitment and retention of medical scientists working in the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 July 1989]: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells) on 16 June at columns 101-02.

Mr. Dixon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, following the report of the inquiry on the recruitment and retention of physicists, scientists and clinical psychologists, what steps he intends to take to ensure that National Health Service contracts are attractive to scientist graduates and to put right the erosion in their salaries.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells) on 16 June at columns 101-02.

Skoal Bandits

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce his decision concerning the production and sale of Skoal Bandits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We are considering the detailed and extensive representations we have received on this matter and we will announce a decision as soon as possible.

Hospital Physiotherapists (Pay Settlement)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from what date the pay settlement for hospital physiotherapists runs.

Mr. Mellor: From 1 April.

Solid Radioactive Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the hospitals in the Trent regional health authority which currently store solid radioactive waste on site; and what controls exist for monitoring and ensuring safety.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not available centrally. Hospitals are subject to the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 and guidance on good practice is contained in "Guidance Notes for the Protection of Persons Against Ionising Radiations Arising from Medical and Dental Use" issued in 1988 by the health departments, the National Radiological Protection Board and the Health and Safety Executive.

NHS Staffing

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for the last year for which figures are available the number of nutritionists, physiotherapists, radiographers and chiropodists employed by the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: The information is shown in the table. "Nutritionists" has been interpreted as dietitians.

NHS qualified staff in post at 30 September 1987 England

| | Whole time equivalents[1] |
|---|---|
| Dietitians | 1,140 |
| Physiotherapists[2] | 9,330 |
| Radiographers | 8,250 |
| Chiropodists | 2,640 |

Source: Department of Health (SM13) Annual Census of NHS Non-Medical Manpower.

[1] Figures are independently rounded to the nearest ten (10) whole-time equivalents.

[2] Includes Remedial Gymnasts.

Medical Records

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review advice given to general practitioners concerning the time for which patients' medical records should be kept and the information to be retained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Under present arrangements, doctors are required to keep adequate records of the treatment of their patients for their patients' lifetimes. After this, the records pass to the local family practitioner committee (FPC) where they are retained for a minimum of three further years. We are currently reviewing these arrangements. Any changes need to be considered carefully, not least because of the resource implications for FPCs of storing records for longer periods.

Community Care

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many severely mentally ill patients he expects to be discharged from hospital into the community between now and 1991; what is the current cost of maintaining them in hospital; and what is his estimate of the additional cost of looking after them in the community;

(2) what is his estimate of the additional cost of caring for the severely mentally ill in the community over the cost of caring for them in hospital.

Mr. Freeman: Forecasts of future discharges from hospital of people with a mental illness are not made or collected centrally. The average inpatient cost per day in England for hospitals categorised "mental illness" in 1986-87, the latest year for which information is available, was £44·05 cash, equivalent to £308·35 per week. No comparable information is available centrally about the costs of caring for such patients outside hospital.

Elderly Patients (Collection of Information)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will own the information collected by general practitioners on the lifestyle and relationships of elderly patients, as will be required by paragraph 11 of appendix B of the new contract document; whether family practitioner committees or health authorities will be entitled to have access to this information; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: General practitioners collect and maintain information for the purpose of the treatment and care of their patients. Ownership of such information lies with the relevant family practitioner committee. FPCs will be entitled to have access to this information but, in accordance with the Department's policy on confidentiality of medical records, only in exceptional cases. A health circular and guidance for FPCs on the subject of ownership and confidentiality of data will be issued shortly.

Land Development

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what extent in the proposed land transactions of health authorities with developers to upgrade, purchase and build community facilities for the mentally ill, capital receipts would be offset against regional health authority allocations to district health authorities.

Mr. Freeman: The policy is that district health authorities should benefit from the proceeds of sale of surplus property but the "Handbook on Land Transactions" makes it clear that the closure of hospitals for the mentally ill and mentally handicapped must be preceded by the build-up of comprehensive alternative services covering the whole of the hospital's catchment area. In these cases regional health authorities are required to use their discretion as to the districts which are to benefit from sale proceeds within the general requirement to ensure that the proceeds are specifically used for development of services for the client group concerned.

Social Care

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will make a statement on the distinction between social care and health care as referred to in his statement of 12 July, Official Report, columns 975-79.

Mr. Mellor: In relation to community care, health care involves the investigation, diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation undertaken by a doctor or by other professional staff to whom a doctor has referred the patient. In addition, it includes health promotion and the prevention of ill health.

Social care consists of non-health care and support provided through the supply of goods and services to maintain or establish people in their own homes, or by residential or non-acute nursing home care, as appropriate to individuals' needs.

Health and social care combined form the basis of community care.

Mental Illness (Services)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which bodies and individuals he intends to consult in constructing the substantive statement of good practice regarding the minimum acceptable professional standards for assessing patients prior to discharge, and for follow-up after discharge referred to in his answer of 13 July, to the hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad), Official Report, columns 620-25.

Mr. Freeman: The Royal College of Psychiatrists has been invited to publish a document on good practice for discharge and after-care procedures, following a recommendation (17.24) by the Spokes report (committee of inquiry into the care and after-care of Miss Sharon Campbell), published in July 1988. The college is seeking the views of colleagues in other professions.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which bodies and individuals he will be consulting concerning his consideration of the possibility of proposing new legislation for compulsory treatment in the community referred to in his answer of 13 July to the hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad), Official Report, columns 620-25.

Mr. Freeman: We are awaiting views of the Royal College of Psychiatrists on this issue. If, in the light of the college's views, we believe that it would be appropriate to consider new legislation, we will first consult representatives of health and social services authorities, and other relevant statutory services, appropriate professional associations and voluntary organisations.

Schizophrenia

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will consider urgently the case for specific grant for training social workers and other local authority staffs in the care of people with schizophrenia, in the light of the Spokes report and his statement to the House on 12 July, Official Report, columns 975-79.

Mr. Mellor: Special training arrangements already exist for approved social workers working with mentally ill people under the Mental Health Act 1983. We shall keep under review the need for any further training initiatives for social services staff in the light of the future development of community care services.

Residential Homes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Government accept Sir Roy Griffiths recommendation that residential homes with less than four residents should be subject to regulation and inspection.

Mr. Mellor: As my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State said in his statement in the House on 12 July, the Government have concluded that, for the present, existing statutory functions relating to registration and inspection of residential care and nursing homes should remain unaltered.

Performance Indicators

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what variations in the performance of health authorities the latest set of Health Service indicators shows.

Mr. Freeman: My hon. Friend will be aware that the booklet "Comparing Health Authorities" published by my Department in April 1988, copies of which are in the Library, illustrated wide variations in a number of aspects of performance. I will be placing in the Library tomorrow a copy of some key indicators for 1987-88. These show that variations remain substantial. For example, within England in 1987-88 for general surgery-urology and for all medical specialties, as in earlier years, the average expenditure per cash and average length of stay varied by a factor of about three. The indicators show wide variations in waiting time. For general surgery in some districts no patients had been waiting for more than a year on 31 March 1988 but in others over one third were in this position. Another indicator showing wide variations is the proportion of cases treated as day cases rather than admitted to hospital which ranges from less than 10 per cent. to over 30 per cent. for general surgery-urology and from less than 5 per cent. to over 20 per cent. for general medicine.

Where there is no apparent good clinical explanation for these variations, and in those places where a high cost per case prevails, local management will need to investigate, particularly where other indicators such as waiting times appear to be poor. This critical examination of performance, as a routine part of managing the service, will be particularly important for all those providing, and all authorities purchasing, services if the changes set out in the White Paper are to be fully effective.

Food Imports

51. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to ensure the wholesomeness of imported food.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 18 July at columns 135-36.

Food Businesses (Register)

52. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, whether he will consider the need for a register of food businesses.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Fearn) on 24 July 1989.

NHS Reform

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what pricing policy he expects independent National Health Service hospitals to follow under his proposals in the case of operations for which there are long waiting lists everywhere; and how this will effect the budgets of family doctors.

Mr. Mellor: We expect all hospitals, whether they are self-governing or directly managed by the district health authority, to follow pricing policies which enable them to compete with other hospitals while covering their costs. Length of waiting lists should not have any particular effect on prices, save that for elective treatments district health authorities and GPs with practice budgets will be able to choose from a far wider range of providers than in other cases. Far more significant will be the effect that waiting lists themselves will have on competition between hospitals, since district health authorities and GPs will be seeking to place contracts with those hospitals that offer the best service to patients.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many different standard formats of computerised letters his Department has in response to those raising their concerns about Her Majesty's Government's proposals for the future of the Health Service; and how many in total have been sent out to date.

Mr. Mellor: Many correspondents have raised similar concerns about the proposals and have received similar replies.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of those of the 8,000 representations on the White Paper, "Working for Patients" which do not come from individiuals.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 July 1989]: By far the majority of the responses are from individuals who have questions or concerns about the White Paper. Many of the major organisations responding to the White Paper or the working papers have already made their responses public. For some the responses form the basis of further discussion, which is still continuing. I see no use in combing through the many responses to see which could be usefully placed in the Library and which are already there.

72. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made on the quality initiative proposed in the White Paper, "Working for Patients".

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The chief executive wrote to all health authorities last month to establish a programme for quality improvements. A copy of his letter has been placed in the Library. His letter asked all authorities to establish a framework for broad, unit-based, quality assurance programmes, including provision this year to cover appointment systems, information to patients, and public areas and reception arrangements. £2 million has also been allocated largely for hospital-related medical audit projects, and we hope to announce a number of national quality demonstration projects soon.

AIDS

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the £129·5 million he made available in 1989-90 to the National Health Service for the prevention of HIV infection and the services related to HIV infection and AIDS has been made available to Waltham Forest district health authority; whether any of the money has gone to substantial upgrading of genito-urinary medicine services in Waltham Forest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I am advised that Waltham Forest district health authority received £238,000 from North East Thames regional health authority's allocation of £16,655,000 for the prevention of HIV infection and the services related to HIV infection and AIDS. The district is reviewing the provision of genito-urinary medical services for its resident population which are currently provided by Tower Hamlets and Newham health authorities.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has had from Waltham Forest district health authority to his February letter advising them to provide details of all completed and planned developments in genito-urinary medicine services; when they published the relevant report; if he will make a copy of it available to the hon. Member for Leyton; whether the response is in accord with his comments prioritising such services during the debate on AIDS on 13 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I understand that Waltham Forest district health authority has sent the requested AIDS control report to North East Thames RHA, which is due to submit reports from all districts in the region to the Department at the end of July. A copy of the report can be obtained from the local health authority.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is available to him on the relative efficacy of medicines prescribed to people with AIDS or AIDS-related complex according to whether they are, or are not, able to afford the high protein and calorie diets recommended to them by their doctors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: We are not aware of any scientific information relating the efficacy of drug therapies for AIDS or AIDS-related complex to the consumption of high-protein and calorie diets.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is available to him on the survival rate of people with AIDS or AIDS-related complex, analysed by level of income; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: We do not hold this information.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the average weekly cost of medicines prescribed to people with AIDS or AIDS-related complex.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: People with HIV disease may be treated for a number of different illnesses with a number of different drugs. We do not have information in the Department on all the drugs administered to all people with AIDS or AIDS-related complex and cannot therefore provide an estimate of the average weekly cost per patient.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) to what extent foreign AIDS and drug dependency patients are treated by the Parkside health authority.

(2) why it took Parkside health authority over six weeks to reply to a letter from the hon. Member for Northampton, North, saying that no information was available.

Mr. Mellor: Parkside health authority regrets the delay in replying to my hon. Friend's letter of 25 May which was occasioned by the need to check a number of potential sources of information within the authority. Information of this kind on patients' nationalities is not held centrally and could be extracted clerically from individual records only at disproportionate expense.

Intra-uterine Device

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the local research ethics committee, including its composition, which approved the trial of the copper intra-uterine contraceptive device on patients in the United Kingdom for experimental purposes; what consideration it gave to the fact that the device had not been approved by the relevant authorities in the United States at that time and to notifying the patients that they were being used for experimental test purposes; and what steps he has taken to avoid United Kingdom patients being unknowingly tested by foreign drug companies occurring again.

Mr. Mellor: Information about particular local research ethics committees is not held centrally.

With regard to the testing of medical products and the conditions under which they are administered to patients, I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Ms. Ruddock) at column 542 on 29 June.

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints of infertility in women who have used the Copper 7 intra-uterine contraceptive device have been reported to his Department; and when the device was approved by the Department for use.

Mr. Freeman: In 20 letters received by the Department, women have expressed the belief that they have been adversely affected by the device, known in this country as the Gravigard. However infertility is not specified either in these individual cases, or in reports received under the scheme whereby doctors are asked to notify suspected adverse reactions.

The Gravigard's product licence was granted on 17 December 1973 and took effect retrospectively from 7 November 1973.

Audiology Students

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will undertake an urgent review of the grading of audiology students.

Mr. Mellor: I presume that the hon. Member refers to student physiological measurement technicians specialising in audiology. This is a matter for the professional and technical staffs B Whitley Council. Negotiations are taking place on proposals to introduce a new pay and grade structure for this and other groups of technical staff.

Hearing Aids

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken, or proposes to take, in relation to the proposals on the provision of hearing aids advanced by the hon. Member for Torridge and Devon, West on 23 March, Official Report, columns 1299-1303.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what consideration he is giving to developing innovative pilot projects in community delivery of hearing aids;

(2) what plans he has to reduce the time taken to obtain a National Health Service hearing aid;

(3) what steps he is taking to improve the take-up and use of National Health Service hearing aids;

(4) what steps he is taking to make hearing aid services more accessible, particularly to elderly people and to people living in residential homes;

(5) when he intends to respond to the Royal National Institute for the Deaf's fair hearing campaign; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rosie Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance his Department has issued on the direct referral of patients needing hearing aids to hearing aid centres; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has for the improvement of National Health Service hearing aid services; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what research his Department has conducted into the average waiting time for the testing and fitting of a hearing aid;

(4) what response his Department has made to the Royal National Institute for the Deaf document, "Hearing Aids—the Case for Change";

(5) whether he will take steps to increase the choice of hearing aids available on the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: I am very grateful to the Royal National Institute for the Deaf for bringing public attention to the difficulties which some people face in obtaining a hearing aid. There is a broad measure of agreement for the idea of making hearing tests and the supply of hearing aids more accessible to people in the community and I am pleased to be able to announce a number of measures towards this end.

First, Sir Donald Wilson, chairman of Mersey regional health authority, which acts as the centre of responsibility for the procurement and distribution of hearing aids in the National Health Service, is meeting representatives of hearing aid manufacturers today to discuss ways of increasing the number of commercial hearing aids and accessories which are supplied to patients by National Health Service audiology departments in addition to the standard National Health Service range of hearing aids. We will also be considering in the Department ways of enabling patients requiring hearing aids to obtain them more easily. We expect to begin consultations in the autumn.

Secondly, I have asked my officials with the help of appropriate outside expert advice to draw up and consult interested bodies on a programme of action commencing in the new financial year to expand the number of direct referral schemes and set up a mechanism to evaluate them to ensure that they are operating with appropriate safeguards and are effective in reducing waiting times. Direct referral schemes would entail National Health Service patients being referred by their GPs direct to the audiology service for a hearing test and dispensing of hearing aids rather than going via hospital-based consultants.

Thirdly, my officials are currently involved in the development of a national vocational qualification in audiology. I have asked them to begin discussions in the autumn with professional bodies and other interested parties to examine the scope for a greater measure of integration between the service provided by National Health Service audiologists and that provided by private hearing aid dispensers.

I expect that these measures, together with the impact of the new Hearing Aid Council Act, which received Royal Assent earlier this month, will result in a substantial measure of improvement in service and greater choice for people who have a hearing impairment.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made by his Department of the likely impact of the forthcoming demographic changes in demand for hearing aid services.

Mr. Freeman: The Institute for Hearing Research has produced figures which suggest that the prevalence of hearing loss is greater in people aged 60 and over. However, not all of these people require hearing aids.

King Edward VII Hospital, Windsor

Dr. Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will ensure that the acute services available at King Edward VII hospital, Windsor, are not reduced to the extent that constituents will be deprived of any local hospital and compelled to rely on facilities for which adequate public transport is not available.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that East Berkshire health authority will soon be starting formal public consultation on its proposals to rationalise the provision of acute services within its district. The matter may in due course be referred to Ministers for a final decision and it is therefore inappropriate for me to make any comment at this stage.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions, including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many were affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The information is in the table. For Sessions earlier than 1988-89 the figures are only those statuory instruments issued by the Department of Health and Social Security which relate to health matters.

| Session | Affirmative instruments | Negative instruments |
|---|---|---|

Rubella

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many rubella-handicapped adults are estimated to live in England and Wales.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not collected centrally. SENSE, the National Deaf-Blind and Rubella Association, estimates that in 1965, during the last major rubella epidemic and, before rubella vaccine was introduced, about 1,000 babies were born in the United Kingdom with congenital rubella syndrome. Since the introduction of vaccine, numbers of such births have fallen to approximately 20 per year.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase funding made available to the National Rubella Council to encourage its work in preventing children being born handicapped by congenital rubella syndrome.

Mr. Freeman: Officials will be touch shortly with the council about its section 64 grant for 1989-90 and 1990-91. In addition, there will be further discussions with the council about support for the specific publicity proposals which it has put forward.

Vaccine (Ethnic Minorities)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the uptake of the mumps, measles and rubella vaccine amongst ethnic minority groups.

Mr. Freeman: Leaflets in several ethnic languages were produced jointly by the Health Education Authority (HEA) and the Department of Health as part of the programme to launch MMR immunisation last October, and discussions between the HEA and the Department on future activity will include the need for information aimed at ethnic minority groups.

General Practitioners (Contract)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next plans to meet the General Medical Services Committee to discuss changes to the new contract for general practitioners in the light of the completion of the general practitioners' referendum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: At their request I met the negotiators of the General Medical Services Committee on Monday 24 July. I made it clear that I would have preferred an agreed basis for the new contract and that I had all along made considerable efforts to achieve an agreed solution. The discussions satisfied me that there was no sensible basis on which anyone could now reasonably expect to reopen the issues agreed with them on 4 May. I believe the contract agreed on 4 May to be in the best interests of all patients, as it will improve the standard of care they can expect to receive. I did agree, at the negotiators' request, to extend the deadline for the formal response to the draft regulations to 15 August. I have no present plans for another meeting.

Blood Donations

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many donations of blood were (a) used in the National Health Service and (b) transferred to the private sector in each of the years 1978 to 1988.

Mr. Freeman: I shall write to the hon. Member with such information as is available as soon as possible.

Salmonella

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the illnesses, deaths, cause, source, locations and time period of the recent outbreak of salmonella poisoning in north Derbyshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that during May of this year 61 cases of salmonella typhimurium were recorded in north Derbyshire and neighbouring districts. Pork products were definitely implicated in at least 27 of the cases. The organism was identified in four people who died. Its contribution as a factor in their deaths forms part of the coroners' investigations, which are not yet complete. The outbreak has been fully investigated and appropriate action taken.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of cases of Alzheimer's disease in each health authority area in England in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: The table shows admissions to NHS mental illness hospitals and units in each regional health authority in England for the years 1981 to 1986 with a main diagnosis of presenile or senile dementia (ICD 290.0, 290.1, 290.2, 290.3). Alzheimer's disease is included under these diagnosis. The admission figures may be greater than the number of patients treated, as a patient can be discharged and readmitted more than once during the year. Not all cases of Alzheimer's disease will be admitted to hospital. Additional information is not available centrally or could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Contraception (Children)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any information concerning the numbers of children aged under 16 years who were given contraceptive drugs and devices by family planning clinics and the Brook Advisory Service in the last 12 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: The available information relates to the number of clients seen rather than to the outcome of the consultation. In 1987-88 15,600 young people aged under 16 were seen at community and hospital family planning clinics in England. This figure includes those seen by Brook centres providing services on an agency basis for health authorities.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any information concerning the numbers of prescriptions for contraceptive drugs and devices which were issued to children aged under 16 years in the last 12 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not available centrally.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent steps he has taken to ensure that his guidelines for National Health Service doctors on the issuing of contraceptives to children aged under 16 years without parental knowledge are also followed by the personnel of the Brook Advisory Service and the Family Planning Association.

Mr. Freeman: Voluntary organisations in the family planning field have copies of the guidance issued in March 1986 and I have no reason to believe that the guidance is not being followed.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has given any recent guidance to doctors about the action which they should take when approached by children under the age of 16 years who are the victims on incest and who are seeking contraceptives or abortions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No guidance on this specific point has been issued recently.

Hospitals (Self-governing Status)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names and status of the sponsors of each of the expressions of interest in self-governing status.

Mr. Mellor: We have now moved forward in examining, with the health authorities concerned, the expressions of interests originally submitted to the Department. We see no good purpose in publishing a list which can change from day to day.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the timetable for the preparation of prospectus documents and business plans for self-governing hospitals.

Mr. Mellor: We will be issuing guidance in due course.

59. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made with regard to allowing self-governing status to hospitals.

Mr. Mellor *[holding answer 25 July 1989]:*I refer my hon. Friend to my response today to my hon. Friend, the Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Arbuthnot).

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will deposit in the Library a copy of each of the submissions expressing interest in hospital self-governing status.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: No. Expressions of interest are not formal applications. When applications are prepared RHAs will seek the views of those with an interest.

Food Safety

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health at what intervals the public health laboratory service central laboratory at Colindale collates regular reports of food contamination from regional laboratories.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 July 1989]: Reports of contaminated food of public health significance are sent to the Communicable Diseases Surveillance Centre (CDSC) on a weekly basis. In the event of an unusual occurrence, PHLS headquarters and CDSC are immediately informed so that appropriate investigations can be instituted and advice given.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of listeria contamination in imported paté have been confirmed by the public health laboratory centre in England and Wales; and if he will list the circumstances under which samples were taken and the outlets involved, by county.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 July 1989]: The results of surveys of paté made by the PHLS, at present available, are that the PHLS Cardiff laboratory examined 73 samples of paté and 37 contained listeria. Of these, 59 samples were produced in Belgium and 32 were positive. In a continuing study in Cardiff further samples have been examined, and positive results obtained, from a variety of retail outlets. A larger national survey is currently in progress.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish details of codes of practice under which the public health laboratory service conducts routine tests on samples submitted to it for analysis as suspected cases of food poisoning.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 July 1989]: Each PHLS laboratory has its own procedures, adapted to local circumstances, based on the standard textbooks. In addition, the PHLS has a set of "Guidelines for the Microbiological Assessment of Foods".

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department assesses to be a potentially inefective dose of listeria.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 July 1989]: In a report "Foodborne Listeriosis" published in 1988, the World Health Organisation concluded that virtually nothing is known about the infectious dose of Listeria monocytogenes in man, nor is there good quantitative information relating to the amount of contaminated foodstuff ingested with the risk of acquiring the disease. It is likely that the infectious dose may be related to host susceptibility hence the early warning to vulnerable groups we issued on 12 July. With present knowledge and experience it is difficult to issue specific guidance on what constitutes a potentially infective dose of listeria.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will instruct the public health laboratory service to conduct tests for listeria during routine examination conducted by them on samples of food submitted by the public health service.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 July 1989]: The type of tests carried out by the PHLS on samples of food taken during routine examination depend upon the type of food and the processing that it has received. It would not be appropriate to examine for listeria in every case. It is a matter for environmental health departments and the PHLS to decide upon the appropriate tests to be conducted according to the circumstances.

Psychiatric Hospitals (Catering Costs)

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the approximate cost of the daily main meal for patients in psychiatric hospitals; and what is the weekly food budget per patient.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The cost of providing daily main meals to hospital patients is not available centrally. The average daily cost of catering for patients in psychiatric hospitals in 1986-87 (England) was £2·53, of which £1·35 related to the costs of provisions. However, this excludes the costs of energy and utilities and accommodation overheads.

Figures for 1987-88 are not yet available.

Source: Costing returns submitted to the Department by health authorities.

Prescriptions

50. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest figure he has for the total cost of drugs prescribed by general practitioners.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The total cost of the drugs, dressings and appliances dispensed to patients in England in 1988, including prescriptions personally administered to patients by their GP, was £2·219 million. This compares with £1,770 million in 1986.

District Health Authorities

53. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the chairmen of district health authorities; and what was discussed.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: We do not have formal meetings with all 190 district chairmen at any one time. However we regularly meet chairmen on an individual and group basis to discuss a wide range of issues.

Creches

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to encourage health authorities to establish workplace creches and similar incentives further to encourage the return of mothers into the health and caring professions.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: Mothers returning to work have a major contribution to make to staffing the NHS and other caring professions over the next decade. We fully recognise the value of workplace nurseries in attracting and retaining their services. In March this year we introduced a new collaborative venture between the Health Service and the Midland bank to set up and share creche facilities for staff throughout the country. I understand that the scheme has been well received by health authorities and that a number are discussing specific plans with the bank. The national steering group on equal opportunities for women in the NHS has produced a report and a guidance manual which we commended to all health authorities in April. They give detailed guidance on the implementation of workbreak schemes, including child-minding facilities. In addition, the NHS training authority is developing a "return and retain" scheme for staff wishing to take career breaks.

Decisions about the implementation of such schemes are for individual employing authorities. But we take every opportunity to emphasise that there must be improvements and greater flexibility in working practices and recruitment and retention policies to counteract the substantial drop in the number of young people coming on to the labour market in the 1990s, as well as to provide worthwhile job and career opportunities for returning mothers and, for those who are professionally qualified, to secure the best investment from their professional training.

Hospital Physicists

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy fully to fund any pay settlement negotiated by the employers with hospital physicists during the current year.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: No. Health authorities are expected to meet all costs, including Whitley pay settlements, from their allocations.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set up a pay review board for hospital physicists.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart) on 24 July at column 536.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the salary scales for each of the last five years for hospital physicists.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the Hospital Physicists Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: Neither my right hon. and learned Friend nor I has met the Hospital Physicists Association.

Minor Operations

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of minor operations being carried out in general practitioners' surgeries within the areas of the five family practitioner committees in west Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: We do not hold this information.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is made available to those general practitioners who wish to carry out minor operations in their own surgeries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: It is the responsibility of the medical profession to provide such training as is necessary for the provision of general medical services. We are currently discussing the training implications of the GPs' new contract with interested educationists. No decisions have yet been made.

Griffiths Report

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on proposals for implementation of the Griffiths report.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 July 1989]: As yet we have received only a few representations on our proposals for community care set out in the statement made by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health on 12 July. These and other representations will be taken into account in our preparations for the White Paper.

Fair Hearing Campaign

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the Royal National Institute for the Deaf to discuss the fair hearing campaign; if he has any plans to review the provision of National Health Service hearing aids; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 July 1989]: We are currently considering our response to the Royal National Institute for the Deaf's Fair hearing campaign, and will make an announcement in due course.

Breast Cancer (Screening)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by district authority the percentage of women in the relevant age group who have so far responded to the national programme for screening for breast cancer.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 July 1989]: Statistics from the breast screening centres will not be available centrally until towards the end of 1990 following the receipt of Korner forms KC62 and KC63 ("Adult Screening Programme: Breast Cancer Screening") by the Department.

Acceptance rates of over 70 per cent. of the women called for screening were, however, reported informally last year by over half the first screening centres.

Nurses (Grading Appeals)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State (1) how many nurses have been awarded a higher grade following an appeal to district or regional authorities; and what percentage this represents of all appeals heard to date;

(2) if he will state his latest estimate of (a) the number of appeals by nurses against their new grade awaiting a hearing at regional level and (b) the number of such appeals so far to complete the appeals process at that level.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 July 1989]: We do not collect information centrally concerning the number of appeals to district health authorities. Approximately 2,600 requests for hearings at regional appeals committee level have been lodged to date, and none has yet reached the hearing stage.

Water Supply, North Sheffield

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the incidence of unwholesome water supply in the north Sheffield area; if he will take steps to monitor the incidence of ill-health arising from the supply of the Yorkshire water authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have been asked to reply.

I understand that drinking water from the north Sheffield area is supplied from the Yorkshire grid, from the recently built Langsett treatment works and from the Pennine treatment works. Supplies from the Yorkshire grid and Langsett treatment works are normally of very good quality although there may be occasional breaches of the EC drinking water directive standard for iron. These supplies serve the majority of the people of north Sheffield.

Supplies from the Pennine treatment works, notably Loxley and Ewden, regularly fail to comply with the EC directive standards for manganese and aluminium. These substances affect the appearance of drinking water and are not considered to be a risk to health. Remedial works for both treatment plants are included in the Yorkshire water authority's current capital programme.

Monitoring is already being undertaken nationally by the Communicable Diseases Surveillance Centre.

ENVIRONMENT

Chironomid Larvae

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the presence of chironomid larvae found recently in the water supply emanating from Hampton works; whether there are any dangers to health; whether any pathogenic organisms, including cryptosporidia and aeromonas, could have passed through the works; and what action the communicable disease surveillance centre has taken.

Mr. Howard: Thames Water has informed me that it is satisfied that the chironomid larvae problem is under control. Initially five filters were taken out of supply as a precaution. Three were found not to be the cause of the problem and were returned to service. One of the others was marginally affected. This was drained down, inspected and re-sanded and is shortly to go back into service. The other bed which was most affected is undergoing a thorough structural investigation and will be out of service for some time. The contact tank at the Hampton works was also taken out of use in two stages, was cleaned and is now fully operational.

Thames Water has been monitoring intensively the Hampton works and associated distribution system for pathogenic organisms including cryptosporidium. It did not detect salmonellae, entero-viruses or giardia in any of the samples. Aeromonas, an organism which can colonise slow sand filters, was detected in samples of water leaving the works and in the distribution system. It is commonly found in distribution systems and there is no evidence that when present in water supplies it is detrimental to public health.

Thames Water found that many of the samples of water from the works and the distribution system contained low levels of cryptosporidia. As a precaution the Communicable Diseases Surveillance Centre is monitoring the occurrence of human cases of cryptosporidiosis and giardiasis in the parts of London supplied by the Hampton works in order to detect any significant increase in the number of cases, should this occur. So far no such increase has been detected. Thames Water is continuing to monitor samples of the works inlet and outlet for cryptosporidia.

ERDF Funding (Merseyside)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about ERDF funding for the Merseyside integrated development operation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has received letters from a number of hon. Members representing Merseyside constituencies about the level of ERDF funding which may be allocated to the Merseyside integrated development operation. Firm decisions on the allocation of resources have not yet been made by the European Commission, and the Government will be pressing for the best possible outcome for the United Kingdom as a whole and for Merseyside.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Patten: The number of letters received from right hon. and hon. Members in January was 2,211 and for the whole of this Session up to 1 July the total was 17,991. The number of letters sent to right hon. and hon. Members was 1,802 in January and 15,968 for the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Housing Act 1988 (Grants)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Staffordshire of 26 May, Official Report, column 792, on the subject of grants under section 29 of the Housing Act 1988, what progress has been made and what discussion he has had with (a) the Lichfield district council, (b) the Stafford borough council and (c) the Cannock Chase district council.

Mr. Howard: Twenty-nine local authority cash incentive schemes have now been approved, and others are under consideration. The Department has written to the councils mentioned but none has submitted a scheme for approval.

House Purchase and Sales

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors' working party on ways to simplify the process of buying and selling houses; and whether he will introduce legislation based on the working party's recommendations.

Mr. Chope: The Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors sent copies of the working party's report to my right hon. Friend the Lord Chancellor and my hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Consumer Affairs.

The Government wish the process of house buying and selling to be as simple and fair as possible and are therefore considering the report's recommendations together with other representations on the subject.

Special Waste (Dumping)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many enforcement officers are employed in Surrey to monitor the illegal dumping of special waste.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Surrey county council employs seven full-time inspectors and two part-time prosecuting officers to carry out enforcement responsibilities regarding waste management in its area.

Local Government Finance

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the total sum which will be raised by the community charge in England and Wales in the first year of collection.

Mr. David Hunt: If English local authorities spend in line with the level of total standard spending proposed by my right hon. Friend on 19 July, and given the level of aggregate external finance he proposed, they would need to raise about £9·7 billion from community charges in 1990-91. The equivalent figure for Wales, announced by my right hon. Friend on 20 July, is £376 million. Not all of these sums would come from chargepayers, because of community charge benefit.

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will prepare a leaflet explaining the effect of the community charge upon private tenants and their landlords.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department is preparing such a leaflet, which will cover landlords and tenants in the private, public and housing association sectors. It will be available free of charge later this year.

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the maximum percentage reduction in rates from which business will benefit in 1990-91, following the introduction of the uniform business rate; and whether he will make it his policy that any increase in this percentage figure during the transitional period should not be brought about by penalising those businesses liable to higher rate bills.

Mr. David Hunt: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he plans to issue any guidelines to local authorities in England and Wales in respect of poll tax payments for (a) Royal Navy personnel and (b) merchant seamen;

(2) what guidelines have been issued to local authorities in England and Wales in respect of poll tax payments for Royal Navy personnel and merchant seamen away from home for a period of more than six months, for both householders and non-householders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Guidance on United Kingdom service personnel was included in community charge practice note No. 17 published in April this year. Guidance on questions of sole or main residence was contained in community charge practice No. 9 published last November. Copies of all practice notes are in the Library of the House. It is for community charge registration officers to decide where an individual is solely or mainly resident on the facts of each individual case.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the estimated yield in the current financial year of a business rate for (a) offices, (b) shops, cafes and restaurants, (c) hotels and boarding houses based on the capital value and (d) other business premises equal to, respectively (i) five per cent. in the City of London, (ii) four per cent. in the rest of London, (iii) three per cent. in the metropolitan districts and (iv) two per cent. elsewhere in the United Kingdom, together with his estimate of the yield in 1988-89 under the present arrangement and under the new arrangements.

Mr. David Hunt: The estimated yield in the United Kingdom for 1988-89 from business rates under the present arrangements is as follows:

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| Offices | 1,900 |
| Shops and restaurants | 1,800 |
| Hotels and boarding houses | 150 |
| Other businesses | 4,600 |

The other information requested is not available.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will detail the community charge liability of a carer who resides part-time in his other home and the remainder of the time in the home of the persons being cared for when the homes are in different boroughs; whether he will make the necessary arrangements to ensure that the carer pays only the equivalent of one poll tax however that is distributed between the two boroughs concerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend intends to bring forward regulations providing for a separate class of standard charge property. The new class will include property which is unoccupied as a result of a person receiving care because of illness or infirmity, and will enable relief from the standard charge to be given in respect of such property. The precise details of the relief will be the subject of consultation in due course.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether an individual (i) receiving and (ii) applying for severe disablement allowance will be exempt from the poll tax; whether any doctor can declare a person eligible as required for severe disablement allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Individuals in receipt of severe disablement allowance will be exempt from the personal community charge if they satisfy the definition of severely mentally impaired persons set out in schedule 1 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. Details of the procedure to be followed to qualify for the exemption are set out in practice note 19, copies of which have been available from the Library of the House since 10 May.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each charging authority area, attributing grant income received by precepting authorities under the current grant system to each area in proportion to the aggregate of rateable values in that area (a) the estimated rate support grant for 1989-90, (b) the estimated amount of revenue support grant which would have been payable in 1989-90 under the proposed new grant system, had the system been in its first year of operation in 1989-90 within full safety nets and assuming needs assessment at 1989-90 grant-related expenditure levels, (c) the estimated amount of revenue grant payable in 1989-90 under the proposed new grant system after the end of safety nets and assuming needs assessment at 1989-90 grant-related expenditure levels, (d) the difference between (a) and (b), (e) the difference between (a) and (c), and (f) the difference between (b) and (c), showing aggregates for each figure for each class of charging authority and for each region, showing inner London, outer London and the rest of the south east separately.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 26 July 1989]: A table giving the information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each charging authority area, attributing business rate income received by precepting authorities under the current system to each area in proportion to the aggregate of rateable values in that area (a) the estimated revenue from the non-domestic rate in 1989-90, (b) the estimated amount which would have been raised in revenue by the national non-domestic rate in 1989-90 after the end of transitional arrangements and assuming rateable values at current levels, (c) the amount which would have been paid from the national non-domestic rating pool to each area in 1989-90, (d) the difference between (a) and (b), (e) the difference between (b) and (c) and (f) the difference between (a) and (c) showing aggregates for each figure for each class of charging authority and for each region, showing inner London, outer London and the rest of the south-east separately.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 26 July 1989]: A table giving the information requested has been placed in the Library. For the purpose of illustration, it is assumed that the national non-domestic rate multiplier is set to raise the same level of income as under the present system.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has given to community charge registration officers on possible penalties and actions against individuals for non-payment of the poll tax in England and Wales; and if he will list these.

Mr. David Hunt: Guidance on recovery and enforcement of the community charge has been prepared jointly by the Government and the local authority associations in practice note No. 15 which we intend to distribute to local authorities next week. Copies of the document are available in the Library of the House.

The practice note lists the measures currently available for the enforcement of domestic rates, explains how these are to be applied to community charges, and gives details of additional remedies available to charging authorities through magistrates' courts.

Yorkshire and Humberside (Heritage and Culture)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for further promoting Yorkshire and Humberside heritage and culture.

Mr. David Hunt: We shall continue to promote the conservation, preservation and presentation of the heritage in all regions through funding and support to English Heritage, the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of England, the National Heritage Memorial Fund and a wide range of national and regional voluntary heritage organisations.

Hertfordshire Groundwork Trust

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much grant was paid by the Countryside Commission to the Hertfordshire Groundwork Trust; whether the grant required his approval; and what monitoring of the use made of the grant is undertaken by (a) his Department or (b) the Countryside Commission.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1988-89 the Countryside Commission paid £7,728 to the Hertfordshire Groundwork Trust by way of grants under the provisions of section 9 of the Local Government Act 1974. The grants did not require the approval of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. Applications for grant in the current financial year are still under consideration.

Letting Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of dwellings available for letting in each year since 1970 in the private and public sectors, respectively, in total and as a proportion of the housing stock: if he will give a regional breakdown; and what is his estimate of the proportion in France, Germany and Italy.

Mr. Chope: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Housing Associations

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) houses and (b) flats were built by housing associations in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Chope: It is estimated that in 1988 housing associations completed 1,900 new houses and 7,200 new flats.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sheltered and very sheltered housing units were started and completed in the last financial year by (a) the public sector, (b) housing associations and (c) the private sector other than housing associations.

Mr. Chope: Numbers of new sheltered dwellings started and completed by sector appear in table 1.5 of "Housing and Construction Statistics part 1, No. 37", a copy of which is in the Library. Information about very sheltered housing is not available.

Housing (Young People)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many single person flats suitable for young adults were built in the last financial year in (a) the public, (b) the private and (c) housing association sectors; and what information he has on the availability of such accommodation nationally and regionally.

Mr. Chope: Housebuilding statistics are not classified in this way. However, regional and national estimates of completions of new one-bedroom flats appear in table 6.8(a) of "Housing and Construction Statistics 1977-1987". For recent quarters, the percentages of new flats with one bedroom (excluding housing association completions) appear in table 1.6 of the quarterly publication "Housing and Construction Statistics. Part 1, No. 37". Copies of both publications are in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is considering legislation to place a responsibility on local authorities to house single young persons, and to make adequate resources available to local authorities for the new build required.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is reviewing the homelessness legislation and hopes to announce conclusions soon.

Housing (Capital Resources)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will give an account of capital resources available to the Yorkshire and Humberside region from the Government for housing purposes for each year from 1979 to 1989;

(2) if he will give an account of capital resources available to Wakefield metropolitan district council, from the Government for housing purposes for each year from 1979 to 1989.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is listed in the table. Since 1981-82 local authorities have been able to supplement their allocations by expenditure financed by capital receipts. Nationally, two thirds of local authorities' spending power on housing in 1989-90 is expected to come from capital receipts.

Winget Houses

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in establishing an agreed method of repair for Winget-type houses.

Mr. Chope: None. Under the housing defects legislation, if reinstatement is not likely to be economic or feasible, assistance will be by repurchase.

Housing Improvement Grant

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies he has carried out on the cost-effectiveness of (a) means-testing of individual applicants for housing improvement grants and (b) the present system of block grants.

Mr. Chope: Provision has been made in the Department's research programme to monitor the effectiveness of both means-tested renovation grants and block repair schemes.

Water Disconnections

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of disconnections for non-payment in the year to April 1989 for each of the water authorities and statutory water companies in England and Wales.

Mr. Howard: The information requested by my hon. Friend regarding the English water authorities and statutory water companies is contained in the following table. Any request for information on the Welsh water authority, the Chester waterworks company and the Wrexham and East Denbighshire water company should be adressed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Environmental Assessments

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what information, including baseline data, other than that submitted by the developer he has when determining whether environmental assessment is required; and if he will make public all the information used in determining whether or not environmental assessment is required for schedule 2 projects;

(2) what matters other than those referred to in general terms in paragraphs 18-29 and appendix A of circular 15/88 have been taken into account when determining whether environmental assessment is required for schedule 2 projects; and if he will give details of variations and the reasons therefore;

(3) what variations there have been, and on what basis, in adherence to the numerical criteria and thresholds in appendix A of circular 15/88 when directing whether environmental assessment is required.

Mr. Moynihan: Environmental assessment is required for any projects of the types listed in schedule 2 to the Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988 which are likely to have significant environmental effects. Whether or not any particular project is likely to have significant effects so that environmental assessment is required is a matter of judgment from case to case. In exercising that judgment for the purpose of directing whether or not environmental assessment is required for any particular case the Secretary of State takes account of relevant information in his possession about the nature, size and location of the project and will if appropriate seek further information from the developer, the local planning authority or others with information in their possession. The Secretary of State has regard to the general guidance in DoE circular 15/88. That guidance, however, is indicative in nature and does not obviate the need for a judgment to be made in each case. The guidance in circular 15/88 will be amended or augmented from time to time in the light of the decisions which have been made. However, such amendment has not been necessary so far.

Compulsory Purchase Payments

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he will extend entitlement to farm loss payments to those displaced from only part of a holding; and whether he proposes to give effect to the proposals relating to farm loss payments in the Green Paper, "Land Compensation and Compulsory Purchase Legislation", dated March 1989;

(2) whether he will introduce an additional allowance payable when land is compulsorily purchased to compensate for the factor of compulsion, as proposed by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors;

(3) whether he will introduce legislation in the next parliamentary Session to simplify and strengthen the compensation code for compulsory acquisition.

Mr. Moynihan: We are at present considering the responses to the consultation paper on land compensation and compulsory purchase legislation dated 7 March 1987 with a view to introducing legislation as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits. In this context we are also considering the recommendations in the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors' memorandum on compensation for compulsory acquisition, including its proposal for an additional allowance to compensate for the factor of compulsion.

Clearance (Market Value)

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will give effect to the proposal in the Green Paper, "Home Improvement—A New Approach", dated May 1985, that the arrangements for compensating those affected by clearance should be simplified and in future that all owners will be entitled to market value as of right.

Mr. Chope: Part IV of schedule 8 to the Local Government and Housing Bill contains provisions repealing the existing measures relating to compensation for unfit housing which is compulsorily acquired. The effect of this is that compensation for housing in clearance areas will be assessed in the same way as for any other compulsory acquistion, and owners will qualify for market value compensation.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for each of the last five parliamentary Sessions including the 1988-89 Session, if he will list the number of Statutory Instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: The following is the information requested by the hon. Member as to the number of statutory instruments issued by my Department:

| Parliamentary session | Number issued | Negative | Affirmative |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1984-85(6 November 1984 to 30 October 1985) | 186 | 85 | 5 |
| 1985-866 November 1985 to 7 November 1986) | 159 | 94 | 8 |
| 1986-87(12 November 1986 to 15 May 1987) | 82 | 46 | 4 |
| 1987-88(25 June 1987 to 15 November 1988) | 131 | 90 | 10 |
| 1988-89(22 November 1988 to date) | 130 | 87 | 6 |

Note:
In each case the balance represents those instruments, chiefly orders changing parish boundaries, which are subject neither to the affirmative nor to the negative procedure.

Pollution

Mr. Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the appeals under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 currently under consideration by his Department; and if he will indicate the dates such appeals were first lodged and indicate when decisions will be reached.

Mrs Virginia Bottomley: Following is the list of appeals currently under consideration showing the dates they were first lodged. Decisions are issued as quickly as possible bearing in mind the detailed technical nature of the issues involved, the need for full information and to provide for exchange of representations between the parties.

Ministerial Cars (Washing)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent instructions have been given about the washing of ministerial cars; how many and which have been washed since his appeal to car owners to desist from washing their cars; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Washing of Ministers' cars ceased from midday on 24 July.

The ban will stay in force until the London water shortage eases, except in circumstances where the safety of the vehicle would be adversely affeced.

Shooting Rights

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has forbidden the Nature Conservancy Council from (a) acquiring shooting rights in the process of setting up nature reserves, and (b) giving grants to other bodies for purchasing lands which carry the shooting rights; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In considering land purchase proposals whether from themselves or by grant aid to NGOs, the NCC and the Government are agreed that traditional rights over uses of the land should be interfered with only when that use is incompatible with the interests of conservation.

African Elephants

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to offer compensation and assistance to those east African countries which approve the transfer of African elephants to appendix I of CITES; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We do not propose to consider offering compensation to East African countries which support the transfer of the African elephant to appendix I of CITES. Elephants can be of greater financial value to these countries as living tourist attractions than when killed for their ivory. We remain ready to discuss with African Governments further ways of helping them to conserve their wildlife resources, including elephants.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations have been received from ivory dealers in Hong Kong relating to the timetable for transfer of African elephants to appendix I of CITES; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government have received several letters from representatives of the Hong Kong ivory trade about the implications of the proposal to transfer the African elephant to Appendix I of CITES. These issues will be considered by the forthcoming conference of the parties to CITES.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will announce the outcome of his consultations on his proposal to establish a London pensions fund.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend has now considered all the representations made on his proposal to transfer the superannuation fund and associated functions, rights and liabilities which the London residuary body (LRB) inherited on the abolition of the former Greater London council to a new corporate body, the London pensions fund, on 1 April 1990.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has decided, in the light of these consultations, to lay before Paliament an order providing for the establishment of the new London pensions fund, a corporate body with a membership of between seven and 11 members appointed by him. As previously proposed it would have an independent chairman with the remaining board members being drawn equally from London local government and independent sources. The London local authorities via their associations are being invited to put forward recommendations for the initial board appointments from London local government and to establish a voluntary consultative committee which my right hon. Friend might consult over future appointments to the board. The proposal to retain existing ILEA contributors in the fund has also been preserved.

It is intended that the LPF should come into corporate existence on 31 October 1989, to allow time for it to prepare for its new responsibilities, and my right hon. Friend will shortly be consulting the London boroughs, including the City, and other interested parties on the text of the draft order.

Audit Commission

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes are proposed to the structure of the Audit Commission and the procedures for appointing commissioners when the remit of the Commission is extended to the Health Service.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government propose to increase the size of the Commission from 13 to 17 members to 15 to 20 members when its remit is extended to the Health Service. All members, including the chairman and deputy chairman, would be appointed jointly by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and me. It is also intended to amend the existing statutory requirement to provide that in future we should be required before making an appointment to consult such persons and bodies as we think fit. We would of course, continue to consult the local authority associations, the accountancy bodies, the CBI and the TUC, as now. The Government intend to seek the necessary statutory provision for these changes in the proposed legislation on the reform of the Health Service.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has completed his consideration of the representations received in response to the consultation paper issued on 15 February on the Government's proposed transitional arrangements for the new uniform business rate; whether he has any further information about the likely effects of the 1990 revaluation of business properties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I received some 150 initial responses to the consultation paper and further representations from all the major business organisations. We have considered them carefully, and have decided to make a number of modifications to the proposed transitional arrangements.

We believe that our proposals achieve a satisfactory balance in the transitional period, with long overdue reductions in rates being realised as quickly as is consistent with the need to provide adequate protection for businesses which must bear increases. We intend therefore to proceed with our proposals to limit the year-on-year changes resulting from the introduction of the uniform business rate and the non-domestic revaluation. For businesses which in 1990-91 will have larger bills in real terms than in 1989-90, the ceiling will be 20 per cent. in real terms for larger businesses and 15 per cent. for smaller ones as we proposed. But, in the light of representations received, we have concluded that the threshold of rateable value below which this lower ceiling will apply should be doubled to £15,000 in London and £10,000 elsewhere. For businesses which in 1990-91 will have smaller bills in real terms than in 1989-90, we estimate that the annual limits on reductions will be about 15 per cent. for businesses with rateable values below the revised threshold and about 10 per cent. for those with rateable values above the revised threshold. The precise figures for reductions will be calculated, once we have fuller information about the revaluation being undertaken by the Inland Revenue valuation office, so as to allow the limits to be set as high as possible consistent with the requirement that reductions must balance the cost of protection for those facing increases, so that the total yield of rates from the private sector and the nationalised industries remains broadly the same in real terms. Over 75 per cent. of all businesses will benefit from the more generous rateable value threshold. At the same time, we propose to raise the de minimis threshold, below which transitional arrangements will not apply, from a new rateable value of £200 to £500 for all properties, except for advertising hereditaments which will not be subject to any limit.

As proposed, properties first occupied after 1 April 1990 will not benefit from the transitional arrangements. Furthermore, for consistency with these proposals generally, we have decided that transitional protection for those facing increases should apply only to those who occupy property as at 31 March 1990 and continue to do so after that date. If a property changes hands on or after 1 April 1990, the new occupier will pay any increase due in full.

Reduction in rate bills will continue to be subject to annual limits, however, whether or not there is a change of occupier.

We propose to give effect to the transitional arrangements by way of legislative amendments which will be introduced into the Local Government and Housing Bill after the recess.

I am also placing in the Library today a copy of the latest sample survey by the Inland Revenue of the combined effects of the 1990 revaluation and the introduction of a uniform business rate. This incorporates the results of a large number of actual revaluations. In general the survey confirms the results published with the consultation paper on 15 February. The new sample suggests that on average values after revaluation will be 7·7 times the current average rateable value for non-domestic properties in England, and 7·8 times in Wales; that the poundage, in 1989-90 prices, is expected to be in the range of 32 to 36p in England, compared with a locally set average poundage of some 258p in 1989-90, and in the range 34 to 38p in Wales compared with an average 1989-90 poundage of around 283p; and that the new arrangements, once the transition is complete, will reduce the rate burden or businesses in the north and midlands by about £1 billion.

Limestone Mines

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the second report of the black country limestone advisory panel on "A Strategy for Limestone Mines"; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: I have considered the second report of the black country limestone advisory panel and have taken into account the views expressed by the local authorities in the black country and Shropshire and by private sector financial institutions. Earlier this year my hon. Friend the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Mr. Trippier), met the chairman and members of the panel to discuss the issues raised by this report.

The Government welcome and endorse the strategy as proposed by the panel. They agree that overall priority should be given to action to protect public safety and that the protection of existing property and the potential for new development or re-development are important considerations. To that end, they will continue to give high priority to funding investigations of the limestone mines and to remedial action where it is appropriate and represents value for money. Over £20 million has already been spent under the derelict land grant provisions and a further £6 million will be spent in 1989-90.

I understand that the first two targets established by the panel, for completion of initial desk appraisals and of investigations to establish the physical condition of a mine, are well on the way to being met. Only at the completion of these stages can the implications of the limestone problems be understood in their entirety and only then can a definitive programme of action to resolve the problems be established. I am, therefore, asking the panel to keep me informed on a regular basis on progress with investigations and proposals for remedial action so that the programme can be kept under review.

It is important to recognise, however, that the amounts of money involved, while they cannot as yet be precisely defined, are substantial. The timetable proposed by the panel may therefore need to be extended in view of the many competing demands for the limited resources which are available. It must also be recognised that it will not be possible to treat every individual mine immediately the need for treatment is identified. Following the panel's strategy, however, would enable all concerned to know what action would be taken, how priorities would be assessed and when they could expect the problems to be resolved. This should assist in removing a great deal of the uncertainty which has existed to date.

Given these constraints, it would seem reasonable to suggest that it should be possible to resolve the bulk of the limestone problems in the west midlands by the middle to late 1990s.

However, resolution of the problems does not necessarily mean complete in-filling of every mine, as has been recognised by the panel in its report. There may well be cases where the most cost-effective solution will be to repair any damage caused by subsidence as and when it occurs. In such cases, the Government would look to both local authorities and the private sector to work together with central Government as outlined in the Secretary of State's response to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Aldridge-Brownhills (Mr. Shepherd) of 6 April 1987. I believe that such a co-operative response, taken with the Government's endorsement of the panel's strategy, should go a long way in restoring confidence in the area and relieving the understandable concern that has arisen due to the presence of old limestone mine workings and the threat of subsidence that they pose.

Maidenhead Sewage Plant (Discharges)

Dr. Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to ensure that the relaxation of standards for discharged effluent, proposed by Thames water authority, for the Maidenhead sewage plant, is adequate in terms of public health standards; and how long he anticipates this temporary relaxation will continue before being replaced by permanent measures.

Mr. Howard: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. J. A. Reeves

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ensure that an urgent reply is given to the letter of 24 July from the hon. Member for Broxbourne concerning the future pension of Mr. J. A. Reeves, an employee of Thames water authority.

Mr. Howard: I will write to my hon. Friend.

London Residuary Body (Properties)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the 65 applications by the London residuary body to his Department for consent to dispose of properties by means of voluntary sales to licensee occupiers at discounted prices.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Nature Reserve (Sheffield)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the proposals by the Yorkshire water authority (a) to create a nature reserve at Blackburn meadows in Sheffield and (b) to do this through specified leasing arrangements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Asset Sales

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements exist for the public to inspect details of asset sales by the residuary bodies.

Mr. David Hunt: Section 79 of the Local Government Act 1985 provides for local electors to inspect residuary bodies' accounts and documents relating to them. Details of individual sale transactions are, however, matters for the vendor and purchaser and therefore commercially confidential.

Broadwater Lake, Harefield

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department has concerning any undertakings given by those concerned when gravel was extracted from what is now known as Broadwater lake, Harefield, in the London borough of Hillingdon, concerning its refilling and re-instatement as agricultural land; what representations he has received to the effect that the lake should not now be refilled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 26 July 1989]: A condition attached to the planning permission requires the site to be refilled. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received representations from my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge about a change in the restoration proposals for the site. The enforcement or modification of conditions attached to a planning permission is, in the first instance, a matter for the local planning authority's consideration.

Sports and Leisure Facilities

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list in the Official Report the individuals and organisations who have responded to the draft order on the Local Government Act 1988 (Competition in Sports and Leisure Facilities); and if he will place copies of responses in the Library;

(2) when he will lay before Parliament the Local Government Act 1988 (Competition in Sports and Leisure Facilities) Order; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 26 July 1989]: The Local Government (Competition in Sports and Leisure Facilities) Order will be laid later this year. ### Tenants' Choice

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) private landlords, (b) housing associations and (c) tenants' organisations have applied for registration under the tenants' choice provisions of the Housing Act 1988 in the Greater London area; and how many in each category have been approved.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 26 July 1989]: The Housing Corporation has the responsibility to consider applications for tenants' choice landlord approval. I have asked the corporation to reply to the hon. Member.

Valuation and Community Charge Tribunals

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will change the title of the Manchester North and Manchester South valuation and community charge tribunals as suggested in resolutions from the inaugural meetings of those bodies.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 26 July 1989]: No.

City Grants

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the value of city grants made to authorities in the Yorkshire and Humberside region and outline their applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 26 July 1989]: Eight city grants totalling just over £2 million have been approved for developers undertaking projects within the Yorkshire and Humberside region. The projects will make an important contribution to the economies of the local authorities in which they are located by providing jobs, houses, offices and retail and industrial units.

Bitumen Emulsifiers

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest estimate of hydrocarbons that evaporate from bitumen emulsifiers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 26 July 1989]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to his question yesterday.

Building Contracts

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has been consulted over the development of model fair deal contracts between customers and contractors for building work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: This is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading; I shall ask him to write to my hon. Friend.

High Folds, Leigh (Land Reclamation)

Mr. Terry Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total contribution from European Economic Community sources to the High Folds, Leigh land reclamation scheme.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 24 July 1989]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is not aware of any contributions having been made from the European regional development fund for the High Folds land reclamation scheme at Leigh.

Cash Incentive Schemes

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to answer the letter from the London borough of Croydon dated 23 May on the subject of cash incentive schemes under the Housing Act 1988.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 17 July 1989]: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if there are any plans to introduce legislation to reduce $CO_2$ emissions from vehicles; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 24 July 1989]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by the then Minister for Roads and Traffic in reply to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Mrs. Ruddock) on 29 June 1989 at col. 132.

Housing Action Trust, Southwark

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who will be entitled to vote in any ballot on the creation of a housing action trust in Southwark.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to the reply, 20 July 1989, c. 338]: The Housing Act 1988 makes each secure tenant, including each joint tenant, eligible for a vote in a ballot or poll on a proposal to designate an area as a HAT area. Regulations have today been laid before Parliament prescribing certain additional categories of local authority tenants of houses or flats who would be entitled to vote. These additional categories are long leaseholders, business tenants, tenants of licensed premises and tenants in tied accommodation. Joint tenants would each be entitled to their own vote.

Rate Support (Warwickshire)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the amount of rate support paid by Warwickshire to assist other areas in each year since 1979; and if he will express this in a constituency form.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 6 July 1989]: The table gives estimates of the amount by which grant for authorities in Warwickshire was affected by resource equalisation in each year from 1981-82 to 1989-90. The introduction of the community charge will end these grant transfers.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Potato Marketing Board

5. Mr. Hind: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to meet the chairman of the Potato Marketing Board to discuss the future of the board; and if he will make a statement.

*11. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the reform of the Potato Marketing Board.

Mr. Gummer: As my right hon. Friend announced on 20 July, the Government have decided to retain the basic elements of the existing potato marketing scheme in view of the need to maintain stability. However consumers and other non-producer interests should be given greater influence in the Potato Marketing Board's market management decisions.

Irradiation of Food

8. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the forthcoming Food Bill will include new powers to regulate the use of food irradiation.

Mr. Gummer: New food legislation to be introduced as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits will include powers to introduce a full licensing system, under central Government control, for the irradiation of foodstuffs.

46. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from interested parties with regard to food irradiation.

Mr. Maclean: My Department has received representations from interested trade and consumer organisations on several aspects of food irradiation. A major concern is that consumers should be in a position to make an informed choice, and we intend to ensure this by instituting an effective system of controls which includes full and clear labelling.

35. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations he has received from producers or consumers of food in favour of food irradiation.

Mr. Maclean: Support has been publicly expressed by the Food and Drink Federation, the Spice Trade Association and the Institute of Cereals Manufacturers. In addition, a number of consumer groups have recognised that, with proper controls, this technology has potential benefits for consumers.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

9. Mr. Day: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether other European Community countries are introducing environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Maclean: Other EC countries are following the United Kingdom's lead in introducing ESA schemes. Germany, the Netherlands and Denmark now have approved areas.

30. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to increase the number of environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Maclean: Having designated 19 ESAs in the United Kingdom there is now a need to examine their impact and value for money. The scheme is to be reviewed in 1991 and future policy will depend on the outcome of this review.

Fishing Vessels

13. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what recent representations he has received regarding the introduction of a decommissioning scheme for fishing vessels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: As has been made clear in the past decommissioning is one of a range of options being considered for reducing the size of our fishing fleet.

Mr. Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on Tuesday, 11 July, Official Report, column 453, he is able to estimate the number of vessels which will be taken from the United Kingdom fishing fleet in each of the years 1989, 1990 and 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: No. The target reductions for multi-annual guidance programme purposes are expressed only in terms of tonnage and engine power. The number of vessels withdrawn will depend on action taken to reduce fleet capacity following our consultations with industry organisations.

Eggs

14. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to increase checks conducted by his Department into imported eggs.

Mr. Maclean: We already inspect a significant proportion of eggs imported to ensure that they comply with the requirements of the egg marketing standards regulations of the European Community.

Forestry Commission

19. Mr. Franks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, when he last met the chairman of the Forestry Commission; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I look forward to meeting the new chairman of the Forestry Commission, whose appointment begins on 1 September, when we both have had a chance to settle into our new posts.

Small Farmers

20. Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had in the Council of Ministers regarding EC schemes for direct income support for small farmers.

21. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's position with regard to direct income support for small farmers.

Mr. Gummer: The Council agreed in January on the main lines of a Community scheme for direct income aid. A regulation came into effect on 1 April establishing a framework under which member states may draw up plans to pay transitional aid to farms affected by the reform of the CAP. Proposals for detailed implementing regulations are now under discussion and need to be agreed before member states may submit new schemes, as required, for approval by the Commission.

I have no plans at present to introduce an income aid scheme.

37. Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, when he last met the chairman of the Small Farmers Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I have not met the chairman of the Small Farmers Association.

Food Labelling

22. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received seeking the introduction of a scheme of food labelling designed to inform consumers of food organically produced or reared and slaughtered under humane conditions.

Mr. Maclean: Initiatives taken within my Department led to the establishment in 1987 of the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards (UKROFS) which, on 2 May, launched detailed production and processing standards, a certification and inspection scheme and a UKROFS symbol and approved labelling to enable consumers to identify organic foods produced according to the standards. I hope that producers will take full advantage of this exciting development so that a much larger share of the rapidly growing consumer demand for such produce is met by home production.

Nitrates

24. Mr. Janman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether farming and environmental organisations received copies of his Department's consultation document on nitrate-sensitive areas.

Mr. Curry: Yes. My Department's consultation document on the nitrate-sensitive areas scheme was circulated to a wide range of interests including farming organisations, the Government's conservation agencies and other environmental bodies.

25. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many replies he has received in response to his Ministry's consultation document on nitrate-sensitive areas.

Mr. Curry: We have received over 100 responses to our consultation document on nitrate-sensitive areas.

Women's Farmers Union

26. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Women's Farmers Union; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I last met the Chairman of the WFU at the recent Festival of Food and Farming and I look forward to meeting her again in the future.

Cereals

27. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the need for further incentives to take land out of cereal production.

Mr. Curry: I have been asked by the President of the National Farmers Union to reconsider the levels of payment for set-aside in the United Kingdom. I have decided to maintain the rates unchanged.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the annual cost to the European Economic Community budget of growing a representative 500 acres of wheat in Norfolk in (i) 1988 and (ii) in the current financial year.

Mr. Curry: Information is not available in the form requested. However, an indication of the average cost of supporting 500 acres of cereals anywhere in the Community can be worked out by dividing the sums in the cereals chapter of the guarantee section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund for 1988 and 1989 by the total cereals area of the Community in 1987-88 and 1988-89 respectively. This gives figures of some £16,800 and some £15,100 for 500 acres of cereals in 1988 and 1989 respectively.

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers claimed in the last cereals year under the small cereals producers aid scheme for a co-responsibility rebate.

Mr. Curry: The present deadline for claims under the small cereals producer aid scheme is 31 July. We do not as yet have a final figure for claims submitted but all the signs are that the figure will be disappointingly low. I am therefore extending the deadline for claims to 30 September so that producers have the maximum opportunity to apply under this scheme.

Country Landowners Association

28. Mr. Latham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the Country Landowners' Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I have met the chairman of the CLA on many occasions in the past and look forward to meeting him again in the future.

Council for the Protection of Rural England

29. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Council for the Protection of Rural England; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Maclean: I have not yet had the opportunity to meet the chairman of the Council for the Protection of Rural England but look forward to doing so at sometime in the future.

Meat Inspection

31. Mr. Archer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has recently discussed with representatives of other EEC countries the consequences for the single market arising from the continued refusal of the Community to recognise the qualification of environmental health inspectors in connection with the inspection of meat.

Mr. Curry: In any discussions on arrangements for meat inspection within the single market, I shall seek to ensure a continuing role for our environmental health officers.

Food Research

32. Mr. Doran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on his Department's support for research for the benefit of food-related industries.

Mr. Curry: My Department commissions research amounting to £16·8 million to support statutory obligations, policy development, the protection of consumers and work specifically directed to the improvement of competitiveness in the food industry. Support for work of direct commercial benefit to the industry will be phased out by the end of 1990-91 as a part of the Government's policy on near market research. This will not affect our commitment to food safety and other work on wider public benefit.

A recent joint MAFF/DTI initiative on food processing sciences was announced in September 1988 as part of the LINK Scheme. £7 million has been allocated by MAFF and by DTI over a five-year period provided that this sum is matched by industrial contributions. This programme will concentrate on projects which will strengthen the industry's technical base in bioscience and encourage strategic developments in new processes, biotechnology and processing modelling and control.

Soft Drinks

33. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has received a copy of the recent London Food Commission report on the fruit juice content of some soft drinks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: This report has recently been brought to the attention of the Department but I have not yet had an opportunity to study it. However, we have already circulated for public comment draft proposals for the revision of the Soft Drink Regulations 1964 which, inter alia would introduce a requirement for the declaration of fruit juice content on the labels of fruit juice based drinks.

Tenant Farmers Association

34. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Tenant Farmers Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I hope to meet the chairman of the Tenant Farmers Association in the near future.

Food Exports

36. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on recent trends in agriculture and food exports.

Mr. Maclean: Over the first five months of 1989, exports of food, feed and other agricultural products reached a record for the period of £1,978 million. This was 19·5 per cent. higher than the same periods of 1988 and 1987 respectively. It should be noted that exports of some basic agricultural products, such as grain, livestock and lightly processed foods, can vary considerably from year to year. But apart from this, exports of more processed food manufactured in the United Kingdom have been growing steadily for a number of years.

Fisheries Ministers

38. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will next attend a meeting of the European Community Council of Fisheries Ministers; and what he expects to discuss.

Mr. Curry: The next Fisheries Council is on 27 November 1989. The agenda has yet to be arranged.

Net Sizes

39. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to give incentives to fishermen to use larger mesh sizes for better conservation.

Mr. Curry: I have no such plans but we are actively considering possible improvements in technical measures to achieve better conservation.

Food Bill

40. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has received representations calling for the registration of food establishments as part of the forthcoming Food Bill.

Mr. Maclean: This is one of the issues on which the Government have been holding extensive consultations as part of our proposed reform of food legislation. We have received a number of representations.

Food Supplies (Dock Strike)

42. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that the public have adequate food supplies during the dockers' strike; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: My Department is monitoring the position closely and maintains regular contact with the food industry.

I am confident that food supplies will not be seriously affected.

Common Agricultural Policy

41. Mr. Butler To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he proposes to take any further steps to combat fraud in the common agricultural policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: We have taken the initiative in the Council of Ministers on many occasions to press for further action to deal with fraud in the common agricultural policy and valuable progress is being made. The Commission has recently presented to the Council proposals to require member states to carry out an annual physical check on intervention stocks and a minimum level of inspections of export refunds, and to tighten up the system of audit checks on firms making or receiving CAP payments. I will continue to press the Council to take speedy action on these proposals.

43. Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of the effect in the current year of the common agricultural policy reforms on intervention stores; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The process of CAP reform has contributed to substantial reductions in intervention stock levels. The latest estimates of stocks held in public stores show that since the beginning of this year stocks of the major commodities have been reduced as follows:

| Commodity | Reduction in stocks ('000 tonnes) | | Reduction as a percentage of stocks at 31 December 1988 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | EC | United Kingdom | EC Per cent. | United Kingdom Per cent. |
| Beef | 59 | 7 | 15 | 28 |
| Olive oil | 105 | — | 30 | — |
| Total cereals | 1,647 | 582 | 18 | 48 |
| Butter | 57 | 12 | 56 | 50 |
| Skimmed milk powder | 0 | [1]— | 0 | [2]— |

[1] Less than 500 tonnes.

[2] United Kingdom SMP stocks at 31 December 1988 were negligible.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, further to his reply dated 25 May, Official Report, column 744, concerning the common agricultural policy, he will explain the reasons for the increase in expenditure in 1988 of over 20 per cent.; and whether this was anticipated at the time of the Fontainebleau agreement.

Mr. Curry: As explained in my previous reply, the 1987 budget year carried only 10 months' expenditure. Because of the change to a system of delayed advances for funding from the guarantee section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund, 4,534 mecu (£3,261 million) of expenditure in November and December 1987 were charged to the 1988 budget. Total CAP expenditure for the 1987 calendar year was therefore 28,497 mecu (£20,418 million)—2 per cent. less in real terms than the expenditure charged to the 1988 budget. It is not possible to compare expenditure in calendar year 1987 with that in calendar year 1988.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table on the same basis as that given in the answer of 4 December 1984, Official Report, columns 105-116, showing for each of the commodities covered by the common agricultural policy (a) the amount currently in surplus, (b) the target/threshold/intervention price in the United Kingdom, (c) the corresponding price in West Germany, (d) the corresponding central price for the European Economic Community, (e) the levy in the United Kingdom at the latest available date, (f) the world price and (g) the amount sold to third markets with financal assistance from the European Economic Community;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the tonnage of each agricultural product exported to non-European Economic Community countries under the common agricultural policy and the cost to the European Economic Community in each case; and if he will revise as necessary the figures given in his written answer of 28 April, Official Report, columns 315-16;

(3) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the estimated amount of each common agricultural policy product consumed in the United Kingdom in 1988, the height of the tariff or guaranteed threshold minimum price, the amount of the levy paid at the latest available date and the corresponding world price.

Mr. Gummer: Information on surplus production, as measured by self-sufficiency, is contained in the Commission's publication "The Agricultural Situation in the Community, 1988 Report", in particular, table 3.7.3. Details of institutional prices (in ecu and £ sterling) are contained in annex 1 of the note on the common agricultural policy price settlement 1989-90, deposited in the Library of the House on 17 May 1989. The prices applicable in Germany can be derived from the ecu prices using the green rates as follows: Cereals—2.37360, other crops and sheepmeat—2·36110; other animal products—2·35053.

The import levies and threshold prices applicable in the United Kingdom on 21 July 1989 and the corresponding "world" prices are shown in table 1. I remind the hon. Member that the world prices shown are generally the lowest offer prices at the Community frontier which underlie the Commission's calculation of the variable import levies. These prices are the lowest recorded and it is likely that, on average, higher prices would have to be paid if larger quantities were to be purchased on world markets or if supplies to world markets diminished. Information on the consumption of agricultural products in the United Kingdom, as measured by "total domestic uses", is contained in "Agriculture in the United Kingdom, 1988". I must caution strongly against drawing conclusions from this particular array of data requested.

Details of exports sold to third countries with financial assistance from the European Community are not available. Total exports from the Community in 1988 of selected commodities are shown in table 2; these will include some products exported without financial assistance. An analysis of expenditure on export refunds by product in 1988 is set out in annex 2 of the draft 18th financial report for EAGGF guarantee section.

Copies of the documents referred to are in the Library of the House.

Table 1

Levy applicable in the United Kingdom, threshold price and notional "World" price on 21 July 1989 for main food items covered by the common agricultural policy

| Sheepmeat | 2,403 | [7] | [8] |
| Poultrymeat | 1,049 | 246 | 864 |
| Eggs | 855 | 156 | 472 |

Notes:

All figures have been rounded to nearest £.

[1] For commodities for which there is no threshold price the following have been used: beef and veal—guide price converted to deadweight (using a killing out percentage of 53·8 per cent.); pigmeat—basic price; poultrymeat and eggs—sluicegate prices plus basic levy; sheepmeat—seasonalised basic price adjusted for stabiliser. All conversions at green rate.

[2] Levy is net of monetary compensatory amounts. Rates of levy vary for different tariff headings. The rates quoted are: beef and veal and pigmeat—carcase; poultrymeat—70 per cent. chickens; eggs—in shell.

[3] Notional "World" prices have been calculated by subtracting the levy applicable from the "threshold" price. The beef price is also adjusted for duty. For pigmeat, poultrymeat and eggs the "World" price has been taken as the sluicegate price, less supplementary levy, where appropriate. The resulting estimate has been converted from ecu/t at the agricultural market rate of exchange: £0·762070 = 1 ecu on 21 July 1989.

[4] In practice the United Kingdom's imports from third countries are normally covered by the Lomé convention and enter the Community levy-free.

[5] A special lower rate of levy is applicable to imports of butter from New Zealand.

[6] Most imports of beef from third countries are subject to special arrangements allowing entry at reduced levy rate.

[7] Imports of lamb under voluntary restraint arrangements with principal suppliers and related agreements are subject to a reduced charge of 10 per cent. ad valorem. Any imports outside these arrangements are subject to levies which cannot exceed the 20 per cent. tariff bound in the GATT.

Oilseed Rape

44. Mr. Derek Conway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what income farmers have received from the 1988 oilseed rape crop; and if he will make a statement on the implications of the current prevailing price.

Mr. Curry: The value of oilseed rape output in the United Kingdom in 1988 is estimated at £242 million. Information on the income which farmers obtained from this crop is not available. The 1989 United Kingdom crop, like that in other member states, is expected to be smaller than the 1988 crop because of a smaller planted area. As a result, market prices are currently higher than at the same time last year.

Meat Tenderising Injections

45. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will implement the recommendation of the Farm Animal Welfare Council that intrajugular meat tenderising injections be prohibited.

Mr. Curry: We do not believe that the procedure is inhumane and in our view a ban is not justified.

Nephrops

47. Mr. Graham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any proposals for nephrops to be designated a pressure stock; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I have no such proposals. The various nephrops stocks around the United Kingdom are either not subject to quota or where they are the quotas have been generally under utilised. We will, however, continue to monitor these stocks closely.

Anthrax

48. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to alter the current regulations with regard to anthrax.

Mr. Gummer: I propose shortly to make some minor amendments to the Anthrax Order 1938 to allow an inspector of the Minister (as well as an inspector of a local authority) to serve a form A, declaring an infected place.

There are no plans for any further changes.

Intervention Board

49. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers are in receipt of both payments from the intervention board for growing cereals and payments for subsequently storing such food; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The intervention board contracts storage space for intervention cereals with storekeepers who have suitable premises and the necessary expertise. Records are not maintained to show whether any of the companies offer into intervention grain which they have grown themselves but the intervention board's policy is not to accept offers of grain for storage in the stores in which it is held at the time of offer. Nor would a company's offer of grain be allocated for storage in one of its own stores.

50. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he proposes to announce a decision on the relocation of the intervention board.

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friend the Minister and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are considering with colleagues the intervention board's proposals to locate part of its work away from the south-east of England. An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Cricket Bats

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent developments have taken place in tackling water mark disease and its effects on cricket bat production.

Mr. Maclean: A cricket bat willow research group was established on 3 May. This includes representatives of the growers, merchants and manufacturers, as well as representatives from the university of East Anglia, Essex county council and the Forestry Commission. The group has agreed that a voluntary levy should be raised on the sale of cricket bat clefts to fund research into methods of controlling watermark disease and to contribute to expenditure on inspection services.

Research

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next plans to meet the President of the National Farmers Union to discuss agricultural research.

Mr. Gummer: I have already spoken to the President of the National Farmers Union and have arranged to meet him when no doubt we will have a wide-ranging discussion.

Whisky

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will show the export earnings value of the Scottish whisky industry in each year since 1975.

Mr. Curry: The value of United Kingdom exports of whisky from 1975 is shown in the table. The figures include some small amounts of whiskey bourbon.

Radioactivity

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total quantity of radioactivity in the soil, food chains and water systems in the United Kingdom attributable to (a) fallout from Chernobyl (b) United Kingdom military nuclear bases and (c) the United Kingdom civil nuclear facilities, and what steps he is taking to clean up the United Kingdom environment from radioactive pollution arising from human activities.

Mr. Maclean: My Department has responsibilities for the food chain and the aquatic environment. The Department of the Environment has responsibilities for the soil and drinking water.

It is not possible easily to assess separately the contribution of background activity and that attributable to other sources. However, the general overall picture is as follows:

(a) The contribution from the 1986 Chernobyl accident was greatest in the north and west of the country where high rainfall coincided with the passage of the radioactive plume with a result that total radiocaesium levels in the soil from all sources were in the region of 30,000Bq/m$^2$ in parts of Cumbria.

(b) (c) UK military and civil nuclear facilities have made a negligible contribution to radio activity levels in the soil with the exception of the 1957 fire at Windscale which led to a significant increase in levels in Cumbria.

Details of radioactivity levels in the food chain and in surface and coastal waters around major nuclear installations can be found in my Department's terrestrial radioactivity monitoring programme and aquatic monitoring reports (copies in the Library of the House). The results of my Department's monitoring of foodstuffs following the Chernobyl accident have also been published regularly and copies placed in the library of the House.

With the exception of certain areas of the United Kingdom where sheep are still subject to post-Chernobyl movement and slaughter controls, radioactivity levels in the food chain throughout the United Kingdom do not require any remedial action. In the areas where sheep are under control my Department is actively investigating ways of reducing radiocaesium availability and uptake by grazing animals.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quantities of radioactive wastes will arise annually from the disposal of the radiation sources for food irradiation; what plans there are for their disposal; and if he expects any radioactive waste presently stored in the United Kingdom to be used as sources for food irradiation.

Mr. Maclean: No radioactive wastes will arise from the sources used to irradiate food. When the source has decayed beyond its useful life, it will be returned to the supplier for regeneration. I do not expect any radioactive waste to be used as a source for this process.

Bread and Wheat Prices

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will express the figures on the price of bread and wheat given in his answer of 3 May, Official Report, columns 124-26, with (a) 1979 = 100 and (b) 1984 = 100.

Mr. Curry: The figures requested are as follows:

Pesticides

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many applications for the approval of a pesticide have been made in each of the last six years; and how many of these applications have been refused.

Mr. Maclean: The number of applications for pesticides approval received each year since the introduction of the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 is as follows:

| | 1987 | 1988 | 1989 (to date) |
|---|---|---|---|
| Received | 1,024 | 1,324 | 837 |
| of which: | | | |
| Rejected | 283 | 347 | 324 |
| Refused | N/A | N/A | 84 |

The figures distinguish between those applications which are initially rejected without evaluation due to insufficient supporting data and those refused approval following evaluation.

Synthetic Chemicals

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations have taken place between his Department and the European Economic Community Commission about its draft proposals on the production and marketing of agricultural products and foodstuffs obtained without the use of synthetic chemicals; and what United Kingdom bodies he intends to consult when such proposals are submitted to the European Economic Community Council.

Mr. Maclean: Since 1987 my officials have attended five meetings in Brussels with representatives of the Commission of the European Community and other member states held to discuss a succession of draft proposals put forward by the Commission on the production and marketing of organic foods. On a further occasion in October 1988 my officials hosted a meeting in London, attended by a representative of the Commission and by the Chairman of the United Kingdom Register or Organic Food Standards (UKROFS), in order to explain to the Commission progress towards establishing UKROFS standards. After the UKROFS standards were announced on 2 May 1989 copies were sent by my officials to the Commission.

Once the Commission's own proposals are submitted to the Council of Ministers it is my intention that, so far as is practical, there shall be detailed consultations with the UKROFS board and with a wide range of bodies representing the producers, processors, manufacturers, retailers and consumers of organic foods.

Food Safety

16. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on food safety.

Mr. Gummer: I shall be making a full statement this afternoon.

Liscombe Experimental Husbandry Farm

23. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the agricultural industry has shown itself willing to finance near-market research work at the Liscombe experimental husbandry farm.

Mr. Gummer: Yes. As explained in a reply on 10 July to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell), a local industry consortium has secured a significant level of commitments to fund a programme of near-market research and development at Liscombe experimental husbandry farm.

Zoonoses Regulations

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average cost per test of applying the zoonoses regulations to egg laying flocks and broiler chicken flocks.

Mr. Curry: The Testing of Poultry Flocks Order 1989 requires rearing, laying, and breeding flocks to be monitored for evidence of salmonella. Cloacal swabs are taken from laying birds and tested at intervals from point of lay to slaughter (22 to 70 weeks of age) and dead birds are examined between 26 and 30 weeks of age.

Many laboratories in both the public and private sectors carry out these tests and average cost figures are not available. The Government's veterinary investigations centres would expect to charge £109 per house for this range of tests on laying birds required under the order.

Statutory Instruments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, for each of the last five parliamentary sessions, including the 1988-89 session, if he will list the number of statutory instruments that were issued by his Department; how many were negative and how many affirmative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Records of statutory instruments issued by the Ministry are held by calendar year. The details are as follows:

| | Affirmative | Negative | Made and Operate |
|---|---|---|---|
| [1]1989 | 7 | 31 | 11 |
| 1988 | 11 | 62 | 17 |

| 1986 | 12 | 88 | 18 |
| 1985 | 8 | 59 | 22 |

Farm Woodland Scheme

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the farm woodland scheme has encouraged the planting of broadleaved trees.

Mr. Gummer: Yes. Planting proposals received to date show that an average 75 per cent. of the area to be planted under this scheme will be with broadleaved trees.

Fish Landings

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list in the Official Report the weight and value of landings of fish in England and Wales in each of the past ten years; and what proportion they represent of the total United Kingdom figures for those years.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 26 July 1989]: The information requested is as follows:

Total weight and value of fish (including shellfish) landed into England and Wales, by British and foreign vessels, for the years 1979 to 1988

| Year | Quantity (tonnes) | Percentage of United Kingdom | Value (£000) | Percentage of United Kingdom |

Shell Fish

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under what control powers he ensures that the siting of shell fish farms causes minimal disturbance to ecologically important areas; whether he intends to seek to introduce new controls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 25 July 1989]: My Department exercises no specific powers in relation to the siting of shell fish farms, though all such businesses must register with the appropriate fisheries department under the terms of the Registration of Fish Farming and Shellfish Farming Businesses Order 1985. However, shell fish farms are subject to a range of statutory controls including those relating to sites of special scientific interest notified under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. Moreover, all such operations must first obtain the consent of the owner of the seabed, normally the Crown Estates Commissioners. There are no plans to change the present arrangements.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) to what extent he takes account of a possible breach of section 14(1)(a) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 when granting a licence for alien shell fish cultivation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) under what circumstances he licenses the cultivation of alien shell fish in British waters; and if he will make a statement;

(3) under what powers he can prevent the release of alien shell fish into the wider marine environment; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what monitoring and assessment he is making of the environmental impact of shell fish farming of alien species; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answers 25 and 26 July 1989]: Section 14 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 makes it an offence to release or allow to escape into the wild any animal of a kind which is not ordinarily resident in and is not a regular visitor to Great Britain in a wild state; or which is included in part I of schedule 9. However, introductions into the wild may be authorised by a licence granted under section 16 of the Act and after consultation with the Nature Conservancy Council. Such licences may be general or specific and subject to appropriate conditions. Presently general licences permit releases of Pacific oysters (Crassostrea gigas) and Portuguese oysters (Crassostrea angulata). The release of any other species of alien shell fish would require a specific licence. Moreover, all deposits of molluscan shell fish whether native or non-native, are subject to licensing under the Molluscan Shellfish (Control of Deposit) Order 1974, as varied.

The suitability of alien shell fish for cultivation in our waters is thoroughly investigated by my fisheries scentists, who take account of the scope for natural recruitment and potential ecological impact. In addition, appropriate steps are taken to ensure that any imported broodstock are free from alien shell fish parasites or disease. There is no evidence of natural recruitment or ecological harm having arisen from the cultivation of Pacific or Portuguese oysters.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months compared with the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The Government's general policy towards small businesses is to create a climate in which they can flourish and to provide measures that support and help stimulate their development.

My Department has contributed significantly to this process. We have consistently worked for a more market-orientated common agricultural policy. Our success in this area has been of benefit to both large and small businesses in the agricultural industry. Important reforms of the CAP were brought into effect in 1988-89. Agricultural spending has been brought under control and surpluses have been greatly reduced. These achievements have helped to create a much more secure framework within which farmers can make their business decisions. They have also fostered a competitive and efficient industry, well placed to benefit from the opportunities which the completion of the single internal market will bring.

We have sought to enable farmers to benefit from the economic climate that this Government have created. We have encouraged farmers—in particular those with smaller businesses which may not be viable on the basis of agriculture alone—to look carefully at their assets so as to identify all possible opportunities for generating income; and we have introduced a range of income-generating schemes, designed to encourage farmers to seek alternative sources of income without creating surpluses. Within the last 12 months we have introduced the farm woodland scheme, set-aside, the farm and conservation grant scheme, and feasibility and marketing grants under the farm diversification grant scheme. We have also expanded our efforts on existing schemes, such as environmentally sensitive areas. These measures not only help the individual participants, but bring environmental and other benefits, contributing significantly to the viability and vitality of the rural economy as a whole.

All the schemes operated by my Department are closely monitored. Reports on particular schemes are published from time to time.

Pigs

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what decision he has reached concerning the authorisation of a system of cheque book licensing for swill pig feeders to facilitate easier transportation of pigs to the abattoir following representations made to him by a delegation of swill pig feeders from Harefield led by the hon. Member for Uxbridge.

Mr. Curry: I intend to review the legislation which governs the movement of pigs within Great Britain as soon as our current programme of more pressing legislative changes permits. My specific aim will be to relax the licensing requirement of the movement of swill-fed pigs to slaughterhouses—if the review indicates that this is desirable.

SCOTLAND

Redundancies (Manufacturing)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of notified redundancies in manufacturing in Scotland in each of the past 23 years.

Mr. Lang: There are no comprehensive statistics on redundancies. A consistent series on redundancies involving 10 or more workers confirmed to the Employment Department: The Training Agency is available only back to 1977. The number of such redundancies in Scottish manufacturing industry in each year from 1977 to 1988 is set out in the table.

Health Service Salaries

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board for 1988-89, the amount allocated for nurses' salaries and the amount subsequently spent.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Initial revenue allocations to health boards do not separately identify provision for salaries. Total expenditure on nurses' salaries are shown in the following table:

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) at what board meeting or meeting of a committee with powers the Greater Glasgow health board decided to advertise works contracts for medical records facilities and laboratory services in the official journal of the European Communities of 30 June;

(2) which committee of the Greater Glasgow health board is responsible to the board for (a) medical records and (b) laboratory services; what reports they have received on the privatisation of these services; and when they last discussed the matter in depth.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The finance and general purposes committee of Greater Glasgow health board discussed the potential for competitive tendering in a numberof services and agreed at the April 1989 meeting to the acceleration and expansion of the competitive tendering programme including clinical support services. The committee has received no specific report on privatisation. As regards the journal of 30 June, the advertisements merely invite expressions of interest in tendering.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated current year expenditure by the Greater Glasgow health board on (a) medical records facilities and (b) laboratory services; how many persons are employed in each; and what is the board's calculation of redundancy payments should the services be privatised.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have asked the Greater Glasgow health board to forward the hon. Member a copy of its annual accounts. The board is at the stage of gathering and considering expressions of interest from contractors.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Greater Glasgow health board's advertisements in the official journal of the European Communities of 30 June, references 89/S 123 14555/EN and 89/S 123 14556/EN, were first drafted; when the final draft was approved; and when it was submitted to the journal for publication.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The advertisements were drafted after the April meeting of the finance and general purposes committee and were submitted for publication on 20 June 1989.

Hospitals

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each hospital in Scotland and show against each the non-medical services which have been retained in-house and which have been privatised; and if he will show the date of privatisation where applicable.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Health Boards

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department has taken steps to ensure that health boards seeking to privatise laboratory services have secured in the contract documents absolute legal liability of the contractor for delictual acts on his behalf; whether contractors are required to show proof of ability to meet awards in damages; whether that liability may lie in insurance cover; and whether the National Health Service has any residual liability for services that are privatised.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The National Health Service is liable to its patients for services provided for it by contractors. No specific instructions have, however, been issued by the Scottish Home and Health Department in relation to laboratory services. Such matters would be dealt with by boards under their ordinary procedures for placing contracts.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board in Scotland the number of patients on in-patient waiting lists on March 1988, the number of new cases added to the lists between then and March 1989 and the number of patients on the lists treated, between these dates.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has responded to the report on the survey of waste disposal in Scotland presented to him by the Association for the Protection of Rural Scotland on 12 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The report is being considered by my officials. The Government have consulted extensively on proposals relating to waste disposal, on which we intend to legislate in the near future. The association's earlier response to our consultation paper on the role and functions of waste disposal authorities in Scotland will be taken into account in that context.

Street Lighting

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to establish in Scotland street lighting projects, monitoring the connection between lighting and crime, along the lines of the four projects announced by the Home Office on 18 July.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am fully aware of the four new street lighting projects which are to be monitored by the Home Office in an attempt to assess their impact on levels of crime. We will be closely following developments on the four projects, and their relevance to Scotland will be considered in the light of the results which are expected to become available early next year. The outcome of the current research study in Wandsworth on the relationship between street lighting and crime will be of similar interest, in the context of the safer cities projects which have already been announced.

Edinburgh Dental School

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated additional costs that will be incurred by the Lothian health board in the event that the Edinburgh dental school is closed, showing (a) the estimated additional cost of funding clinical posts currently available at the school and (b) the recurrent loan charges for the capital cost of providing a new building for the dental hospital.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The cost of funding clinical posts in any new dental hospital in Edinburgh is not yet known. In evidence to the McCallum working party, Lothian health board estimated that an additional £220,750 would be needed to meet total staff costs. Capital expenditure in the National Health Service is not funded on a recurrent loan basis.

Drugs

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many police officers are principally deployed on drugs work in each police force; and what was the comparable number in 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

| Force | 1979 | 1989 |
|---|---|---|
| Central Scotland | 0 | 4 |
| Dumfries and Galloway | 0 | 2 |
| Fife | 0 | 6 |
| Grampian | 2 | 12 |
| Lothian and Borders | 13 | 24 |
| Northern | 0 | 5 |
| Strathclyde | 14 | 34 |
| Tayside | 4 | 13 |
| Total | 33 | 100 |

In addition, since 1986, the strength of the Scottish crime squad has been increased by 31 officers to allow the formation of drugs wings based in Edinburgh, Glasgow and Stonehaven.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library the latest figures on the prevalence of drug misuse and service provision.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The extent of an illegal activity such as drug misuse cannot be precisely measured. Two main indicators are the number of addicts notified to the Home Office and the number of drugs offences recorded by the police. A comprehensive range of figures for 1988 is contained in "Statistics of Drug Addicts Notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1988—Area Tables" and SHHD statistical bulletin No. 1/1989 "Recorded Crime in Scotland 1988", copies of which are in the Library. The number of new addicts notified to the Home Office from Scotland in 1988 was 400, an increase of 5 per cent. over 1987. The number of drugs offences recorded by the police in Scotland in 1988 was 5,213, an increase of about 10 per cent. over 1987.

From the current financial year, provision to health boards to maintain and develop drug misuse services is being increased from £1 million to £2 million per annum. The latest (fifth) edition of "Drug Problems—A Register of Helping Agencies", published in March 1989, lists the many services at present available in Scotland specifically for the treatment and rehabilitation of drug misusers. I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of prosecutions for drug offences in 1979 and in each succeeding year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is given below. For this purpose, the relevant offences are taken to be the illegal importation, production, manufacture, cultivation or supply of drugs, possession with intent to supply, and simply possession.

Persons proceeded against: Scotland

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| 1979 | 1,336 |
| 1980 | 1,402 |
| 1981 | 1,183 |
| 1982 | 1,663 |
| 1983 | 1,971 |
| 1984 | 2,584 |
| 1985 | 3,047 |
| 1986 | 3,065 |
| 1987 | 2,842 |

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of registered drug addicts in 1979 and in each succeeding year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the total number of addicts notified to the Home Office from Scotland in the years 1979 to 1988 is published in Tables A1 and A2 of "Statistics of Drug Addicts Notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1988—Area Tables", a copy of which is in the Library.

Infertility

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the infertility services provided by each health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I regret that this information is not held centrally.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the prevalence of infertility in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information about the prevalence of infertility is not available since only a proportion of those affected will seek advice and treatment. Data on the numbers of those seeking advice and treatment are not held centrally.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether plans for the provision of infertility services are required to be included in the strategic plans of each health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No. It is for individual health boards to determine, in the light of local circumstances and of the resources available to them, the extent to which they should make infertility services available in their areas and how such services should be organised.

Mental Illness (Lothian)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the joint funding arrangements for support for people with mental illness in Lothian, including the location of new facilities and financial arrangements for both capital and revenue expenditure.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Lothian health board, together with Lothian regional council, the district councils, and the voluntary sector, has developed a comprehensive plan for the provision of services for the mentally ill. Jointly funded projects play an increasingly important part in that provision. I recently announced the latest proposals, developed jointly by the health board, the regional council, the Church of Scotland and other voluntary agencies, involving the transfer of 90 mentally ill people back into the community at a capital cost to the NHS of £4 million. I have asked Lothian health board to let the hon. Member have the detailed information which he requested.

Paramilitary Activity

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons have been (a) killed and (b) injured in Scotland in the first six months of 1989 as a result of paramilitary activity; and if he will break down the figures specifying whether the paramilitaries were (i) from western Europe, (ii) from Northern Ireland, (iii) from the Republic of Ireland, (iv) from other parts of the world and (v) of unknown origin.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

Prisoners (Transfer)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners were transferred from (a) Scotland to Northern Ireland and (b) from Northern Ireland to Scotland in the first six months of 1989; and under which section of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 such transfers were carried out.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: One, from Scotland to Northern Ireland, under section (27) 1.

Female Prisoners

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average length of custodial sentence of female prisoners in Scotland in 1988 and in the first six months of 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Statistics on court disposals during 1988 and the first six months of 1989 are not yet available. Provisional estimates based on prison reception statistics indicate that in 1988 the average length of sentence of females received into the penal system on direct sentence was 121 days. Prison reception statistics are not yet available for the period April-June 1989. Provisional estimates indicate that in the first three months of 1989 the average length of sentence of females received into the penal system on direct sentence was 107 days. Females sentenced to life imprisonment or indeterminate detention are not included in the above calculations.

Forestry

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Forestry Commission consults the Nature Conservancy Council about all new woodland grant schemes outwith sites of special scientific interest with the exception of those in Caithness and Sutherland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Forestry Commission consults the Nature Conservancy Council on planting and felling proposals falling wholly or partly within national nature reserves or sites of special scientific interest and on planting schemes which require to be assessed under the terms of the Environmental Assessment (Afforestation) Regulations 1988. The NCC is also notified by the Forestry Commission of all planting and felling proposals in environmentally sensitive areas and given the opportunity to comment.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland to what extent the Forestry Commission takes account of comments from local authorities on nature conservation aspects of forestry proposals; and if he will list the organisations the commission consults about the nature conservation aspects of forestry proposals.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Forestry Commission consults local authorities over grant and felling applications in accordance with mutually agreed arrangements with individual authorities. If a local authority consulted by the commission objects to an application on nature conservation or other grounds the commission will always seek a solution through discussions with the local authority and the applicant. If the matter cannot be resolved, the commission is required to consult Ministers before any decision is taken to allow the application.

The commission does not seek comments from voluntary conservation bodies, but it does encourage statutory authorities, including the Nature Conservancy Council, to consider the views of such bodies in formulating their expert advice on forestry proposals.

Basking Sharks

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial resources were allocated to stock assessment of basking sharks in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: It is not possible to undertake a stock assessment for basking sharks and therefore resources are not allocated specifically to this task.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what records of incidental catches of basking sharks have been recorded by his district fisheries inspectors for each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Incidental catches of basking sharks are not recorded separately, but the level of incidental catches in the past three years is thought to have been extremely low.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will publish the stock estimates for basking sharks for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Basking sharks have a worldwide distribution, and those occurring in British waters appear to be seasonal visitors. No stock estimates are therefore available although examination of Norwegian catch and effort data suggests there has been no long-term change in the population in the last decade.

Job Interview Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date the Scottish Office first became involved in the decision to apply the job interview guarantee scheme to the Whitfield area of Dundee and the Castlemilk area of Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

New Life for Urban Scotland

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan will receive a reply to his letter of 13 June on the New Life for Urban Scotland programme.

Mr. Lang: I wrote to the hon. Member on 25 July 1989.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, pursuant to his reply to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale of Monday 3 July, Official Report, column 51, he has any progress to report on negotiations on the European Commission's proposals to make changes to the payment of the hill livestock compensatory allowance.

Mr. Rifkind: Negotiations are still at an early stage.

Residential Homes

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was paid in the past four years to residents in residential care establishments and private nursing homes in Scotland for the following categories: (a) elderly, (b) physical handicap, (c) mental handicap and (d) mental illness by local authority.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Community Care

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how he proposes to take account of any increase in the need for community care services;

(2) how the care element to be allocated to local authorities will be identified in the rate support grant settlement in the initial and subsequent years;

(3) if he will make it his policy to follow Sir Roy Griffiths' proposal to provide resources to match the needs identified in local plans;

(4) what capacity there will be to enable local authorities to expand community care; and where this capacity will come from;

(5) what form of consultation or negotiation he intends to establish with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on community care matters;

(6) what role he sees for local authorities in the longer term as a direct provider of community care services:

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will direct the general manager of the Greater Glasgow health board to reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston's letter of 24 May regarding competitive tendering.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Environmental Bodies (Grants)

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement concerning the amount of grant aid being made available under the Special Grants (Environmental) programme in 1989-90 to voluntary bodies in Scotland working in the environmental field.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am pleased to announce that grant aid totalling £208,000 has been offered to the following voluntary bodies in the financial year 1989-90, to assist them in carrying out environmental conservation, improvement or education work in Scotland:

| | £ |
|---|---|
| Association for the Protection of Rural Scotland | 2,500 |
| Association of Community Technical Aid Centres | 12,500 |
| Buchan Countryside Group | 2,500 |
| Central Scotland Countryside Trust | 12,500 |
| Council for Scottish Archaeology | 9,000 |
| Environment Centre | 10,000 |
| John Muir Trust | 3,000 |
| Royal Society for the Protection of Birds | 12,500 |
| Royal Zoological Society | 5,750 |
| Scottish Community Woods Campaign | 7,750 |
| Scottish Conservation Projects Trust | 36,000 |
| Scottish Council for Voluntary Organisations | 1,500 |
| Scottish Environmental Education Council | 15,000 |
| Scottish Field School of Archaeology | 1,500 |
| Scottish Field Studies Association | 10,000 |
| Scottish Historic Buildings Trust | 13,000 |
| Scottish Rights of Way Society | 2,500 |
| Scottish Wildlife and Countryside Link | 12,000 |
| Scottish Wildlife Trust | 30,000 |
| Strathclyde Building Preservation Trust | 3,500 |
| Woodland Trust | 5,000 |

The experience of the first three years of the scheme has been generally good.

I am satisfied that the grants have greatly assisted the voluntary organisations to increase their level of activity and do much useful work. We are of course still in the experimental period with this scheme and are monitoring it closely. We are asking certain organisations for further information prior to allocating their final tranche of grant for the current year. My Department will review this three-year experimental scheme to assess performance and recommend improvements. I hope that in future we shall be able to focus support on those bodies and activities which are carrying out the greatest amount of practical work to conserve and enhance Scotland's environment.

Development Agency

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the companies in which the Scottish Development Agency has equity participation and the value of each investment.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Equity investments by the Scottish Development Agency are as detailed. The value of each investment is expressed at cost.

Gaelic Broadcasting

Mrs Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to ensure that the payments currently made by Scottish Television to S4C will in future be spent on Gaelic programming.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The Government are currently considering the future of Gaelic broadcasting and will announce its conclusion in due course.

Mrs Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations have been made to him concerning the possibility of concentrating Gaelic programming on one channel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The Secretary of State has received a variety of representations about the future of Gaelic broadcasting. All argue for an increase in programming but many are not specific as to transmission arrangements. Of those who do express a view, rather more favour using a number of channels than argue for concentrating Gaelic programming on one channel. The Government are currently considering issues raised in these representations and will announce their conclusion in due course.

South Pier, Oban

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's policy towards the future of south pier in Oban; what representations he has received about the development of the pier; what provision h[illegible]en made for fishing interests; what expenditure of public funds has been made to date; what further expenditure is planned; what date has been set for the completion of the Oban bay development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The Department has approved those aspects of the Scottish Development Agency's involvement in the Oban waterfront development which are outwith the agency's delegated authority.

My right hon. and learned Friend and I have received a number of representations about the development, some of which have referred to the south pier.

The redevelopment works on the south pier are expected to be completed by the end of this year and the pier will then be transferred to Caledonian MacBrayne, which will in turn lease it to the Oban Port Users Association. The pier will incorporate a new fish hall and offices.

It is estimated that the total value of the development will be around £10 million. Of this, around £3·9 million will be contributed by the public sector. Expenditure to date from public sector sources is around £2 million.

On present plans, the main elements of the development should be completed in time for the 1991 tourist season.

The waterfront project has been developed for the purpose of enhancing the attractiveness of Oban as a major tourism centre and as a gateway to the west Highlands and the Hebrides. The development proposes a multi-purpose leisure facility, specialist shopping facilities, a heritage centre and a hotel. In addition, facilities for the local fishing fleet and for management of ferry traffic will be improved.

It is anticipated that the development will bestow substantial benefits not only to visitors but to the local population through increased economic activity and improved facilities.

ENERGY

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Wakeham: In January, 213 letters were received from and 189 sent to hon. Members. In the whole Session up to 1 July 1,703 letters were received from hon. Members and 1,842 sent out.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what new plans the Department of Energy has to promote and improve energy efficiency.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Provan (Mr. Wray) on 17 July, Official Report, column 53.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what specific arrangements he has made to ensure that the new premises of his Department and its Energy Efficiency Office incorporate and practise the latest techniques in energy control and management.

Mr. Wakeham: My Department's new premises at No. 1 Palace street incorporate an electronic building and energy management system using the latest proven technology, designed to run at optimum efficiency all the eletronic and mechanical services, including heating and ventilation, throughout the building. The Property Services Agency has let a contract for the operation and maintenance of the building services, including the building and energy management system. In addition, staff in the Property Services Agency have been trained in the use of the system, and a number of staff from the Department have rec[illegible]d training in how to monitor the system.

Power Stations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1970 and for the current year to date the cost of coal and heavy oil used in power stations in terms of coal equivalent together with (a) the quantity of each used in terms of coal equivalent, (b) the world price of coal in terms of sterling on a delivered to United Kingdom basis and (c) the index of the real exchange rate for sterling in terms of relative export prices on the basis of 1976 = 100.

Mr. Wakeham: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Plutonium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy in future publication of annual civil plutonium production and dispatch figures, that the positive or negative error to be applied to the data for each nuclear station be published with the data.

Mr. Wakeham: I shall consider carefully the point made by the hon. Member.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what amount of plutonium has been declared to the safeguards authorities, which is located in (a) high-level liquid radioactive waste tanks and (b) solid plutonium contaminated waste at Sellafield; and if he will give details for the periods May 1979 to December 1986, and January 1987 to the present.

Mr. Michael Spicer: All safeguards data are confidential to the parties concerned.

Radioactive Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what volume of low and intermediate level radioactive waste will become the responsibility of United Kingdom Nirex Ltd., following the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel already contracted by British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This will be a commercial matter between United Kingdom Nirex Ltd. and British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how much low, intermediate and high-level radioactive waste will arise from the reprocessing of West German spent nuclear fuel at Sellafield, following the joint declaration on the peaceful uses of nuclear energy signed in Bonn on 25 July between the Federal Republic and the United Kingdom; how much of the low and intermediate-level waste will be sent back to Germany following reprocessing; and for how long the high-level waste will have to remain at Sellafield before being returned to the Federal Republic.

Mr. Michael Spicer: British Nuclear Fuels plc and the German electricity utilities are in the process of negotiating contracts in the context of the recently signed joint declaration. I understand that the quantities of spent fuel to be reprocessed have yet to be agreed. In line with Government policy, the contracts, when concluded, will provide for the return of wastes to the Federal Republic of Germany.

Offshore Installations

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many prosecutions have been instituted for failure to comply with directions issued by his Department under the Mineral Workings Offshore Installations Act 1971 and relating to the Offshore Installations (Life Saving Appliances) Regulations 1977 since 1979.

Mr. Peter Morrison: None. Directions issued by the Secretary of State under the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 exempt installations from specific statutory requirements for limited periods subject to adequate alternative safety arrangements being in place. A direction ceases to have effect if any condition attached to it is not observed.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will place in the Library a copy of all directions issued by his Department under the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 and relating to the Offshore Installations (Life Saving Appliances) Regulations 1977.

Mr. Peter Morrison: There is a large number of directions and copies cannot easily be assembled. However, I will be arranging for copies of all directions relating to the Offshore Installations (Life-saving Appliances) Regulations 1977 issued in the last two years which remain in force to be placed in the Library as soon as possible.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what directions have been issued by his Department in terms of the provisions of sections 7(4) and (5) of the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 in respect of the provisions of the Offshore Installations (Life Saving Appliances) Regulations 1977; to whom these directions were made; and to what offshore installations they relate.

Mr. Peter Morrison: This information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps his Department takes to monitor compliance with directions issued under the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 and relating to the Offshore Installations (Life Saving Appliances) Regulations 1977.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My inspectors monitor compliance with all directions issued under the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 as part of their inspection of offshore installations.

Pneumoconiosis

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has to show the monthly breakdown for the last 36 months of the number of persons X-rayed for the first time for pneumoconiosis in an attempt to secure lump-sum compensation from British Coal and the breakdown of the subsequent results, distinguishing between those not suffering from the disease and those suffering, analysed by percentage disability groupings.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The British Coal Corporation is responsible for the periodic X-ray scheme which it introduced in 1958. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Energy Production

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, in the light of new statistics on the cost of energy, he will publish the comparative costs of energy produced by (a) coal, (b) Magnox reactors, (c) advanced gas-cooled reactor reactors, (d) oil and (e) hydro-electric in the years 1979 to 1987.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The detailed historical information requested is a matter for the CEGB. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Magnox Reactors

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what estimate he has of the total cost for the decommissioning, dismantling and guarding of Magnox reactors during the next 10 decades;

(2) what is the basis of his evaluation of the costs of decommissioning Magnox reactors, the reprocessing of Magnox spent fuel and the disposal of radioactive waste arising from Magnox plants.

Mr. Wakeham: I have received further information on these subjects from the CEGB over the past two months which is the subject of continuing consideration and discussion. I understand that some of the information reflects the present position in continuing negotiations between the CEGB and British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) further to his statement of 24 July, when he first asked for an assessment of the cost of reprocessing and waste treatment of spent Magnox fuel in connection with electricity privatisation; who undertook that assessment, and when the assessment was completed;

(2) when he was first informed that the rising costs of dealing with spent Magnox fuel might affect the structure of the electricity privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that my predecessor made on 24 July, at column 744.

Nuclear Energy

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how much electricity was purchased by the public supply industry from (a) Chapelcross, (b) Calder Hall, (c) Dounreay and (d) Winfrith, in each financial year from 1983-84 to 1988-89, inclusive.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is an operational matter for the electricity industry. I have asked the chairmen of the CEGB and the North Western electricity board to reply direct to my hon. Friend concerning purchases from Calder Hall and Winfrith and some of the purchases from Chapelcross. Purchases of other supplies from Chapelcross and from Dounreay are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland who is responsible for the SSEB.

Nuclear Fuel (Reprocessing)

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what is his current estimate of the costs of reprocessing and waste treatment of spent advanced gas-cooled reactor fuel;

(2) what is his Department's most recent estimate of the cost of decommissioning (a) advanced gas-cooled reactor and (b) pressurised water reactor nuclear power stations;

(3) what is the assessment now of the cost of reprocessing and disposing of spent Magnox fuel, and of the cost of decommissioning Magnox nuclear power stations.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I have given today to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn).

HEALTH

NHS (Equipment Losses)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the value of losses of equipment, property or cash in the National Health Service in England owing to theft, fraud, arson, neglect of duty, gross carelessness or malicious damage in the latest available year.

Mr. B[illegible]: Following is information derived from the "Statement of Losses, etc." included in the 1987-8 summarised annual accounts of regional and district health authorities in England and those of special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals:

| | £ (cash) |
|---|---|
| Losses of cash due to theft, fraud etc. | 102,866 |
| Losses of equipment and property in stores and in use due to theft, fraud or arson (whether proved or suspected), neglect of duty or gross carelessness: Bedding and linen | 137,963 |
| Other equipment and property | 1,306,146 |

The separately summarised 1987-88 annual accounts of family practitioner committees in England record similar losses totalling £1,184.

Equivalent information for 1988-89 will be available in the autumn.

Emigration, Australasia

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to establish contact with persons, born in the United Kingdom, sent out as nine-to 12 year-olds to New Zealand and Australia, who have been unable to establish the identity of relations in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Health Care Demand

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the annual increase in demand for health care due to the aging population.

Mr. Freeman: The estimate of growth in demand on the hospital and health services arising through changes in population is as shown:

| Year | Per cent. |
|---|---|
| 1985-86 | 1·3 |
| 1986-87 | 1·0 |
| 1987-88 | 1·2 |
| 1988-89 | 1·0 |

The figures represent the expected increase in demand for services arising through population changes overall and not just those for the elderly.

Details of the method used to arrive at the estimates are given in answer to question 2 of the Social Services Select Committee report, Session 1987-88, House of Commons No. 548.

Listeria

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information was conveyed to his Department concerning listeria by successive telephone calls from Dr. Ribeiro of the Cardiff public health laboratory service on the 16 June and subsequent days.

Mr. Freeman: By Friday 16 June the preliminary results of the survey being carried out locally by PHLS Cardiff were available. On Tuesday 20 June it was agreed with the Department that PHLS Cardiff would provide a summary as soon as further results on a wider survey were available. This further information was conveyed to the Department on 3 July.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps are now being taken to ensure that the greatest number of pregnant women know of the dangers of listeria to the foetus;

(2) what steps were taken to inform pregnant women of the dangers of listeria to the foetus at the first available opportunity.

Mr. Mellor: The chief medical officer issued general advice to the public about listeria on 10 February 1989. He also gave specific advice to pregnant women to avoid eating certain foods, such as soft cheeses and more recently pate. He subsequently wrote to all doctors in England on 16 February 1989 to provide them with detailed advice on listeriosis. This advice is extant.

In the case of listeria in pate, the results of a survey in Wales were not available until 30 June following which a national survey was set in hand to see whether or not there was a wider problem. However, in light of further evidence received from one of the importers on 11 July, we issued our warning to vulnerable groups on 12 July.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department issues to pregnant women with regard to the dangers of listeriosis.

Mr. Mellor: The chief medical officer issued general advice to the public about listeria on 10 February 1989. He also gave specific advice to pregnant women to avoid eating certain foods, such as soft cheeses and more recently pate. He subsequently wrote to all doctors in England on 16 February 1989 to provide tem with detailed advice on listeriosis. This advice is extant.

Eye and Dental Checks

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of people pay for (a) eye tests and (b) dental examinations: (i) currently and (ii) before the current charging policy began; and what is the average charge for each currently.

Mr. Mellor: We do not have information on the percentage of people receiving sight tests or dental examinations since 1 April 1989 who have paid a charge. There was no charge for sight tests or dental examinations before that date. An ophthalmic optician who carries out a sight test under the general ophthalmic service receives a fee of £10·40 from the family practitioner committee, and an ophthalmic medical practitioner a fee of £8·69. Charges to patients for private sight tests are a matter for the ophthalmic profession. The current charge to a patient for a clinical examination under the general dental service is £3·15. For both types of examination, certain groups of the population are exempt from charges, and others are entitled to help with the costs of private sight tests.

Community Care

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the new funding structure for community care will allow disabled people to receive payments to enable them to buy in personal care, in the same manner as many can now do through the independent living fund, or whether all of the proposed single budget to cover the costs of care, whether in a person's own home or in residential or nursing home, will be payable to local authorities.

Mr. Mellor: Local authorities will be responsible for managing the unified budget for social care which we propose to introduce in 1991, and from it will be expected to make available services for people whom they have assessed as being in need of social care. We have no plans to enable local authorities to pay new cash benefits. Whether, as Sir Roy Griffiths proposed, they should be authorised to experiment within their budget with schemes facilitating the purchase of services by individuals has yet to be decided.

Hospitals (Self-governing Status)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provision he will be making to fund the additional costs of installation and operation of the management and pricing system for self-governing hospital treatment;

(2) whether he will provide an estimate of the additional costs of running the management and pricing system for self-governing hospitals.

Mr. Mellor: It is not possible to give a firm estimate at this stage; this will depend on a number of factors including the number and types of self-governing units. We have made available an extra £82 million in this financial year for implementing the review generally. Over time, any extra cost should be offset by the improved efficiency which will stem from the changes.

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why the South West regional health authority breached the requirement stated in paragraphs 11 and 13 of the letter to regional general managers from Mr. Nichol, dated 14 March, that expressions of interest should be referred to regional health authorities so that they can add their comments on all expressions of interest before sending them on to the Department; why the authority members have not had submitted to them for their comment such expressions of interest; and whether he will return for such comment all submissions improperly forwarded.

Mr. Mellor: The chief executive's letter made it clear that expressions of interest could be made by any interested party. It was not open to the region to withhold any submissions, although we were keen to have regional comments on the expressions. How this matter was dealt with in the regional health authority is for the regional chairman to decide.

We would expect the regional health authority to play a full part in commenting on any applications for self governance in due course.

Road Accidents

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of hospital beds are taken up annually by road accident victims; and what is the cost (a) including and (b) excluding out-patients.

Mr. Freeman: In 1985, the latest year for which figures are available centrally, road accident cases occupied 2 per cent. of non-psychiatric, non-maternity beds in NHS hospitals in England. In 1986, the latest year for which the calculations are available, the estimated total cost to the National Health Service of dealing with road accident victims in England was £132 million, of which an estimated £7 million relates to out-patient costs.

Member's Letters

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why his office did not write to the right hon. Member for Swansea, West until 24 July to inform him that letters about the reform of the National Health Service sent to his Department on 8 June had been transferred to the Welsh Office.

Mr. Freeman: I am sorry that there has been such a long delay before we notified the right hon. Member of the transfer of his letter. Staff in the Department have been dealing with a very large number of letters on the reform of the National Health Service and did not identify straight away that a response from the Welsh Office was appropriate.

Residential Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will include proposals to require the registration of private care homes with fewer than four residents in his forthcoming White Paper on community care:

(2) what action he is taking to ensure that local authorities have sufficient powers to deal with private care home proprietors who are running as one establishment a number of small homes with fewer than four residents.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 27 July.

Childhood Cancer

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of children suffering from any form of cancer in the Glanford and Scunthorpe constituency for each of the years 1986 to 1989.

Mr. Freeman: Cancer registration data are still being collated for the years 1986 onwards. We would not normally release data for childhood cancers for areas as small as parliamentary constituencies on grounds of confidentiality.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the latest figures for the prevalence of drug misuse and service provision in each Health Service region on a comparable basis with those issued in June 1985.

Mr. Freeman: Detailed figures on the prevalence of drug misuse are, because of the clandestine and illegal nature of the activity, not available. The figures which were issued in June 1985 were obtained via a special exercise. This exercise has not been repeated and so I am unable to give the hon. Member updated figures.

The Department has produced the following statistical booklets which the hon. Member may find of interest:

Mental Illness Hospitals and Units in England: Drug Misuse Statistics 1981-1985;

Mental Illness Hospitals and Units in England: Drug Misuse Statistics 1982-1986;

Data from the Addicts Index, October to December: Quarter 1988 and January to December 1988.

These have been placed in the Library.

Infertility

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the infertility services provided by each district health authority.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the prevalence of infertility in England.

Mr. Mellor: Accurate statistics are not available, but it is estimated that about one in 10 couples is infertile.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether plans for the provision of infertility services are required to be included in the strategic plans of district health authorities.

Mr. Mellor: There is no such requirement. The provision of infertility services is a matter for individual health authorities to decide in the light of local needs and priorities.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the number of ambulance vehicles available for service in the London ambulance service area each week since the beginning of the current year, the number that had no drivers and the number of occasions that were emergency only.

Mr. Freeman: The details of emergency ambulance availability for the period 8 January to 23 July 1989 are shown in the table. Figures for non-emergency ambulances are not shown because of the variety of vehicles used:

| Week ending | Planned vehicles | Unmanned vehicles | [1] Single-manned vehicles |
|---|---|---|---|
| 8 January 1989 | 2,864 | 146 | 63 |

| 23 July 1989 | 2,905 | 221 | 70 |

[1] The single-manned vehicles can be used if a fully-manned vehicle is not available.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the number of occasions, and the dates concerned, when the London ambulance service was ouside the 14-minute Department of Health guideline for emergency responses since January 1989.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not available in the format requested. However, the table shows the performance by month from January 1989:

| Month | Percentage responded to within 14 minutes | Number of minutes to respond to 95 per cent. of calls |
|---|---|---|
| January | 80 | 20 |
| February | 77 | 20 |
| March | 77 | 20 |
| April | 77 | 21 |
| May | 80 | 19 |

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken following the ACAS report on the London ambulance service staffing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The ACAS report on stress in the London ambulance service (LAS) was welcomed by LAS management. Working groups comprising LAS managers, staff representatives and representatives of ACAS have been considering how best to implement the recommendations and have been making excellent progress. The working groups are expected to complete their work in September 1989.

Cochlear Implants

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research funding has been made available to University College hospital for research into cochlear implants; what plans he has to increase it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: University College hospital has received some £300,000 for a five-year research programme on cochlear implants (due to end in April 1990) from the Sir Jules Thorn charitable trust and others. Further technical support has been provided by the Royal National Institute for the Deaf. The NHS meets the surgical costs and those of patients' stay in hospital.

Birmingham Children's Hospital

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many babies annually are not receiving life-saving heart surgery under the Birmingham health authority policy of restricting open-heart operations to 28 per month.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that no urgent cases of life-saving heart surgery have been turned away from the Birmingham children's hospital.

Indeed the planned number of open heart operations in 1989-90, at 320, is more than twice the number performed in 1987-88.

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients other than with heart problems were turned away from the Birmingham children's hospital's intensive care unit during the period 1 January to 30 June; how many children patients with heart problems were turned away in the same period; and how many cardiac by-pass operations were carried out in the same period.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that all emergency cases requiring intensive care during the period 1 January—30 June were admitted to the intensive care unit. The total number of open heart operations in this period was 191.

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health over what periods of time the Birmingham children's hospital's records show that intensive care unit beds stood unused since surgeons have worked to the 28-monthly restriction to date.

Mr. Freeman: The hospital attempts to keep one intensive care bed free for emergencies, including casualties. Apart from that the intensive care beds which are for the use of the hospital as a whole have never stood unused.

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when all the eight intensive care unit beds at Birmingham children's hospital will be available; what steps the hospital management are taking to increase the number of staffed beds on the intensive care unit; and what steps are being taken to provide additional intensive care unit beds.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that the number of intensive care beds occupied in the last three months fluctuated between six and eight, depending on the availability of staff and the dependency of patients. Nurse recruitment continues to improve in the intensive care unit following successful training initiatives and the hospital hopes to have eight intensive care beds available with increasing frequency. A project team is currently looking at options for further increasing the number of intensive care beds.

North West Hertfordshire DHA (Dr. Sage)

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meetings of the North West Hertfordshire district health authority have taken place since the appointment to it of Dr. Sage; on how many occasions Dr. Sage has attended meetings; and on how many occasions he has sent an apology for non-attendance.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may however wish to contact the chairman of North West Hertfordshire district health authority for further details.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if his Department intends to review the training of audiology staff with a view to creating a specialism in hearing aid fitting;

(2) whether he will introduce a training course for general practitioners to increase their knowledge of hearing loss.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Devon, West and Torridge (Miss Nicholson) on 27 July.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to different local arrangements for the delivery of hearing aid services within the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: We are aware that some health authorities are already operating various schemes involving alternative methods of delivery of hearing aid services, including direct referral to audiology services. We propose to set in train a programme of action to increase the number of such direct referral schemes, together with appropriate methods of monitoring and evaluating them. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Devon, West and Torridge (Miss Nicholson) on 27 July.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to the usage of hearing aids after being dispensed.

Mr. Freeman: Precise information is not held centrally. A national study of hearing by the Medical Research Council indicates that about one fifth of those who have hearing aids do not use them.

Mental Patients (Discharge)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has about the lengths of time mentally ill people discharged from hospital are able to stay in residential homes run or supported by local authorities.

Mr. Freeman: Information is not readily available centrally on the lengths of time mentally ill people stay in residential homes. It is for the local authority, in consultation with whoever is caring for the resident, to determine the appropriate length of stay in each case.

NHS Funding

Mr. Terry Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the intended increase in National Health Service funding, in percentage terms, in the next three years.

Mr. Freeman: The planned level of funding for the National Health Service for the next three financial years is subject to review in the current public expenditure survey, the results of which will be announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Autumn Statement.

Infant Mortality

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give (a) the infant mortality rate for the Glanford and Scunthorpe constituency for each of the years 1986 to 1989 and (b) the comparable national and regional rates.

Mr. Freeman: The information is shown in the table.

Infant mortality[1] rates for 1986-88

Health Care

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for health whether Her Majesty's Government have considered the reasons for the difference in the proportion of gross domestic product spent on health care in the United Kingdom and in other developed countries.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave him on 16 May at column 146.

Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report a list of Bills sponsored by his Department in each Session since 1979.

Mr. Freeman: The information is in the table. For sessions earlier than 1988-89 the Bills shown are those which relate to health matters and exclude social security.

| Session | Health |
|---|---|
| 1979-80 | Health Services BillNational Health Services (Invalid Direction) Bill |

Eye Tests

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he has any plans to instigate a further advertising campaign to encourage people to have eye tests following the introduction of eye test charges; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he has any plans to instigate an advertising campaign on exemption from eye test charges.

Mr. Mellor: We have no current plans for instigating any new advertising campaign either to encourage people to visit their optician for a sight test or to further publicise the groups entitled to free sight tests under the NHS. Information on entitlement for NHS sight tests is clearly given in poster SB54 and leaflet G11, issued by this Department and updated on an annual basis.

Mental Health

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are his plans for continuing research into mental health problems seen by general practitioners following the closure of the general practice research unit;

(2) what funding is planned in the area of research into investigating psychiatric disorders over the next financial year following the closure of the general practice research unit;

(3) what steps he is taking to ensure multidisciplinary research into mental health problems in primary care following the closure of the general practice research unit.

Mr. Freeman: Following the retirement of the director of the general practice research unit (GPRU), Professor Shepherd, we reviewed our arrangements for social and community mental health research. We decided that we could best meet our likely needs through more responsive arrangements that would be possible by continuing long-term support for the GPRU and we therefore did not renew its contract.

The Department is committed to maintaining its support for social and community mental health research up to the present level of available funding of £250,000 per annum. Indeed community care is one of the priority themes for our current research programme. The commissioning of appropriate projects will, of course, be driven by the requirement for research to assist the Government's policy objectives. When these requirements for 1990-91 and beyond have been worked into our research programme later this year, we shall be approaching researchers. We expect to discuss with the new MRC social and community psychiatry unit whether some of our research needs can be met by it. An undertaking has been given that those members of the core staff of GPRU who would have become employed in the new MRC unit had Department of Health commissions been added to its core programme and have not found further employment by the time their present contract ends, will be offered grant support at the Maudsley until 30 April 1990.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the total costs of general practice in the United Kingdom the proposed funding of investigations into psychiatric disorders would amount to after the closure of the general practice research unit.

Mr. Freeman: Our precise requirements for future research on mental health issues are still being developed.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the amount spent by each region on services for the mentally ill (a) in cash terms at constant prices and (b) as a proportion of their total budgets, for each year from 1979 to the latest available date.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 18 April 1989]: For costing purposes prior to 1987-88 all hospitals were classified into one or other of a series of standard types which reflected the principal use to which their beds were allocated and costing returns in respect of community health services showed expenditure relating to major areas of activity only.

The following table, derived from hospital costing returns for 1979-80 to 1986-87 gives figures of regional and national revenue expenditure (expressed at 1986-87 prices) on hospitals categorised as "mental illness" and those figures as percentages of total revenue expenditure on all hospital and community health services (HCHS).

However, the expenditure figures exclude the growing volume of activity in psychiatric units within acute and other hospitals and services provided within the community health services. Such expenditure is not separately identifiable centrally.

Information on the financial year 1987-88 is to be published shortly, but, because of the adoption of changes recommended in the reports of the steering group on NHS information (the Körner committee), it will not be in a directly comparable form.

Environmental Health Officers

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many training places are or were available to those wishing to qualify as environmental health officers in each of the last five years; and how many there will be for each of the next three years.

Mr. Mellor: Decisions on the training of environmental health officers are matters for local authorities, and we do not normally collect information centrally on the number of training places available. The table shows the number of student EHOs entering training in each of the last four years, according to information supplied by the Institution of Environmental Health Officers.

| 4 year degree course | 142 | 152 | 184 | 185 |

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the current shortage of environmental health officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 27 February at columns 64-65.

Management and Administration Costs

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his most up-to-date estimate of the proportion of hospital and community health services' expenditure spent on management and administration, including internal hospital management costs as well as management costs of regional and district health authorities; and what he expects the proportion to be when the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients" have been implemented.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 18 April 1989]: Information relating to hospital and community health services (HCHS) and derived from the 1987-88 summarised accounts of health authorities in England is shown in the table. Equivalent information for the financial year 1988-89 will be available in the autumn.

It is not possible to forecast the proportion of total expenditure which health authorities will incur on management and administration after the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients" have been implemented. However, since those proposals are designed to increase efficiency and to provide greater incentives to health authorities by encouraging both competition and cost consciousness we do not expect the proportion to increase significantly and moreover any increase in cash or in proportional terms should result in a more effective use of total resources for the benefit of patients.

Source: 1987-88 annual accounts of regional and district health authorities in England and those of the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals.

1. "HCHS" includes hospital, community health, patient transport (ie ambulance), blood transfusion and other services.
2. Expenditure on headquarters administration includes all current expenditure on the pay and pay related costs of staff of all disciplines (including general managers) employed at regional and district headquarters levels and their office costs and overheads.
3. Expenditure on general management and administrative offices etc. at operational levels includes all current expenditure on the pay and pay related costs of staff engaged on providing administrative services at hospital sites and units together with expenditure on printing, stationery and office sundries which cannot be specifically identified to other departments.
4. The cost of medical records departments (£135 million in 1987-88) is excluded.

Agency Nursing

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each district health authority and for each regional health authority the spending in 1988-89 or the latest available year on agency nursing in absolute terms and also as a percentage of total spending on nursing.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 10 July 1989]: The information derivable from 1987-88 annual accounts submitted to the Department have been placed in the Library. Equivalent information for 1988-89 will be available in the autumn.

NHS (Meals)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost of production, by region of (a) staff and (b) patient meals in the National Health Service; and what are the comparable figures for 1979, 1983 and 1988.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 13 July 1989]: The information is not available in the form requested. Information for England is however available as follows:

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions were performed in 1987 and 1988 on residents aged 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16 years at each of the following gestational ages: less than nine weeks, nine to 12 weeks, 13 to 16 weeks, 17 to 20 weeks, 21 to 24 weeks and 24 weeks and over on each of the seven grounds.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The exact information requested cannot be released on grounds of confidentiality; the tables show such data as can be released.

[1] Conditions of the statutory grounds are:

1. The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
2. The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk of injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman greater that if the pregnancy were terminated.
3. The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk or injury to the physical or mental health of any existing child(ren) in the family of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
4. There is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be handicapped.
5. To save the life of the pregnant woman.
6. To prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman.

Child Immunisation

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of the data available to him of rates for child immunisation and cervical screening by district health authority.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 July 1989]: Copies of the Department's "Summary of Vaccination and Immunisation 1977 to 1987-88" (which gives district health authority uptake rates for diphtheria, tetanus, polio, whooping cough and measles) were placed in the Library when it was published. I have sent the hon. Member a copy. Immunisation uptake rates for 1988-89 are not yet available. Information on cervical screening is not yet available because statistics to date have concentrated on numbers of smear tests performed rather than the number of women screened. We expect information for 1988-89 to become available later this year when health authority returns on Körner form KC53 ("Adult Screening Programme—Cervical Cytology") are received and analysed by the Department.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library data listing the number of cases of notified food poisoning in each of the last 10 years, by each environmental health authority, on the same basis as the data on Southwark provided in his reply to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms. Harman) of 29 June, Official Report, column 545.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 26 July 1989]: The information requested for the years 1979-86 can be found in the OPCS publication "Communicable Diseases Statistics", Seri[illegible] MB2, table 5, which can be found in the Library. A proof copy of table 5 for 1987, and provisional data for 1988 have been placed in the Library.

District Health Authorities (Assets)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of assets disposed of by each district health authority during 1987-88; and what was the total value of those assets.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 24 April 1989, c. 380]: Details of the assets disposed of by each district health authority are not routinely collected centrally.

However, all health authorities are encouraged to dispose of surplus assets and in many regions it is usual for the relevant regional health authority (RHA) to be involved in the major transactions and to account for the resultant income.

Information derivable from the 1987-88 annual accounts of regional and district health authorities in England and the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals have been placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners (Home Owners)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to help house-owning pensioners to gain access to the money they have tied up in their homes.

Mr. Chope: I have been asked to reply.

Home-owning pensioners are already able to raise capital on the equity of their homes by means of schemes often known as home income plans, which are offered by a number of financial institutions.

Under a home income plan, an older home owner offers his or her home as security for a mortgage loan which is used to purchase an annuity. The loan is usually repaid when the person sells the house or dies. The Government welcome the availability of such schemes, but I would strongly recommend elderly people to take independent financial advice before committing themselves.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many unemployed adult male and females of working age have exhausted their entitlement to unemployment benefit; what is his estimate of the gross cost of removing the time limit in the case of (a) males and (b) females; and what would be the saving in each case in (i) other benefits and (ii) increased tax.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In February 1989 there were approximately 542,000 men and 107,000 women claiming benefit who had exhausted their entitlement to unemployment benefit. The table sets out the estimated costs and benefit savings of removing the time limits.

Benefit costs and savings of removing unemployment benefit duration limit

| | Cost to UB (£ million) | Savings on other benefits (£ million) |
|---|---:|---:|
| Men | 1,100 | 800 |
| Women | 200 | 100 |

Notes:

1. This table assumes current levels of unemployment; costs and savings are calculated at 1989-90 benefit levels.
2. It is not possible to make a reliable estimate of the effect on tax receipts of such a change.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will publish in the Official Report a table on the same basis as that given in the written answer dated 20 March 1987 showing the total benefits paid out to the unemployed in 1987-88, 1988-89 and his forecast for 1989-90, together with payments from the redundancy fund, the percentage both represent of gross domestic product and the revenue from North sea oil.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Family Credit

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many family credit recipients there are in the Bolton area; and how many family income support recipients there were.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: At 7 July 1989 the number of families receiving family credit who, at the time their awards were made, were living in the area covered by the Bolton local social security office was 2,274. Information about family income supplement is not available on a local basis.

Pensions

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of pensioners who are now receiving the enhanced pensioner premium introduced by his Department on 9 October.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We estimate that some 2·6 million pensioners will benefit from the changes to be introduced in October, of whom some 1·1 million will qualify for the new enhanced pensioner premium in income support and housing benefit for people aged 75-79.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will publish in the Official Report, his best estimate of the number and proportion of (a) manual and (b) other workers covered by occupational pension schemes in the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Italy together with a table showing (i) the benefits available under state earnings-related pension and under the state schemes in the other three countries, and (ii) the amount distributed in state pensions annually, the current number of pensioners expressed as a percentage of the working population and the forecast for the years 2000 and beyond.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information relating to the membership of occupational pension schemes in the United Kingdom, France, Italy and Germany is not held on a manual/non-manual basis.

For information relating to the benefits available under state earnings-related pensions and under the state schemes in France, Germany and Italy. I refer the hon. Member to the "Tables of Social Benefit in EC Member States", a copy of which is held in the Library. The tables are produced annually: the latest addition gives the position at 1 January 1988.

There is no common definition of a state pension scheme which holds good for all four countries and therefore comparisons of total spending are not meaningful.

The population aged 65 and over expressed as a percentage of the population aged 15-64 in each of the four countries for 1980 with projections for 1990, 2000, 2010 and 2020 is as follows:

| | 1980 | 1990 | 2000 | 2010 | 2020 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| France | 22 | 21 | 23 | 25 | 31 |
| Germany | 23 | 22 | 25 | 31 | 34 |
| Italy | 21 | 20 | 23 | 26 | 29 |
| United Kingdom | 23 | 23 | 22 | 22 | 26 |

Source: OECD 1988

It is not possible to compute the number of pensioners in the above countries as only the United Kingdom has a unified state pension scheme.

Pensioner Households

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the cash and percentage changes in real equivalised incomes of each decile group of pensioner households for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Skye and Raasay

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many callers were dealt with at his Department's Portree office in each year from 1985 to 1988.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is as follows:

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| 1985 | 771 |
| 1986 | 1,216 |
| 1987 | 1,724 |
| 1988 | 2,029 |

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claimants have been in receipt of supplementary benefit on Skye and Raasay in each of the past five years;

(2) how many claimants were in receipt of income support on Skye and Raasay in each of the past five years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Skye and Raasay are administered by the local office in Fort William and no separate figures are held in respect of claimants resident on these islands. The information for the Fort William area as a whole is set out as follows:

Number of claimants in receipt of supplementary benefit at Fort William office 1984 to 1987

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 12 December 1984 | 2,596 |
| 11 December 1985 | 2,633 |
| 10 December 1986 | 2,707 |
| 18 November 1987 | 2,619 |

Number of claimants in receipt of income support at Fort William office in 1988

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 30 November 1988 | 2,448 |

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action, this will include cases where benefit is no longer in payment but other action is continuing.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many effective home visits to claimants' homes were made by staff of his Department's Fort William office on Skye and Raasay between 1 January and 30 June.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is as follows:

Number of effective home visits made between 1 January and 30 June

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Skye | 167 |
| Raasay | Nil |

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many effective home visits were made to claimants' homes by staff of his Department's Portree office in each year from 1985 to 1988.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information is available only from April 1988. From April 1988 to December 1988, 434 effective visits were made.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were registered as self-employed on Skye and Raasay at a convenient date in each of the past 10 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many telephone call units were charged on his Department's Portree office in each year from 1985 to 1988.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is as follows:

| Year | Call units |
|---|---|
| 1985 | 12,357 |
| 1986 | 32,504 |
| 1987 | 23,471 |
| 1988 | 27,020 |

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how much was paid to staff on his Department's Fort William office for travelling and subsistence in connection with work on Skye and Raasay between 1 January and 30 June.

(2) how much was paid to staff of his Department's Portree office for travelling and subsistence between 1 January and 30 June 1988.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Travel and subsistence expenditure for specific areas administered by the local office in Fort William is not collated separately. The information for the Fort William area as a whole is set out as follows:

Travel and subsistence expenditure for Fort William local office

| | £ |
|---|---|
| 1st January—30 June 1988 | 6,692 |
| 1st January—30 June 1989 | 12,383 |

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received regarding the revised arrangements for providing a social security service on Skye and Raasay.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: A number of representations have been received, the most recent in May 1989. The evidence to date shows that the revised arrangements are working extremely well.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to introduce the over-18 rate of housing benefit for under-18s; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my hon. Friend the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, South (Mr. Cryer) on 4 July at column 141.

Income Support

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many NPL forms on income support regarding applications for persons aged 75 years or over or 60 years or over and disabled have been distributed; what organisations have received forms directly; when the forms were first made available; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Approximately 5·7 million leaflets have been printed. All these leaflets have now been put out to the various outlets.

The following organisations were sent copies direct:

Citizens Advice Bureaux
Womens Royal Voluntary Service
Age Concern

The first copies were sent out on 7 July. Complete distribution took about two weeks.

In addition, the Department is collaborating with Talking Newspaper on the production of an audio cassette, and with the Royal National Institute for the Blind on a Braille version.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what (a) guidance and (b) training is given to staff asking 16 to 17-year-olds claiming income support questions on the nature of their estrangement from their parents.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The chief adjudication officer has issued guidance to staff on the issues, including estrangement, that need to be considered when deciding the entitlement of 16 and 17-year-olds to income support. Instructions on how this information should be obtained are contained in a circular to the income support manual.

A video-based training package on the specific problems of interviewing young people has been given to all staff responsible for undertaking such work. This emphasises the need for tact and sensitivity when questioning a person from a vulnerable sector of the community.

Postal Voting

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will include a postal vote application from in pension or allowance books issued to elderly or disabled persons.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No, as this would entail considerable operational difficulties and additional costs.

Mrs. C. Peake

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when Mrs. C. Peake of 30 Union street, Birkenhead, will receive her payment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Swindon (Mr. Coombs) of 17 April, Official Report, column 57, concerning women affected by the Social Security Commissioner's decision of 28 February.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: An order book at the revised higher rate was issued to Mrs. Peake on 20 July 1989, and a girocheque payment in respect of all arrears of widowed mothers' allowance was issued to her on 27 July 1989.

Pensioners (London Allowance)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning the case for a London allowance for pensioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Since 1 January 1989 we have received approximately five such representations.

Actively Seeking Work Test

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, in the light of the new test on actively seeking work, he has any plans to assess entitlement to unemployment benefit on a weekly rather than a daily basis.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Regulations provide for the new actively seeking work provision to operate with unemployment benefit assessed on a daily basis. We have no immediate plans to change to assessment on a weekly basis.

One-parent Families

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish an update of table 1.1 in the Green Paper, "Reform of Social Security", background papers volume 3, Cmnd. 9519 on the proportion of two and one-parent families separately, by working arrangements, in each quintile of income;

(2) if he will publish the latest figures of the number of one-parent families who are dependent on income support and part-time earnings;

(3) if he will publish the latest figures showing the number of one-parent families who are dependent on maintenance, by the type of one-parent family;

(4) if he will publish the latest figures showing the number of one-parent families claiming (a) family credit, (b) housing benefit and (c) both;

(5) if he will publish the latest figures showing the total amount collected in maintenance payments for one-parent families who are claiming benefits, broken down into the amount collected by his Department and by claimants themselves.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Single Payments

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the decision in the Carleton case in Northern Ireland has ever been used as a precedent to refuse a single payment in Great Britain.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I understand from the office of the chief adjudication officer that adjudication officers who are considering residual single payment claims for furniture and household equipment have been advised to take into account the decision of the Northern Ireland Court of Appeal in the Carleton case, to the extent that it was adopted by a tribunal of social security commissioners in a decision dated 26 June 1989.

Camberwell Social Security Office

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many callers have come to the Camberwell area social security office in each month over the last three years;

(2) how many live cases were recorded at the Camberwell area social security office each quarter over the last three years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is as follows:

Social Security Office (Southwark)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the conversion of the Odeon site into a social security office in Southwark is on target for completion in February 1991.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Present indications are that the completion on conversion work at the Odeon site will extend beyond March 1991. In the meantime preparations are being made for the implementation of the operational strategy and other service improvements, arising from the relocation of backroom work, in the existing Camberwell office. Similar improvements are planned for the Peckham office on completion of the move to the Odeon site.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children aged (a) under 16 years and (b) under 19 years lived in families where the head of the household is long-term unemployed at the latest date available.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Personal Pensions

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are being taken to ensure that members of personal pension schemes will be informed when they reach an age at which it would pay them to terminate their contributions to those schemes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is for an individual wishing to take out a personal pension to seek advice appropriate to his or her needs. In the case of personal pension schemes which are investments as defined in the Financial Services Act, persons regulated by bodies under that Act have a duty to provide best advice on such products. It is for the individual to make arrangements for obtaining any further advice which may be necessary in the light of changing circumstances.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for each of the examples in tables P1 to P4 of the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security", for how many years it would pay the person concerned to contribute to a personal pension or other money purchase scheme.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 24 July 1989]: I regret that the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, I will be able to provide some information and I will write to the hon. Member when it is available.

Spending Power

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish tables on spending power using the assumption in the answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 22 June 1988, Official Report, columns 571-575, but using expenditure and benefit figures appropriate for families in Langbaurgh, together with a column showing the extent of the differences resulting from the April changes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [pursuant to the holding answer 13 April 1989]: The information requested is set out in the tables. They compare the post-reform position in April 1988 not with an actual pre-reform cash situation but with a hypothetical position which might have occurred, had the previous structure continued and been uprated on the assumptions in "Impact of the Reformed Structure of Income Related Benefits" (October 1987).

In addition, it should be noted that although the comparisons are based on average local authority housing charges in Langbaurgh, they do not necessarily reflect either the wide variety of rents and domestic rates that people in the borough actually pay or real families' circumstances and their housing arrangements. Finally, the comparisons take no account of the housing benefit transitional cash protection announced on 27 April.

Benefit Statistics (Stockton)

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish tables using the assumptions in his answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 22 June 1988, Official Report, columns 575-80, but using expenditure and benefit figures appropriate for families in Stockton, together with a column showing the extent of the differences resulting from the April changes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Pursuant to the holding answer of 17 May 1989, the information requested is set out in the tables. They compare the post-reform position in April 1988 not with an actual pre-reform cash situation but with a hypothetical position which might have occurred had the previous structure continued and been uprated on the assumptions in "Impact of the Reformed Structure of Income Related Benefits" (October 1987).

In addition, it should be noted that although the comparisons are based on average local authority housing charges in Stockton they do not necessarily reflect either the wide variety of rents and domestic rates that people in the borough actually pay or real families' circumstances and their housing arrangements. Finally, the comparisons take no account of the housing benefit transitional cash protection announced on 27 April.

Benefits

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his reply to the right hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham, 17 July, Official Report, columns 39-40, if he will publish estimates of expenditure on child additions paid with national insurance benefit in 1978-79 and 1988-89.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The value of the child additions paid with national insurance benefits in 1988 was approximately £130 million. A similar estimate for 1978 is not available.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest esimate of the total numbers of (a) families and (b) persons dependent on income support, housing benefit or family credit; and how the figures are likely to be affected by the community charge benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Pursuant to the holding answer of 24 July 1989, on the basis of the readily available information for 1988, approximately 1⅔ million families with children (including lone parent families) got at least some of their income from income support, family credit and/or housing benefit. The total number of men, women and children (including young persons aged under 19) getting some income from these sources was approximately 12 million. I will write to my right hon. Friend concerning the remaining part of his inquiry.

Vaccine Damage Payments

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 6 July, column 245, when the details of the 1980 vaccine damage payments were destroyed; who gave the authorisation for their destruction; what are the normal arrangements for dealing with such information; and if a summary was made of the information before it was destroyed;

(2) pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 6 July, column 245, if he will explain how some of the records for the 1981 and 1982 vaccine damage payments were lost; and what further steps he is taking to find them.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 25 July 1989]: I am writing to the right hon. Member about the arrangements under which the 1980 records were destroyed and about those for 1981 and 1982 which are missing. I am pleased to say, however, that we have been able to elicit from other sources all the information he requested. Details have been placed in the Library.

Income Statistics

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures for 1979-80 and 1989-90 showing (a) net incomes and (b) disposable incomes for a single-wage married couple with two children under five years and a lone mother with two children under five years, at half, two thirds, average and twice average earnings; using the same assumptions for housing costs as in the DSS tax-benefit model tables.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Judiciary (Appointments)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General what proposals the Government have to increase the number of solicitors appointed to the judiciary.

The Solicitor-General: The Lord Chancellor has made clear on a number of occasions his wish to see more solicitors appointed to judicial office. "Legal Services: A Framework for the Future" (Cm. 740) published on 19 July sets out the Government's proposals for extending eligibility for higher judicial office to solicitors. In addition, pilot schemes have been set up in certain parts of the country with the specific aim of identifying solicitors suitable for appointment, and, as part of the regular programme of reviews of candidates for judicial appointment, a special initiative has been taken to consult the judiciary about solicitor candidates on the south eastern circuit. It is hoped to extend this initiative to the other circuits shortly.

Legal Aid

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the chair of the Legal Aid Board; and whether he discussed the franchising or contracting of legal services.

The Solicitor-General: My right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor has ministerial responsibility for legal aid. At his request, the legal aid board is currently considering the future arrangements for providing advice and assistance under the green form scheme. As part of that review, the board recently issued a consultation document which contains proposals for the future provision of advice through franchises involving solicitors' firms, law centres and, possibly, advice agencies. The board will be bringing forward recommendations to the Lord Chancellor once the review has been completed.

Law Centres

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General how many and which law centres (a) he, (b) the Lord Chancellor and (c) the Solicitor-General have visited since 1987.

The Solicitor-General: (a) none; (b) one (to the North Kensington law centre); (c) none.

Malicious Communications

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General where information regarding prosecutions made under the Malicious Communications Act 1988 in the London metropolitan areas is held; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have been asked to reply.

I shall write to the hon. and learned Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

County Courts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Attorney-General what has been the increase in the county court caseload over the last three years; and what increases there have been over a similar period in numbers of county court (a) judges, (b) registrars and (c) administrative staff.

The Solicitor-General: There is no single measure of caseload in the county courts; the work initially comes from the commencement of proceedings, but further work results from all stages of the procedures including enforcement. The increase in the number of proceedings commenced between 1985 and 1988 was 5 per cent. The number of proceedings initiated is continuing to increase. Over the same period the number of circuit judges (who also deal with Crown Court work) and county court registrars in office on 1 April of each year increased by 7 per cent. and 19 per cent. respectively. Similarly the number of staff (including bailiffs and ushers) in post in county courts on 1 April increased by 8 per cent. between 1985 and 1988. These figures include a number of staff employed in combined court centres on county court work.

Westminster City Council

Mr Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will ask the Director of Public Prosecutions to consider allegations of a criminal conspiracy by Westminster city council to defraud the ratepayers of the City of Westminster.

The Solicitor-General: Preliminary police inquiries have been made into the sale of cemeteries by the Westminster city council. The director has requested further inquiries and will consider the matter when they have been completed. Other than that inquiry, the director has not had referred to him any allegations of fraudulent conduct by councillors or officials of the Westminster city council.

One former official is presently the subject of proceedings for corruption arising out of an entirely unrelated matter.

West Midlands Police

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney General how many West Midlands police officers are or have been the subject of reports referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions within the last 12 months.

The Solicitor-General: The information requested is not readily available. However, a total of 150 reports relating to allegations concerning one or more West Midlands police officers were received by the Director of Public Prosecutions office in the period 1 July 1988 to 26 July 1989.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Attorney-General if he has yet received the Director of Public Prosecutions' report on the Crown Prosecution service for the year 1988-89; and when the report will be laid before Parliament.

The Solicitor-General: I have received the proof of this report and a copy of the proof has been placed in the Journal Office today. The report will be published later this summer and copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Immigration

Mr. Darling: To ask the Attorney-General if he will publish a table of the number of appeals to the immigration appeal tribunal allowed and dismissed in 1988 and the first quarter of 1989.

The Solicitor-General: The information requested is as follows:

| | Allowed | Remitted for re-hearing before an Immigration Adjudicator | Dismissed |
|---|---|---|---|
| Appeals heard in 1988 | 266 | 308 | 378 |

Mr. Darling: To ask the Attorney-General if he will publish a table showing the number of appeals to immigration adjudicators allowed and dismissed in 1988 and the first quarter of 1989; broken down according to the nationality of the appellant and the type of decision appealed against.

The Attorney-General: The information requested is set out in the tables.

Personal Injury

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Attorney-General how many complaints he has received about the delay in payments being made in personal injury cases by the county court in Liverpool; what representations he has received on this matter; what his reponse has been; and what plans he has to increase staff resources.

The Solicitor-General: A number of complaints have been received about delays in paying out suitors' money from Liverpool county court. Information is not readily available which would show how many of these cases are personal injury actions. Where money has been paid into court in satisfaction of a claim and the court is responsible for an unreasonable delay in paying out, the Lord Chancellor will consider the payment of interest of the capital sum for the period of the delay. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the written answer to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Broadgreen (Mr. Fields) dated 6 June 1989 at column 1, in relation to the steps being taken to remedy certain problems at Liverpool county court.

DEFENCE

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is not readily available in the form requested. In January this year the Ministry of Defence received some 357 letters from right hon. and hon. Members, and some 2,223 from the beginning of the Session until 1 July. The number of letters sent to right hon. and hon. Members during these periods will have been higher, but a precise figure could be established only at disproportionate cost.

Rhu Narrows (Dredging)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Trident-related contract for the dredging of the Rhu narrows to be placed and the date when the contract will commence.

Mr. Chope: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to the hon. Member.

Armed Forces (Recruits)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of new recruits to the armed forces nationally in each of the last three years; and what number of these recruits originated from Bolton.

Mr. Neubert: The total number of recruits to the regular forces in each of the last three financial years was as follows:

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 34,049 |
| 1987-88 | 33,826 |
| 1988-89 | 33,863 |

It is not possible to give precise figures on the number of recruits who originated from Bolton without checking each recruit's personal file. However, the following figures show the number of recruits enlisted at the Army's career information office at Bolton, although it is possible some did not actually live in Bolton at the time:

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 153 |
| 1987-88 | 170 |
| 1988-89 | 148 |

It is not possible to give comparable figures for officer applicants, as they are handled centrally, or for Royal Navy and Royal Air Force recruits, as these services do not have offices in Bolton.

Defence Estimates

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide an explanation of the fluctuations in the levels of expenditure in the category "Other Army Combat Forces: Other Areas since 1985-86", as set in table 2.3 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989", volume two.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This category consists of the costs of the Belize garrison and personnel and freight transport costs around the world. The latter varies annually with activity levels and fuel costs.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what categories of equipment are included in the budget item, "Expenditure on equipment: Other" in table 2.2 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989", volume two; and if he will make a statement on trends in this item since 1987-88.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This sub-heading includes miscellaneous expenditure on such items as plant, machinery and works services at the R & D establishments and other outstations; technology demonstrator programmes; research equipment for the Meteorological Office; extra-mural research contracts with universities and industry; royalties; payments to the Civil Aviation Authority; and computers. It is difficult to infer general trends from figures which are derived from so many such disparate items.

RAF War Stocks

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the level of expenditure on RAF war stocks in each year since 1983-84, expressed in constant 1989-90 prices, applying the basis of attribution of war stocks used prior to 1986-87.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the reasons for the changes in the basis of calculation of RAF war stocks in 1986-87 and 1987-88 noted on page 10 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989", volume two.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The RAF war stocks figures reflect judgments about the attribution of the missiles or bombs to be purchased in a year between war stocks and peace-time consumption. The figures for 1986-87 were calculated on the basis of a new and narrower definition of war and contingency stocks (for example, they included gun ammunition but not missiles). In retrospect, however, these assumptions were not felt to have been as realistic as those previously used and subsequent figures have been calculated on a wider basis.

United States Government

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to meet representatives of the United States Government; and what matters he expects to discuss.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend next expects to meet representatives of the United States Government at the nuclear planning group in the autumn when a range of matters of mutual interest will be discussed.

TA Marksmen

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of territorial soldiers who have qualified as marksmen over the last 15 years; and if he will tabulate the average number of rounds shot by Territorial Army soldiers in rifle practice by district and for sponsored and independent units for the last five years.

Mr. Neubert: The figures requested are not held centrally and it would not be possible to provide them without disproportionate cost.

NATO Nuclear Planning Group

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the NATO nuclear planning group last met; and what items were on the agenda.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Provan (Mr. Wray) on 9 May at column 718.

TA (Recruitment)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost to date of the current recruitment drive for the Territorial Army.

Mr. Neubert: The volunteer reserve forces campaign, which emanated from a recommendation by the national employers liaison committee and which was launched in September of last year, will cost £2 million per annum over a period of five years. It should be stressed that the prime objective of this campaign is to improve retention with the reserve forces of all services. We would, however, hope to see some spin-off on recruitment.

Free-fall Nuclear Bomb

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations he has had with the West German Government about the possible replacement of the WE177 free-fall nuclear bomb.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

West German Defence Minister

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he is next meeting his West German counterpart; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend hopes to meet Dr. Stoltenberg at some time in the autumn to review the close defence relationship which we enjoy with the Federal Republic of Germany and to discuss matters of current bilateral interest.

Troop Numbers

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect on the British Army of the proposals tabled in Vienna for ceilings on troop numbers.

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect on the British Army of the proposals tabled in Vienna for ceilings on troop numbers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO has made no specific manpower proposals at the CFE talks in Vienna affecting the British Army.

Warsaw Pact

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department now has any evidence that the Warsaw pact is changing its military doctrine.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) on 11 April 1989 at column 732.

Skyguard Radar

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the height-monitoring radar system Skyguard to begin operating in the Borders; and whether he will report on the results of the monitoring.

Mr. Neubert: I will write to the right hon. Member.

Pilots

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many pilots are trained by the armed services each year; how many qualified pilots remain in the services for (a) five years and (b) 10 years after qualifying; how many are recruited by civil airlines; and if any of the cost of training is recouped from the civil airlines.

Mr. Neubert: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Low Flying

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints he has received this year about low-flying military aircraft.

Mr. Neubert: Between 1 January and 30 June 1989 the Ministry of Defence received 3,569 inquiries and complaints about military low-flying training in the United Kingdom.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department has obtained a copy of the United States air forces in Europe document, "USAF Tactical Fighter Low-Level Flying Training in the Federal Republic of Germany Data Book", December 1988; and what plans he has to prepare a document setting out the rationales and requirements for Royal Air Force low flying over West Germany.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 10 July 1989]: My Department has a copy of this document. There are no plans to prepare a similar document covering Royal Air Force low flying over the Federal Republic of Germany.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what date the Chepstow transit area was abolished; what was the specific reason for its abolition; and if he will list the parliamentary constituencies over which low flying is newly permitted, or within which the area available for low flying is extended, as a result of this measure;

(2) on what date that part of the London/Thames Valley avoidance area between Aylesbury and Chippenham and between Reading and Banbury was abolished; what was the specific reason for its abolition; and if he will list the parliamentary constituencies over which low flying is newly permitted, or within which the area available for low flying is extended, as a result of this measure.

Mr. Neubert [holding answers 10 July and 20 July 1989]: It is not our practice to publish detailed information on the United Kingdom low-flying system. As part of the continuous monitoring of the United Kingdom low-flying system, however, a programme of reviews of avoidance areas is carried out and changes made when necessary, reflecting changes on the ground, and aimed at spreading low flying more evenly and enhancing flight safety, while at the same time reducing, where possible, the disturbance to those on the ground.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of low-level training flights are flown at night; what changes in this proportion have occurred since 1979; and what definition of night is used in compiling this figure.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 10 July 1989]: It is estimated that night low-flying training continues to account for some 5 per cent. of military low flying training activity in the United Kingdom. I have nothing further to add to my predecessor's answer of 10 November 1987 to the hon. Member at column 38.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many low-level sorties were flown over the United Kingdom in each year since 1985 by United States Air Force aircraft from units not based in this country;

(2) how many Skyguard radar systems are to be employed on low-flying monitoring duties; and on what date they are due to enter service in this role;

(3) how many sorties were flown in the United Kingdom low-flying system by F16 aircraft in each year since 1985;

(4) how many sorties were flown in the United Kingdom low-flying system by (a) F-104, (b) Hunter, (c) Canberra, (d) Lynx, (e) Gazelle, (f) Sea King, (g) Puma, (h) Wessex, (i) Chinook, (j) Hercules, (k) Dominie, (l) Jet Provost, (m) Hawk, (n) Jaguar, (o) Buccaneer, (p) Harrier, (q) Phantom, (r) Tornado and (s) A-10, aircraft in each year since 1985;

(5) if a quota system, specifying a maximum number of aircraft permitted to operate in a specific low-flying area, is in operation in the United Kingdom low-flying system; and if he will make a statement;

(6) if he will list the categories of information required to be provided by military aircrew to Royal Air Force West Drayton when booking in to the United Kingdom low-flying system;

(7) if the low-flying regulations permit military pilots to fly their aircraft at speeds greater than 450 knots in order to catch up with other aircraft when changing or re-establishing formations at low-level;

(8) on how many occasions in 1988 Royal Air Force police covert monitoring of low-flying in the United Kingdom detected breaches of low-flying regulations;

(9) what agreements have been reached with the West German authorities since 30 January on reductions in the number of Royal Air Force low-level flights over West Germany;

(10) what information he can provide on the number of sorties flown at low level by United States Air Force aircraft, broken down by aircraft type;

(11) what is the minimum distance from the coast of Britain at which low flying over the sea at 100 ft minimum separation distance is authorised;

(12) what low-level air training activity was carried out at weekends over the Wash between 6 May and 25 June; and how many and what types of aircraft took part;

(13) what means are used by aircrew of military aircraft operating in the United Kingdom low flying system to advise Royal Air Force West Drayton when remaining within a low flying area beyond the booked period;

(14) what proportion of fixed-wing low flying at less than 250 ft over the United Kingdom in 1988 consisted of aircrew continuation training;

(15) what was the total number of complaints received about low-flying military aircraft in each month from January 1989 onwards; and how many of these came from addresses in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland;

(16) what was the total number of low-flying sorties over the United Kingdom in each month from January 1989 onwards;

(17) what, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy of 10 July, Official Report, column 386, are the normal and long-standing arrangements applicable to public records in the Ministry of Defence referred to;

(18) why it is not Her Majesty's Government's practice to release detailed information about the United Kingdom low flying system;

(19) how many air misses involving British military aircraft were reported over the Federal Republic of Germany in each year since 1985;

(20) how many air misses involving military aircraft operating in the night low-flying system were reported for the period 1 June 1988 to 9 October 1988, inclusive.

Mr. Neubert: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Goose Bay, Canada

Mr. Neubert: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Tail Fins (Painting)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of painting the tail fins of Royal Air Force aircraft in bright colours; what proportion of the front-line fast jet fleet has had these colours applied; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Bilateral Military Links

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the proposals made and agreements reached since 30 January in the Anglo-German study group on bilateral military links.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In addition to the measures announced on 30 January, the British-German study group has continued to look for opportunities to increase bilateral co-operation. In February it was announced that consideration would be given to the formation of a joint air defence unit in the Federal Republic, and the feasibility of this is being examined. The study group will report to Ministers on its further work in the autumn.

"British Defence Policy"

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department last published a copy of the pamphlet "British Defence Policy"; which external design consultants were contracted; how many copies were printed; how many were distributed; through which outlets; and what was the total cost of design, printing and publication.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bradford, South (Mr. Cryer) on 11 May 1989 at column 523. "British Defence Policy 1989-90" was published on 4 May 1989. The contract for the design and printing of the booklet was let, by competitive tender, to Mason Clark McKenna Ltd. About 2,500 copies remain with the Ministry of Defence public relations staff for distribution. The total final cost of design, printing and publication, including staff costs, was £115,599.

(3) what plans his Department has for using depleted uranium;

(4) what proportions of the depleted uranium metal acquired by his Department came from sources (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in the United States and (c) in other countries.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Greenham Common

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has yet decided on the future use of (a) RAF Greenham Common and (b) RAF Molesworth following the removal of missiles and associated equipment under the intermediate nuclear forces treaty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The future of RAF Molesworth is still under consideration, although we envisage continuing to make it available to the United States authorities for military purposes. No decision has been taken about the future of RAF Greenham Common but we expect that it will continue to be designated as a standby operating base.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the timetable for removal of missiles from RAF Greenham Common under the intermediate range nuclear forces treaty; and when the first of these missiles is to be removed.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Under the terms of the Washington treaty, all of the 96 operational ground-launched cruise missiles currently based at RAF Greenham Common will have been removed and eliminated by 31 May 1991. For operational reasons, it is our policy not to reveal in advance precise dates concerning the removal programme.

AWE Aldermaston

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the proposed tritium research and development facility to be built at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall write to the hon. Member.

RAF Upper Heyford

(2) if, in the light of the recent cases regarding the highway known as the Portway at RAF Upper Heyford and the challenges over his Department's use of land at RAF Greenham Common, he will review his Department's policies regarding acquisition and use of military lands;

(3) in which year the land, over which the highway known as the Portway at RAF Upper Heyford runs, was acquired by his Department; and in which year this land was closed off by fencing;

(4) what steps he will take to ensure public right of access to the highway known as the Portway at RAF Upper Heyford.

Mr. Neubert: I shall write to the hon. Member.

El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether training facilities are offered to representatives of the armed forces of El Salvador; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No training assistance is provided to the armed forces of El Salvador at present.

Ulster Defence Regiment (Resignations)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the number of persons who have been asked to resign from the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve since 1985 as a result of having been charged with crimes, giving separately details of persons who resigned as a result of being charged with scheduled offences.

Mr. Neubert: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Army (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the manpower strength of the British Army in Northern Ireland; and if he will give details of the number of operatives for the categories (a) UDR, Regular British Army, and (b) British Territorial Army on 31 December 1988 and 30 June 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The figures for 31 December 1988 and for 31 March 1989 (the latest available) are as follows:

| | 31 December 1988 | 31 March 1989 |
|---|---|---|
| Ulster Defence Regiment | 6,312 | 6,342 |
| Regular Army | 9,695 | 9,658 |
| Territorial Army | 3,755 | 3,812 |

The figures for the Ulster Defence Regiment include both full time and part-time soldiers. Soldiers of the Territorial Army are not used in support of the RUC in counter-terrorist operations.

Retired Officer Posts

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the basis of comparability between those employed in his Department's retired officer posts and the administrative class of the Civil Service will be re-established.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Military Facilities

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which military facilities Soviet Defence Minister Yazov inspected on his recent visit to the United Kingdom; which of these facilities is open for visits by United Kingdom citizens; and if he will make a statement on the benefit to the United Kingdom-Soviet Union relations of the visit.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: General Yazov visited RAF Leuchars, HMS Invincible, the Parachute Regiment depot and the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst. All of these are open to the general public from time to time. General Yazov's successful visit is an important milestone in bilateral relations and has contributed significantly to improved mutual understanding in the defence and security field.

Gruinard Island

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if agricultural production is now permitted on Gruinard Island;

(2) when restrictions on visits to the Gruinard Island were (a) first put in place and (b) ended or removed.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Animals (Experiments)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the different animals used by his Department in experiments.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Defence Expenditure

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by how much spending on defence has increased in real terms over the past 10 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Defence expenditure in 1988-89 was some 16 per cent. higher in real terms than in 1978-79, excluding the effect of general inflation measured by the GDP deflator.

Nuclear Forces (Deployment)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the thresholds of aggression at which nuclear forces will be deployed by NATO; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The possible use of nuclear weapons in response to an attack is central to NATO's policy of flexible response. However, it would undermine deterrence to spell out in advance the precise circumstances in which nuclear weapons would or might be used.

Armed Forces (Personnel)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether, following the findings of the MARILYN report regarding the difficulty and cost of maintaining current personnel levels in the armed forces, he proposes to conduct a defence review; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The "Statement on the defence Estimates" explained (volume I, paragraphs 513-518) the changing factors affecting the recruitment and retention of service personnel, and some of the measures we are taking to deal with the problems. There is no question of a defence review.

Hunting

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the dates and locations of all occasions when Ministry of Defence land has been used for hunting with hounds in the last 12 months;

(2) what are the costs of transporting riders and horses from the Household Cavalry to (a) meets of the New Forest buckhounds and (b) meets of the Vale of the White Horse hunt, Gloucestershire;

(3) what information he has on the number of Army personnel who have been involved in hunting and in other duties associated with hunting in the past 12 months; whether paid leave of absence is granted for these duties; and how many duty hours were involved;

(4) whether, when Ministry of Defence land is used for hunting, adjoining landowners are contacted in the case of the hounds or riders entering on to their land.

Mr. Neubert: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Government Property (Hire)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Ministry of Defence personnel are permitted to hire Government property for personal use.

Mr. Neubert: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Environmental Pollution

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has assessed the United States Department of Energy's report on radioactive and toxic contamination at its military production facilities, released in January, in order to ascertain whether the details have relevance for the United Kingdom's environmental management practice at his Department's nuclear facilities.

Mr. Alan Clark [holding answer 13 July 1989]: I shall write to the hon. Member.

EMPLOYMENT

Wages Councils

Mr. Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received on the future of wages councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend the former Minister of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) on 21 March, Official Report, columns 555-56. Reconsideration of the responses has shown that the second sentence in the narrative paragraph following the table in that reply should have read: "Replies by employer bodies represented on the six largest councils, which embrace 94 per cent. of the workers covered by the system, show that a majority of respondents want the councils abolished". Of the 138 seats held by employer bodies on these councils 83 are held by bodies wanting abolition, 30 by those wanting retention and 25 by non-respondents.

Earnings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the United Kingdom, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan and the United States of America the income of employees and the self-employed respectively as a percentage of national income in 1959, 1969, 1979 and the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply.

I shall answer when resources permit.

YTS

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many YTS starts and how many leavers were recorded by each payment type, by male and female, and by one or two-year training entitlement by standard Training Agency region for Great Britain as a whole, and for each of the last three months.

Mr. Nicholls: As the information is contained in several tables I shall write to the hon. Member with the information requested and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of YTS trainees leave before the completion of their two-year programme.

Mr. Eggar: The latest information from the YTS leavers survey shows that, excluding re-entrants, 72 per cent. of trainees left YTS four weeks or more before completing their two-year entitlement to training, in the period between March 1987 and February 1989.

The proportion of early leavers in this period is not typical of YTS as a whole, since a two-year entitlement could not be completed before April 1989. The percentage of early leavers is falling as more months with a representative mixture of completers and early leavers are included in the estimate.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the numbers or proportions of trainees who leave YTS within 13, 26, 39 and 52 weeks, respectively, by Training Agency region.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The information requested is given in the table.

Table to show the percentage of all leavers who leave YTS in the time bands shown by region

| | 13 per cent. | 26 per cent. | 39 per cent. | 52 per cent. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| South East | 21 | 14 | 11 | 19 |
| London | 25 | 15 | 11 | 20 |
| South West | 21 | 13 | 11 | 19 |
| West Midlands | 25 | 15 | 12 | 16 |
| East Midlands & Eastern | 23 | 14 | 11 | 17 |
| Yorks and Humberside | 25 | 14 | 11 | 17 |
| North West | 27 | 14 | 11 | 14 |
| Northern | 23 | 13 | 11 | 15 |
| Wales | 24 | 14 | 11 | 18 |
| Scotland | 28 | 15 | 11 | 17 |

Tourism

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will set out his present responsibilities in relation to tourism.

Mr. Nicholls: The Secretary of State for Employment is responsible for tourism policy in England and for overall tourism in Great Britain. The Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales are responsible for tourism policy in their countries.

Travel-to-interview Scheme

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will increase the basic eligibility wage level to applicants for the travel-to-interview scheme.

Mr. Eggar: Following a recent review of the eligibility criteria for the travel-to-interview scheme, it has been decided to increase the upper salary limit to £16,500 with effect from 11 September 1989.

Dock Labour

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he now has for the maintenance of current standards of enforcement of health and safety arrangements in scheme ports in the United Kingdom in the event of the termination of the current scheme for employment of dock labour.

Mr. Nicholls: Primary responsibility for health and safety at work lies with employers and others in the workplace. Inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive have enforcement powers to ensure that employers comply with their duties under health and safety legislation, which applied in scheme and non-scheme ports alike. The abolition of the dock labour scheme has not affected these arrangements.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he now intends to take to ensure that current arrangements for determining remuneration and conditions of service in non-scheme ports shall be continued in the event of the termination of the present dock labour scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: The dock labour scheme was abolished by the Dock Work Act 1989 which came into effect on 3 July. Arrangements for settling the terms and conditions of employment in all British ports are a matter for the employers directly concerned and their employees.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the numbers employed in manufacturing in the United Kingdom, United States of America, West Germany, France, Italy and Japan in 1959, 1968, 1979 and at the latest available date.

Mr. Eggar: The earliest year for which information is available for all the countries except Italy, is 1963. The information is shown in the table.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will publish in the Official Report (a) the number of unemployed who have not worked for at least a year and (b) the number who last worked in manufacturing industry by full-time, part-time, sex and adult status.

Mr. Nicholls: Data for each of the groups requested, on a comparable basis, is available only from the labour force survey (LFS). A preliminary estimate from the spring 1988 LFS of the number of unemployed (ILO/OECD definition) aged 16 or over in Great Britain, who left their last job 12 months or more prior to interview, is 1,191,000.

Other preliminary estimates, as requested, are shown in the following table:

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide full details of the number of people who are receiving unemployment benefit for part of a week who are also working part-time (a) at the latest available date, (b) over the last 12 months and (c) in the preceding two years.

Mr. Eggar: This information is not available.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of people employed in (a) the textile industry and (b) the clothing industry for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Health and Safety

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many companies have been subjected to legal proceedings by the Health and Safety Executive due to their breach of regulation 7 of the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazard Regulations 1984.

Mr. Nicholls: None.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many health and safety prosecutions by the Health and Safety Executive were carried out in (a) magistrates courts and (b) Crown courts, in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholls: Available information is set out in the table:

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average financial penalty imposed in successful health and safety prosecutions brought by the Health and Safety Executive in each of the last five years for which figures are available (a) in magistrates courts and (b) in Crown courts.

[5] Data currently being processed.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the policy of the chief inspector of factories as to whether health and safety at work cases should be prosecuted in magistrates courts or Crown courts.

Mr. Nicholls: It is a decision for magistrates courts whether a case should be committed on indictment to the Crown court. Health and Safety Executive inspectors can make representations asking for committal, and will normally do so where they consider a particularly serious offence has been committed, or where the case seems of national significance.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total number of factories and other places of work for which the Health and Safety Executive is responsible for enforcing the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974; how many of these have been basically inspected by the factory inspectorate in each of the last four years; and how many have received no inspection in the last (a) five, (b) seven, (c) nine and (d) 11 or more years.

Mr. Nicholls: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the names of those companies which are currently in breach of the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards (CIMAH) Regulations 1984 by not having submitted a full safety case under regulation 7 to the Health and Safety Executive by 30 June.

Mr. Nicholls: No. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) does not make publicly available the names of companies which may not have complied with health and safety and other related legislation unless enforcement notices have been served which have implications for the safety of the public. Details of these are available on the publicly accessible registers kept at HSE's local area offices.

Factory Inspections

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any figures which indicate, on a comparable basis, the frequency of factory inspections in each of the European Community countries.

Mr. Nicholls: Direct comparisons of this kind are very difficult because of differences in enforcement arrangements and statistical systems.

Evidence on these issues was given by the Health and Safety Commission to the Employment Select Committee and this is recorded in the minutes of evidence for 28 January 1987, "The Work of the Health and Safety Commission and the Health and Safety Executive", House of Commons paper 164, part 1, which is available in the House Library.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he has any indication of when a common standard and frequency of factory inspection will be established throughout the European Community countries;

(2) what representations he has received seeking the establishment of a common standard and frequency of factory inspection throughout the European Community countries.

Mr. Nicholls: I am aware of concern about consistency of enforcement standards in the European Community, from various contacts with both sides of United Kingdom industry. I share the view of the Health and Safety Commission, in its latest plan of work, on the need to ensure that Community legislation is implemented and enforced in an even-handed way in all member states. There is no quick or easy solution; the United Kingdom will take every opportunity—in relevant contacts with the Community institutions and with other member states—to promote greater attention to the issue.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) in which newspapers, periodicals and so on, and at what cost, the post of deputy director general of the Health and Safety Executive was advertised;

(2) who were the members of the interview panel which interviewed candidates for the post of deputy director general of the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Commission did not advertise this appointment and there is no statutory or other obligation on it to do so.

The appointment was made by the commission with the approval of the Secretary of State for Employment, after consultation with the director general of the Health and Safety Executive, and on terms approved by the Minister for the Civil Service, as is the case with any appointment of a member of the executive. The commission is well acquainted with Mr. Eves' qualifications and talents.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of Health and Safety Executive area directors currently hold formal professional management qualifications.

Mr. Nicholls: A formal professional management qualification is not a prerequisite for appointment to the post of area director. They are all given appropriate training to ensure that they have the management skills necessary to perform their duties. There are currently 20 area directors employed by the Health and Safety Executive; 20 per cent. hold formal professional management qualifications.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of Health and Safety Executive area directors are currently aged under 50 years.

Mr. Nicholls: Thirty per cent. of area directors employed by the Health and Safety Executive are under the age of 50.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of the field force of (a) doctors and (b) nurses, employed by the medical division of the Health and Safety Executive are aged 50 years and over.

Mr. Nicholls: Fifty-nine per cent. of the doctors employed in the field force of the Health and Safety Executive medical division, are aged 50 or over. For nurses, the proportion is 48 per cent.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the contents of "Health and Safety—an alternative report on the work of the Health and Safety Executive in 1988" produced by the Institution of Professional Civil Servants.

Mr. Nicholls: I have not received a copy of this report.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for each year since 1979, the numbers of people disqualified from unemployment benefit by (a) occupation, (b) age and (c) length of disqualification both in total and as a percentage of those receiving such benefit.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is not collected and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Employment Training

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those local authorities which are presently participating in the ET scheme.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has about local authorities which do not intend to renew their participation in ET schemes.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend is aware of the following local authorities which will not be renewing their participation in employment training:

Wolverhampton metropolitan borough council
Cleveland county council
Leicester city council
Similar action is expected by Mansfield district council.

European Social Fund

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what is the increase in the level of central Government funding from the European social fund in 1989 over 1988; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the split in Britain's European social fund allocation between central Government and the voluntary sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: For 1988 the European Commission allocated over £215 million to programmes run by central Government. For 1989 the allocation was £236 million while around £26 million was allocated to the voluntary sector. We view the continued support of the European Commission through the European social fund as of great importance in our efforts to improve training opportunities and combat unemployment.

Social Charter

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he supports health and safety in the workplace provisions contained within the social charter.

Mr. Eggar: The Council of Ministers has recently adopted a European Community directive, setting out a framework for health and safety in the workplace, which we supported. This broadly mirrors our own Health and Safety at Work etc. Act. We are continuing discussions on a number of directives dealing with specific areas.

The Government have made it clear that they see no point in the Commission's proposal for a Communitywide social charter.

Prices and Wages

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the percentage by which (a) the retail prices index and (b) the average wage level has increased in each EEC country, the United States of America, Japan, Sweden, the EEC and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development as a whole since the start of 1988.

Mr. Eggar: The dates for which information has been compiled vary a great deal between countries so it is impossible to make a comparison which is both comprehensive and up-to-date. All the available information is given in tables 5.9 and 6.8 of the Employment Gazette, which is available in the Library.

Random Omnibus Survey

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list (a) all the questions relating to employment that were asked in the survey carried out by NOP Market Research Limited in the NOP random omnibus survey in the two weeks from 22 February and (b) the detailed answers that were given to these questions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 17 April 1989]: The main findings of the survey were set out in the Green Paper "Removing Barriers to Employment" (Cm 655) published on 20 March 1989. I regret that I was unable to provide the hon. Member with a full reply on 17 April. Detailed analyis of the data is still taking place and a full analysis will be published in an article in the Employment Gazette later in the year.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he intends to give a substantive reply to the question from the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East concerning the NOP random survey, tabled for priority written answer on 17 April; what are the reasons for the delay in answering; and what is the longest interval between the asking of a priority written question and its answer by his Department in this Parliament.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 26 June 1989]: I regret I was unable to give the hon. Member a full reply on 17 April or 26 June.

I have answered the hon. Member's question of 17 April today.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons in the west midlands region were disqualified from receiving unemployment benefit during the period 1 January to 31 March because they were considered to have left their employment voluntarily without just cause and were disqualified for the maximum period of 26 weeks.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 26 July 1989]: For the period 1 January to 31 March 1989, the number of persons in the west midlands region who were disqualified for receiving unemployment benefit because they were considered to have left their employment voluntarily without just cause was 4,471.

Information requested on the number of claimants disqualified for the maximum period of 26 weeks is not collected. However, the Department of Social Security has undertaken a survey to establish the proportion of claims which are disqualified for the maximum period, including those disqualified for leaving employment without just cause. An initial analysis of a sample of cases indicates that the full 26-week period is imposed in less than two thirds of the cases. The information obtained from the survey is still being analysed and will be published in full shortly.

Agriculture Inspectors

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many farms on average each agricultural inspector has within his responsibility; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive's agricultural inspectorate has approximately 272,000 farm premises on its records.

The inspectorate targets its visits according to hazard and the programme of inspections is concentrated on those premises where the hazard is greatest. In 1988-89 the inspectorate made a total of 3[illegible],303 farm inspections.

Disabled People (Transport and Holiday Accommodation)

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans his Department has to improve transport and holiday accommodation for the disabled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 27 July 1989]: My Department, through the English tourist board, contributes funding (£35,000 in 1989-90) to the holiday care service. In conjunction with the English tourist board, the holiday care service has published a series of booklets giving advice to hotel and guesthouse proprietors on providing for disabled visitors.

The "Tourism for All" working party, set up by the English tourist board in 1988, is due to issue its report in September this year, which will make recommendations on improvements in holiday provision for disabled and disadvantaged people. The report will include sections on transport and accommodation.

Product Design and Development

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the number of direct and indirect jobs in product design and development lost since 1979 and the number of jobs now threatened as a result of the increase in (i) import penetration, (ii) the import content of exported goods and (iii) the number of branch plants of overseas companies; and what is his estimate of the reduction in the number of such jobs since 1970 and 1979, respectively.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 27 July 1989]: I have been asked to reply.

No information is available on the number of jobs in product design and development. The economy gains from the exchange of goods and services and from the two-way flow of investment. It cannot be assumed that increased imports and inward investment result in a loss of jobs.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fire Service (Pay and Conditions)

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has received from the national joint council for local authorities' fire brigades in answer to his request that a joint national joint council and Home Office working party should be set up to examine pay and conditions of service within the fire service; and if he will make a statement on the pay and conditions of service of the fire service.

Mr. John Patten: The chairman of the national joint council has recently written to my right hon. and noble Friend, enclosing a letter from the joint secretaries of the council which indicates its willingness to accept an ad hoc working party jointly constituted by the Home Office and the national joint council.

We wish to see the national joint council examine, fairly and with an open mind, the conditions of service-related issues raised by the Audit Commission's paper on value for money in the fire service, including rigid employment conditions. We also wish to see the council consider whether the current fire service pay formula represents the best way forward for the future.

Durham Prison

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are (a) involved in day-time education classes and (b) attending evening classes in Durham H wing.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In Durham H wing in the week ending 21 July there were eight prisoners attending morning day-time classes and a further eight prisoners attending afternoon day-time classes. Two evening classes, each with a maximum attendance of six, are held each night during the week. The weekly total of 10 classes offers 60 student places; all places are taken up, with some prisoners attending more than one evening class.

Allowance Books (Theft)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances of the theft of Department of Health and Social Security allowance books have occurred during each of the last three years in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the Bolton area; and how many prosecutions have been made as a result.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not available centrally.

Immigration

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he proposes to deal with over-age applicants from the Indian sub-continent (a) whose applications have already been refused on the grounds that they do not qualify under the immigration rules, (b) whose appeals have been dismissed on the above grounds and (c) whose appeals have been deferred pending his announcement on the use of DNA evidence in such cases.

Mr. Renton: Where an application for entry clearance has been refused, and any appeal dismissed, that application cannot be reopened. The case can be reconsidered only in the context of a fresh application for entry clearance.

Where a person previously refused entry clearance as a child on relationship grounds is able to establish relationship by means of DNA evidence, but is now over 18 and does not qualify for admission under paragraphs 55 or 56 of the immigration rules, the reapplication will be considered in accordance with the policy which my right hon. Friend announced on 14 June at column 463.

When an application for entry clearance or an appeal against refusal had not been finally determined by 14 June, the case will be reviewed in accordance with the terms of my right hon. Friend's statement (if applicable) without the need for a fresh application. In some such cases, it may be necessary to arrange a further interview by the entry clearance officer to establish the applicant's present circumstances before a decision can be reached.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) husbands, (b) wives and (c) dependent children have been refused (i) extension of stay and (ii) settlement in the United Kingdom on the grounds that the Secretary of State is not satisfied that they can be maintained and accommodated without recourse to public funds.

Mr. Renton: The available information relating to after-entry cases is given in the following table. Information on dependent children is not readily available.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many applications for (a) single entry and (b) multiple entry visit visas were (1) received, (2) granted and (3) refused at each post in the Indian sub-continent, Ghana, Nigeria and Jamaica in each quarter of 1988 and the first quarter of 1989; and what was the delay between application and interview for those whose applications were felt to need a second or long interview at each of the above posts in (i) June 1988, (ii) January 1989 and (iii) June 1989 or the nearest available date;

(2) how many applications for entry clearance in order to seek asylum in the United Kingdom were (a) received and (b) granted by country during 1988 and the first quarter of 1989.

Mr. Renton: I shall write to the hon. Member and deposit a copy of the reply in the Library.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications from over-age reapplicants from the Indian sub-continent seeking to join a sponsor settled in the United Kingdom have been (a) made, (b) deferred, (c) refused and (d) granted since 1986; and how many such reapplicants in each category had undergone successful DNA tests.

Mr. Renton: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many nationals of (a) Jamaica, (b) Turkey, (c) Morocco, (d) the United States of America, (e) Australia, (f) Malaysia, (g) Hong Kong, (h) Guyana, (i) Trinidad, (j) Colombia and (k) Algeria were (i) granted and (ii) refused permission to enter the United Kingdom at ports of entry in each quarter since January 1987 to the nearest available date.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many notices have been issued to each airline under the Immigration (Carriers' Liability)

Act 1987 in each quarter since March 1988; how much money has accrued as a result; and how many such notices have been contested by each airline.

Mr. Renton: Information on the record of individual airlines under the Act is a matter of confidentiality. The total number of notices issued to carriers (ie airlines and sea operators) in each quarter since March 1988 was as follows:

| Quarter ending | Number of notices |
|---|---|
| 30 June 1988 | 758 |
| 30 September 1988 | 1,415 |
| 31 December 1988 | 1,064 |
| 31 March 1989 | 1,345 |
| 30 June 1989 | 1,616 |
| Total | 6,198 |

A total of £1·822 million has been received in respect of these notices, and representations have been made by carriers in 1,317 cases.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outstanding immigration applications there are at Lunar house; what time savings in dealing with applications from (a) students, (b) family members in the United Kingdom applying for variation of stay, (c) settlement entry clearance applications referred from overseas posts and (d) asylum-seekers have been achieved by recent changes in procedures and practice; and what are the average times applicants in each category might expect to wait before a decision.

Mr. Renton: I shall write to the hon. Member and deposit a copy of the reply in the Library.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were received into prison establishments under Immigration Act powers during (a) 1987 and (b) 1988, by individual prison establishment; what was the average daily population of persons so detained in each of those years; what was the average length of time spent in detention by persons so detained in each of those years; and whether he will give a breakdown by nationality of persons so detained for each of those years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information about detainees received into prison service establishments in England and Wales under the Immigration Act 1971 in 1987 is given by establishment and nationality in the tables. Similar information for 1988 is not yet available.

The average population and the average length of detention of such detainees in prison service establishments in 1987 were published in tables 1.1 and 6.6 of "Prison Statistics England and Wales" (Cm. 547), a copy of which is in the Library. The average population in 1988 was 146. The average period of detention in 1988 is provisionally estimated as about seven weeks.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations (i) he and (ii) immigration officers received from Members of Parliament during (a) the first quarter of 1988 and (b) the first quarter of 1989 to delay the removal of passengers refused entry at British ports of entry; and, for both periods, how many representations resulted in (i) the delay of the passenger's removal for up to a week, (ii) the delay of the passenger's removal for more than a week and (iii) reversal of the immigration officer's decision.

Mr. Renton: In the first quarters of 1988 and 1989 representations received by Ministers resulted in deferment of removal in 382 and 54 cases respectively. I regret that the rest of the information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many wives and dependent children applying for entry clearance in the Indian sub-continent in each quarter since January 1988 were refused (a) on first application and (b) on second or subsequent application.

Mr. Renton: Quarterly information up to the end of 1988 on the total numbers of wives and children in the Indian sub-continent refused entry clearance to the United Kingdom is published in table 7 of Cm 726, "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom, 1988" a copy of which is in the Library. In the first quarter of 1989, 130 wives and 270 children were initially refused entry clearance. Separate information on first-time applicants and re-applicants is not available centrally.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (1) British nationals and (2) holders of certificates of identity from Hong Kong have been admitted to the United Kingdom in each quarter since January 1988 as (a) persons of independent means, (b) self-employed persons, (c) business people, (d) visitors, (e) students, (f) husbands and fiancés, (g) wives and fiancées and (h) other dependent relatives.

Mr. Renton: The available information is given in the following table for BDTCs from Hong Kong. Reliable figures of admissions of stateless persons from Hong Kong are not available.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current policy on enforcing deportation decisions against genuine students who have been found to be working in breach of their conditions of entry; what criteria he uses to define a genuine student for these purposes; and whether he will list the colleges which he does not recognise as providing courses of study for overseas students acceptable under the immigration rules.

Mr. Renton: Any overseas student who wishes to work during his free time of vacations may do so by obtaining the requisite permission from the Department of Employment. Each case in which a student is found working without such permission is considered on its individual merits: as required by the immigration rules, the case for deportation is considered in the light of all known relevant factors, of which the genuineness of the studies will be of particular significance. As a general rule, however, it is not our practice to remove genuine students under the deportation powers unless their offences are serious or persistent. A genuine student in this sense is one who at the time meets the requirements of the immigration rules for the grant of leave to enter or remain as a student. The immigration and nationality department does not maintain a list of colleges which are or which are not acceptable for immigration purposes. However, in dealing with individual applications and so on from students, account is taken of any material which is available to the Department about the circumstances of, and courses offered by, the colleges concerned. Case workers are made aware of such material by means of internal notices which form part of the staff instructions for dealing with cases: such instructions are not published.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time taken by his Department to investigate cases referred from overseas posts in order to assess whether the maintenance and accommodation requirements of the immigration rules have been met.

Mr. Renton: Inquiries into whether the maintenance and accommodation requirements of the immigration rules are met may be conducted either by correspondence or by interviewing the sponsor (usually when other matters also need to be investigated). Information on the average time taken to complete these inquiries is not available. Where an interview is required, the objective remains, as stated in my reply to a question from the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 23 March 1989 at column 809, to carry out interviews within three months of receipt of papers in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for British citizenship under section 4(5) of the British Nationality Act 1981 have been (a) made, (b) granted and (c) refused; and how many of those granted have been on the grounds of service in the armed forces.

Mr. Renton: The information covering the period January 1983 to 21 July 1989 is as follows:

| | Servicemen | Others | Total |
|---|---|---|---|
| Received | 53 | 499 | 552 |

Note: The numbers in the first column are former servicemen in Hong Kong as described in the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, East (Mr. Moynihan) on 23 April 1986 at columns 147-48.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for entry clearance as (a) wives, (b) husbands, (c) fiancés, and (d) fiancées in each British post in all countries apart from those in the Indian sub-continent were (i) granted and (ii) refused in each quarter since January 1988; how many such applications in each category, at each post and in each quarter were refused (1) wholly and (2) partly because of the primary purpose rule; what was the refusal rate at each post; and what percentage of those refusals were (x) wholly and (y) partly on primary purpose grounds.

Mr. Renton: The only information requested which is available centrally is that on applications granted and refused in Hong Kong. Information for the fourth quarter of 1988 onwards is given in the table; for information for the first three quarters of 1988, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 20 December 1988 at columns 179-80.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many applications for entry clearance from (a) wives, (b) husbands, (c) fiancés, and (d) fiancées made at British posts in (1) New Delhi, (2) Bombay, (3) Calcutta, (4) Madras, (5) Dhaka, (6) Islamabad, (7) Karachi, and (8) Colombo for each quarter since January 1988 to the nearest available date were (a) received, (b) granted and (c) refused; how many refusals at each post were (i) wholly and (ii) partly because the visa officer was not satisfied that the primary purpose of the marriage was not immigration; how many refusals at each post were (i) wholly and (ii) partly because the visa officer was not satisfied that the couple could support and accommodate themselves without recourse to public funds; what was the refusal rate at each post and what percentage of those refusals was (x) wholly and (y) partly on primary purpose grounds;

(2) how many applications for settlement by wives and children in (i) Dhaka and (ii) Islamabad were (a) received, (b) granted, (c) refused, (d) deferred at first interview, (e) lapsed and (f) outstanding and awaiting first interview for each quarter since the beginning of 1988.

Mr. Renton: I shall write to the hon. Member and deposit a copy of the reply in the Library.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the (a) passengers in total and (b) persons treated as illegal entrants who were granted temporary admission in 1988, subsequently absconded.

Mr. Renton: In 1988 a total of 401 passengers absconded, either from detention or by failing to respond to the terms of temporary admission. The corresponding figure for illegal entrants is 124. The distinction between those absconding from detention and those failing to respond to the terms of temporary admission/temporary release is not centrally recorded and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many passengers seeking political asylum in (a) 1986, (b) 1987, (c) 1988 and (d) 1989 up the nearest available date were granted temporary admission;

(2) whether he will provide a breakdown by nationality of the number of passengers seeking political asylum who were detained under Immigration Act powers in 1988 in (a) prison department establishments and (b) immigration detention accommodation.

Mr. Renton: The information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people were detained (a) overnight and (b) for a period of more than one month in (1) Harmondsworth detention centre, (2) the Queen's building, Heathrow, (3) the Beehive Gatwick, and (4) Latchmere house during 1988;

(2) what was the total number of passengers detained overnight under Immigration Act powers during 1988, by nationality.

Mr. Renton: The readily available information relates to the number of passengers whose detention spanned at least one night pending further examination on their admission to, or their removal from, the United Kingdom and is given in the tables. The remaining information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[1] Excluding illegal entrants and deportees.

[2] The figures include a small amount of double counting when a passenger is detained at more than one location.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons detained under Immigration Act powers applied to the Home Office to be allowed to depart voluntarily under the supervised departure provisions of the immigration rules in each quarter since January 1988.

Mr. Renton: The readily available information on the numbers of persons removed under the supervised departure procedures is published in table 14 of the statistical bulletin issue 23/89 "Control of Immigration Statistics—First Quarter 1989", a copy of which is in the Library. Most of these persons would have been detained prior to departure. A number would have been subject to restrictions as an alternative to detention but such cases could be separately identified only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were recommended for deportation with no custodial sentence during 1988; and in how many such cases the courts directed release (a) subject to conditions and (b) without conditions.

Mr. Renton: During 1988, a total of 152 persons were recommended for deportation by the courts with no custodial sentence. The courts directed release subject to restrictions in 44 cases and without restrictions in 66 cases.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his best estimate as to how many applications for (a) adult registration with entitlement, (b) naturalisation and (c) registration of minors his Department (i) will receive and (ii) expects to grant in 1989-90.

Mr. Renton: Information is not available in the form requested. We estimate that in the financial year 1989-90 we will receive the following applications:

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| Registration of adults | 3,000 |
| Registration of minors | 12,000 |
| Naturalisation | 32,000 |

In the same period we expect to grant about 103,000 registrations of all kinds and about 28,000 naturalisations.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time taken to process applications for (a) registration and (b) naturalisation; and how long those applying in both of those categories in December 1988 can expect to wait.

Mr. Renton: The average time taken to complete applications for citizenship granted in June 1989 was 18 months for registrations and 23 months for naturalisations.

It is not possible to estimate how long, on average, it will be before decisions will be reached on applications received during December 1988. But I expect decisions to be reached on the last of the transitional registrations no later than January 1990, and from then onwards the use of the resources of the Liverpool nationality office to process naturalisations should result in a steady improvement in the time taken to complete those cases.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men, (b) women and (c) children, were waiting in each queue at each post in the Indian sub-continent on 31 March 1989.

Mr. Renton: Information on the estimated total numbers in each queue is given in the following table; separate information on men, women and children is not available centrally.

Estimated numbers of applicants in the Indian sub-continent on 31 March 1989 awaiting their first interview for entry to the United Kingdom

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for entry clearance as working holiday makers have been (a) received, (b) granted and (c) refused in (i) India, (ii) Bangladesh, (iii) Australia and (iv) Canada during 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Renton: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were waiting for special quota vouchers in (i) India and (ii) East Africa in (a) May 1988 and (b) December 1988; when those issued with vouchers on those dates had applied; how many vouchers were issued in (i) India and (ii) East Africa in (a) 1988 and (b) the first quarter of 1989; when those applying can now expect to receive vouchers; and how many applicants there were for vouchers in (i) India and (ii) East Africa in (a) 1988 and (b) the first half of 1989.

Mr. Renton: I shall write to the hon. Member and deposit a copy of the reply in the Library.

Crime (Screening)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to what proportion of crimes (a) in London and (b) in Leyton are screened out after the initial investigation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the commissioner that a recent survey of eight representative police stations indicated that following initial investigation, an average of 30 per cent. of all crimes are allocated for further investigation, but there are variations between areas and according to the seriousness of offences.

More detailed figures for London as a whole and individual areas are not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Wakefield Prison

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each occasion since April 1988 on which staffing levels at Her Majesty's prison Wakefield have been at or below the minimum staffing levels agreed at the commencement of fresh start.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The governor always aims to operate at least at minimum staffing levels.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if prisoners at Her Majesty's prison Wakefield are being searched with the frequency required by his Department's security manual for Her Majesty's prison service.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Searches are in most cases carried out at the discretion of local management and take account of internal instructions and guidelines.

Drugs

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are principally deployed on drugs work in each police force and regional crime squad, and what was the comparable number in 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information for police forces, as at 31 December 1988, and for regional crime squads, as at 31 January 1989 is set out in the table. Information on deployment in 1979 is not held centrally.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's estimate of the current number of drug users and the equivalent figure for each preceding year for which such estimates have been made.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs, in its report "Aids and Drug Misuse Part 1" (page 13) pointed to the difficulties—inherent in the clandestine nature of drug misuse—in obtaining a reliable estimate of the number of drug misusers. Its best guess was that in 1986 there might have been between 75,000 and 150,000 misusers of notifiable drugs (essentially the most powerful narcotics and cocaine), plus perhaps as many again (excluding cannabis users) who were using non-notifiable drugs (such as amphetamine). Those figures remain the current broad estimate of the prevalence of drug misuse in England, Scotland and Wales.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of prosecutions for drug offences in 1979 and each succeeding year.

Mr. John Patten: Information held centrally for 1979 to 1987 is given in the table. Data for 1988 are not yet available.

Number of prosecutions for Drug Offences 1979 to 1987 England and Wales

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of registered drug addicts in 1979 and each succeeding year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on the total number of addicts notified to the Home Office in the years 1979 to 1988 is published in table 1 of Home Office statistical bulletin issue 13/89, "Statistics of Drug Addicts Notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1988", a copy of which is in the Library.

War Crimes

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of the court experience of the members of the war crimes inquiry.

Mr. John Patten: The authors of the report have each had extensive legal experience. They were asked to undertake this inquiry in view in particular of Sir Thomas Hetherington's service as Director of Public Prosecutions from 1977 to 1987, and Mr. Chalmers' service as Crown Agent for Scotland from 1974 to 1984.

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his statement about the report of the war crimes inquiry on 24 July, Official Report, columns 731-32, he will make a statement regarding the facilities available to the three persons named in the second unpublished report as recommended for prosecution to visit Soviet Russia with a view to preparing their defence.

Mr. John Patten: Any person charged with war crimes in this country—if Parliament does decide on a change in the law that would enable such prosecutions to be brought—would be able to apply for legal aid in the normal way.

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what amendments to the existing criminal law and the existing law of evidence would be required if the recommendations of the report of the war crimes inquiry were adopted.

Mr. John Patten: The inquiry recommended legislation to give British courts jurisdiction over acts of murder and manslaughter committed as war crimes in Germany or German occupied territory during the second world war, by persons who are now British citizens or resident in the United Kingdom.

In addition, it recommended certain procedural changes, of which the main elements would be provisions:

to allow for the admissibility of evidence on video;

to enable war crimes proceedings in England and Wales to be transferred to the Crown court without prior committal proceedings (as is already possible in serious fraud cases);

to implement, and extend to other parts of the United Kingdom, the provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 1988 for evidence to be given by live television links from witnesses abroad; and to enable evidence to be taken on commission for use in proceedings in Scotland;

to enable recorded statements of persons now dead to be admissible in evidence in Scotland (the Criminal Justice Act 1988 makes provision in regard to such statements in England and Wales).

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to take to ensure that the three persons named in the unpublished part of the report of the war crimes inquiry are not identified by the media.

Mr. John Patten: The Government have not published material about individual cases; nor will we engage in speculation about individuals.

Holloway Prison (Health Care Manager)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what period of time the post of health care manager at Her Majesty's prison, Holloway, has been vacant; what is the complement of staff for the medical units; how many times agency nurses have been used in the past year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The post of health care manager was filled on 1 May 1989. The approved complement of staff in the medical units is as follows:

1 Principal Medical Officer
1 Senior Medical Officer
3 Medical Officers
84 Nurses

Agency staff have been used for some years as a consequence of recruitment difficulties in London. In the 12 months ended 30 June 1989 the number of agency nurses employed during the day varied between 10 and 18. A drive to recruit additional nurses is well advanced, and Holloway is one of the priority establishments for the deployment of newly recruited hospital officers with suitable nursing qualifications.

Sportsman Club (Parking)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to what action is being taken by the Metropolitan police to prevent illegal parking outside the Sportsman club, Tottenham Court road, WC1.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am satisfied that the Metropolitan police are aware of, and take proper action to prevent, the problems caused by illegal parking in this area.

Guildford Four

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to move the Guildford Four to prisons nearer to London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There are no plans at present.

Disasters

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many disasters and where they occurred, in each of the last five years, have required reference to the Home Office unit dealing with those disasters.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office acted as lead Department during the storms of October 1987 and during the re-entry of the nuclear-powered satellite Cosmos 1900 in the autumn of 1988.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources are allocated to civil disaster planning in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons in England and Wales were charged with terrorist-type offences relating to Northern Ireland in 1989; how many of those charged were released on bail; and what was the average period between remand and trial for prisoners refused bail relating to such charges in Britain in the current year.

Mr. Hurd: The available information relates to those charged having been detained under the prevention of terrorism legislation in connection with Northern Irish terrorism and is published quarterly for Great Britain in Home Office statistical bulletins which are placed in the Library. The latest, issue 26/89, gives in table 1 information up to the second quarter of 1989. Of the seven persons so charged in England and Wales in the first half of 1989, six were dealt with at court on the same or next day. One person charged on 13 February was remanded in custody and is currently awaiting trial.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of days spent on remand by those remanded in custody for terrorist-type offences in the first half of 1989, with regard to cases now completed in England and Wales and the number of bail applications refused, respectively.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The only information which is readily available relates to prisoners who are now in prison custody in category A and does not cover prisoners who have been released or downgraded.

During this period one such prisoner was received into custody (on 14 February). He remains in custody awaiting trial. Our records show that he has made no application for bail.

Strip Searches

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give details of the number of body searches, cell searches and cell changes and strip searches carried out on each of the female category A prisoners being held at Her Majesty's prison, Winchester, in September and October 1988, indicating the number of times each person was searched, if any prison contraband, smuggled item or illegal correspondence was discovered in any search, indicating which items; in how many cases prisoners refused to be searched and had to be restrained while the search was being conducted; and what were the reasons for the search;

(2) if he will give details of the number of body searches, cell searches and cell changes and strip searches carried out on each of the female category A prisoners being held at Her Majesty's prison, Durham, monthly, since February 1969, indicating the number of times each person was searched, if any prison contraband, smuggled item or illegal correspondence was discovered in any search, indicating which items; in how many cases prisoners refused to be searched and had to be restrained while the search was being conducted; and what were the reasons for the search.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Records are not kept of the occasions when rub down searching or "frisking" is carried out in prisons and it is not the practice to disclose detailed information about security arrangements such as that requested about the frequency of cell searches and cell changes.

Establishments are not required to record all strip searches. However, since August 1986 comprehensive records of strip searches are available in respect of category A women prisoners only, of whom there was one at Winchester prison between 27 September and 31 October. During that time the prisoner was strip searched on 30 occasions. On no occasion did the prisoner refuse to be strip searched. No unauthorised article was found.

There were four category A prisoners held at Durham between August 1986 and March 1987; three from April 1987 to September 1988 and four from October 1988 to date. They were strip searched on the following number of occasions:

No unauthorised article was found. On no occasion did the prisoners refuse to be strip searched.

Strip searching is a routine security measure to which all inmates—male and female—are subject, both for its deterrent effort and as a means of discovering unauthorised articles.

Deaths and Injuries (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of deaths and injuries which have occurred in Great Britain and mainland western Europe in 1988 and the first six months of 1989 connected with present civil unrest in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hurd: The information is given in the table.

Female Prisoners

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average length of custodial sentence of female prisoners in England and Wales in 1988 and in the first six months of 1989.

Mr. John Patten: Information for 1988 and 1989 is not yet available. Information prior to 1988 can be found in tables 7.19 and 7.20 of the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 1987", a copy of which can be found in the Library.

Phoenix House Trust

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Home Department what public funds have been given to the Phoenix House trust in each of the years from 1985 to 1989 by his Department.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Home Office provides funding to the Phoenix House trust under the voluntary after-care accommodation grant scheme. Under this scheme grants are made to voluntary organisations in England and Wales providing accommodation for offenders. The grants are a contribution towards meeting revenue deficits. The information requested is set out in the table:

| Hostel | 1984-85 £ | 1985-86 £ | 1986-87 £ | 1987-88 £ | 1988-89 £ | 1989-90 £ |

[1] With effect from 1 April 1989 grants are made to the organisations running hostels and not to the individual hostels.

Phoenix House trust has also received small amounts for capital purposes during the period.

Drivers (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from the chief constables in England and Wales as to the practice of their forces in detaining overnight drivers from Northern Ireland in connection with minor road traffic offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The responsibility for the enforcement of road traffic law rests with chief officers of police, but if the hon. Member has a particular case in mind I should be glad to look into it.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is now considering introducing free television licences for pensioners.

Mr. Renton: We are not.

Animal (Experiments)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many experiments were recorded by his Department of contractors working on behalf of the Ministry of Defence in each year since 1985; and which animals were involved.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No information in this form is available in the Home Office.

Crimes (Screening)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to how many reported crimes were screened out by the Metropolitan police in the most recently completed 12-month period;

(2) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to what percentage of reported crimes were screened out by the Metropolitan police in each of the past five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A formal system of crime screening was introduced throughout the Metropolitan police only in April 1988. A recent survey of eight representative police stations indicated that following initial investigation, an average of 30 per cent. of all crimes are allocated for further investigation. This figure varies between areas and according to the seriousness of offences.

Crowd Control Equipment

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new crowd control equipment is currently the subject of investigation by his Department.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As my hon. Friend the Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg) said in reply to a question from the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) on 13 April at columns 707-8 we are considering possible replacements for the authorised plastic baton round equipment. No other equipment for dealing with public disorder is being evaluated.

Badgers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to amend the Badgers Act 1973 by protecting badger setts from unlicensed damage or destruction and providing courts with power to disqualify convicted badger diggers from the custody of dogs.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the answer in the Library.

Prisoners (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners in British gaols, who give as their domicile Northern Ireland, have been returned to Northern Ireland to serve the whole or part of their sentences in the first six months of 1989; and how many of these prisoners were serving sentences for terrorist-type offences;

(2) how many prisoners were transferred from (a) England and Wales to Northern Ireland and (b) from Northern Ireland to England and Wales in the first six months of 1989; and under which section of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 such transfers were carried out.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Six inmates were transferred from England and Wales to Northern Ireland under section 26 of the Criminal Justice Act 1961, one of whom was convicted of terrorist-type offences, and one under section 27. All were either domiciled in Northern Ireland or had close family links with the Province. One inmate was transferred from Northern Ireland to England and Wales under section 28 of the Act.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners giving as their domicile either (a) the Republic of Ireland and (b) Northern Ireland have been permitted to return home to the Republic of Ireland or Northern Ireland on parole for humanitarian reasons in the first six months of the current year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This information is not available.

Refugees

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he now has the figure for 1988 of the number of people applying for refugee status; and if he will provide a breakdown of the country of origin.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The available information, by nationality, is published in table 8 of Home Office statistical bulletin (issue 25/89) "Refugee Statistics, United Kingdom, 1988", a copy of which is in the Library.

Hong Kong

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give his best quantitative assessment as to the impact of recent events in China on the flow of Hong Kong Chinese to and from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 20 July 1989]: Figures for admissions of pasengers from Hong Kong during the period since the recent events in China are not yet available. The latest available information relating to admission of Hong Kong British dependent territory citizens is given in answer today to the question from the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Darling) which asks how many British nationals from Hong Kong have been admitted to the United Kingdom since January 1988. Corresponding figures for embarkations are not available.

Prisoners (Heroin Addicts)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of prisoners currently remanded or sentenced in gaols in England and Wales who are known to be addicted to heroin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The number of heroin addicts in prison service establishments at any one time is not known. During 1988, counting addicts at their most recent notification, 1,022 heroin (alone or with other drugs) addicts were notified to the chief medical officer at the Home Office by prison medical officers in England and Wales.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Food Contamination

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the measures he intends to take to prevent adulteration and contamination of food.

Mr. Forth: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cases of product interference or adulteration there have been in the past 12 months.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The information is not available in respect of products generally in the form requested and could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the average delay between retailers or manufacturers discovering the problem of food contamination or adulteration and their alerting consumers to the danger.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The responsibilty for the contamination of food rests with my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, advised by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Manufactures Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what is his estimate of the number of British jobs represented by the present deficit in manufactured trade with the EEC;

(2) what was the United Kingdom share of the market for imported manufactures in the latest year for which figures are available in (a) South Africa, (b) Canada, (c) Australia, (d) New Zealand and (e) Nigeria; and if he will provide corresponding figures for 1977, 1968 and 1959;

(3) what was the United Kingdom share of the market for imported manufactures in 1988 in the case of the Irish Republic, Denmark, Portugal and each of the European Free Trade Association countries; and if he will provide corresponding figures for 1977, 1970 and 1959;

(4) why the indices of output in the production industries were dropped from the CSO annual abstract of statistics in the current year; and if he will publish in the Official Report the information given in table 8.2 of the 1988 edition;

(5) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for Italy and the United Kingdom respectively the increase in gross domestic product and in imports and exports of manufactures since 1979;

(6) whether he will bring up to date the export price and volume indices given in his answer to the hon. Member for Dagenham (Mr. Gould) on 22 March 1985, Official Report, column 638, including figures for the change in the terms of trade for finished manufactures;

(7) whether he will publish in the Official Report for the years 1970 to date a table showing for the European Economic Community and for the rest of the world (a) the trade balance in manufactures less precious stones on a balance of payments basis, (b) the balance of trade less oil and precious stones on the same basis and (c) the ratio of exports to imports in each case.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the value of United Kingdom exports in 1988 of (a) finished and (b) semi-finished manufactures, including and excluding erratics, consists of re-exports; and what were the figures in 1979, 1970 and 1959.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 July 1989]: Information on which to base the required percentage is not available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report the balance of trade in manufactures between the United Kingdom, Germany, France, Italy, Holland and Belgium, respectively, and the rest of the European Economic Community in 1978 and in 1988, together with the change in relative export prices for such goods.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The information is in the following tables:

Export Markets

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for each of the past 20 years the 10 top markets for United Kingdom exports; and if he will show for each year the percentage the United Kingdom gained of each market.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will make it his policy not to return textile, knitting and clothing products to normal general agreement on tariffs and trade rules until such time as all of the major supplying and participating countries to the Uruguay round of general agreement on tariffs and trade negotiations have removed the tariff peaks and bans against United Kingdom exports;

(2) if he will make it his policy not to return textiles and clothing to normal general agreement on tariffs and trade rules, until those rules related to safeguards, subsidies, dumping and intellectual property rights have been effectively strengthened.

Mr. Redwood: In its latest communication to the negotiating group on textiles and clothing the Community has emphasised that full compliance with all the elements of the Punta del Este declaration—and in particular the parallelism between the gradual integration of textiles into GATT and the application of strengthened rules and disciplines within GATT—remains a vital condition for the success of the negotiations. The communication makes it clear that the strengthening of rules and disciplines must include action on tariff and non-tariff measures to ensure effective market access, as well as in relation to safeguards, subsidies, dumping and intellectual property rights.

Recycled Materials

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, pursuant to his answer of 6 February to the hon. Member for Islington, North, Official Report, column 457, he will make a statement on his policy on the use of recycled materials.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department's new business and the environment unit will continue to promote the use of recycled materials whenever this is technically and economically possible and will seek the full co-operation of local communities, voluntary organisations, user and producer industries, retailers and local authorities in pursuing this aim.

Conferences and workshops will be held on best practice in the production techniques of materials, the encouragement of waste minimisation and the design of products for recylability. Technical advice on recycling will continue to be available through the Warren Spring laboratory.

Where appropriate further initiatives will be introduced.

Post Office

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the total number of post offices managed directly by Post Office Counters.

Mr. Forth: I understand that there are, at present, 1,443 crown post offices.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to the practice of the Post Office on the recruitment and employment of registered disabled people.

Mr. Forth: This is an operational question for the Post Office board. I understand that the Post Office has made the following joint statement with the Post Office Unions Council about the employment of disabled people:

> "It is Post Office policy, which its Unions fully support, to endorse the MSC Code of Good Practice and to develop and to maintain positive measures to encourage the recruitment and employment of persons who are disabled, provided that they are qualified and suitable for the job and can be expected to maintain a satisfactory level of performance in their allocated job."

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices have wheelchair access to (a) the staff entrance, (b) welfare and sanitary facilities and (c) working areas.

Mr. Forth: This is an operational question for the Post Office board, and I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Royal Mail

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the standard contract showing the range of duties expected of a post person employed by the (a) Royal Mail (letters) and (b) Royal Mail (parcels).

Mr. Forth: This is an operational question for the Post Office board. However, I will place in the Library copies of the Post Office's staff contract manual.

Correspondence and Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July;

(2) what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Forth: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Unichem (Shares)

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will take action to amend the Unichem Ltd. (Allotment of Shares) Order 1989 to prevent Unichem from continuing with the change of trading terms introduced on 1 July and to ensure that shares issued to new members recruited after the date of the order do not rank for participation in the planned flotation of Unichem;

(2) what action he will take to prevent Unichem using its privileged position as an industrial and provident society to continue anti-competitive practices in a similar form to those identified in the recent Monopolies and Mergers Commission investigation.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Trade Deficit

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total deficit in visible trade with (a) the EEC and (b) the rest of the world, over the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list those standard industrial classification manufacturing activities where there is a trade deficit (a) with the rest of the world and (b) with the EEC, listing the percentage import penetration as at the most recent practicable date; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the current balance of trade deficit with (a) the EEC and (b) the rest of the world; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Textiles

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement outlining Her Majesty's Government's position on the recently published European Commission proposals liberating world trade in textiles and clothing in the context of the current general agreement on tariffs and trade negotiations.

Mr. Redwood: The communication submitted by the European Community this week to the GATT negotiating group on textiles and clothing sets out objectives agreed by all EC member states. It stresses in particular the need for parallelism between the gradual integration of textiles and clothing into GATT and the application of strengthened GATT rules and disciplines and examines the general framework within which these two elements need to be organised.

Audio Cassettes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the Government's plans, in the light of the European Commission's Green Paper on copyright and the challenge of new technology, to ensure that consumers (a) can contine to purchase blank audio cassettes without a levy and (b) are not denied access to new recording technology.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commission's Green Paper does not propose a Communitywide levy on blank audio cassettes and the Government have no intention of introducing such a levy in the United Kingdom. Developments in recording technology need to take account of the interests of copyright owners, but the Government do not believe this should be done by inhibiting consumer choice when acquiring new technology.

Electrical Installations

Mr. Randall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action the Government will be taking to ensure that only properly qualified electrical installation engineers are able to establish business in order to provide electrical installation services to the public.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 24 July 1989]: None.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans the Government has to introduce a national register of qualified electrical installation engineers in order to protect the consumer.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 24 July 1989]: None. There is insufficient evidence that the benefits to be obtained from a registration scheme would warrant the cost and management effort that it would involve. However, the Government will continue to encourage the self-regulatory schemes operated by the Electrical Contractors' Association, the Electrical Contractors' Association for Scotland and the National Inspection Council for Electrical Installation Contractors.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps the Government will be taking to ensure that electrical installations comply with the generally accepted standards laid down in the IEEE regulations with the introduction of the free movement of labour within the European Economic Community in 1992.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The treaty of Rome provides for free movement of labour, and overseas firms and individuals are already free to provide electrical installation services in the United Kingdom. However, the Government are considering whether electrical installations should be brought within the scope of the Building Regulations 1985.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what training measures the Government will be taking to ensure that electrical installations are installed in a manner which makes them safe with the introduction of the free movement of labour within the European Economic Community in 1992.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 24 July 1989]: No additional training measures are necessary as the United Kingdom market is already open. Nevertheless the Government will continue to give encouragement to the high level of training already provided by employers in the electrical contracting industry and by the Electrical Electronic Telecommunications and Plumbing Union.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proportion of fires is attributed to faulty electrical installations.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 24 July 1989]: I have been asked to reply. In 1987, 17 per cent. of accidental fires in occupied buildings, in the United Kingdom, attended by local authority fire brigades were attributed to faulty electrical appliances and installations. More detailed information is published in table 49a of the Home Office annual report "Fire Statistics United Kingdom 1987" a copy of which is in the Library.

China

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what official backing his Department provides to the 48 Group of British traders with China;

(2) what support his Department is proposing to give the trade mission to China in the near future.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 26 July 1989]: The Department is in consultation with the 48 group about its plans for this mission. About £70,000 had already been provided to the group prior to June of this year, that amount being based on normal DTI mission support terms. It was provided early in order to assist with the launching of this exceptionally large mission.

Waterstone and Co. Ltd

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer to the Director General of Fair Trading the proposed takeover of Waterstone and Co. Ltd. by W. H. Smith.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 July 1989]: This proposal is currently being considered by the Director General of Fair Trading to ascertain whether it qualifies for reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission under the Fair Trading Act 1973. If so, the director general will advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on whether the merger should be referred to the MMC: and the Secretary of State will then decide whether to make a reference.

The main consideration in deciding whether to refer a merger to the MMC is the potential effect on competition in the United Kingdom.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1988-89.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The amount spent by my Department in 1988-89 on official hospitality cannot readily be separately identified.

African Elephant Products

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give details of all African elephant products, other than ivory, imported each year into the United Kingdom by type, quantity and value since 1985.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 July 1989]: African elephants' products are not identified in the overseas trade statistics. However, some information by type and quantity for 1985 and 1986 is available from the EC annual reports on the convention of international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora (CITES): chapter 2, copies of which are in the Library.

Car Exports (United States)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many cars were exported to the United States in 1988 and in 1989; and what information he has on the reason for the change;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of United Kingdom cars exported to the United States by category in 1987, 1988 and this year to date and the United States share by value of United Kingdom exports of cars.

Mr. Redwood: Pursuant to the holding answer of 2 July 1989, the United Kingdom exported 31,703 passenger motor vehicles to the United States in 1988. In the four months January to April 1989 the United Kingdom exported 11,187 vehicles to the United States compared with 13,090 vehicles for the same period in 1988.

Short-term fluctuations in the level of exports may not be fully representative of the market. However, one factor that may have affected the level is that there has been a weakening of the United States luxury car market in which the United Kingdom has a strong presence.

The following table shows a breakdown by category of United Kingdom exports of motor vehicles to the United States for the requested periods and the United States share by value of United Kingdom exports.

United Kingdom exports of motor cars to the United States—numbers of vehicles

NESL

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date his Department was first made aware of a renewed interest in the purchase of North East Shipbuilders Ltd. by the Egon Oldendorff line of West Germany.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 27 July 1989]: British Shipbuilders informed my Department on 13 April that an approach it had received from a further interest in North East Shipbuilders Ltd. would be confirmed in writing that day.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on which date the right hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton) met Sir Leon Brittan to discuss the sale of North East Shipbuilders Ltd.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 27 July 1989]: My right hon. Friend met Sir Leon Brittan to discuss this matter on 27 June 1989.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the reply by the right hon. Member for Braintree to the hon. Member for Dagenham (Mr. Gould) Official Report, 13 July, column 1151, whether it was his Department or British Shipbuilders who informed the bidders for NESL of the anticipated difficulties with the European Commission; and whether this advice was provided in writing.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 27 July 1989]: Advice was given orally by my officials.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any meetings took place or written correspondence was exchanged between his Department and the European Commission relating to the sale of North East Shipbuilders Ltd. between 17 April and the date of the meeting between the right hon. Member for Braintree and Sir Leon Brittan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 27 July 1989]: A full account of exchanges between my Department and the European Commission is contained in the note my right hon. Friend has recently placed in the Library.

Export Promotion

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the direct and indirect cost to the Exchequer of export promotion; how much is recovered in fees; and what is his estimate of the effect in terms of (a) increased exports and (b) the real exchange rate.

Mr. Redwood: The cost, net of receipts, of export promotion services operated by my Department and by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office overseas was £102·4 million in 1988-89. Receipts totalled £16·4 million. These services make a valuable contribution to non-oil exports which reached a record level in 1988. There are many different influences on the real exchange rate and the effect of export promotion cannot be separately identified.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Prison Escapes

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many escapes there have been from prisons in Northern Ireland involving loyalist prisoners in the past year.

Mr. Cope: There have been no escapes from Northern Ireland prisons in the past year.

Prisoners (Home Leave)

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners during the past year in (a) Her Majesty's prison Maghaberry and (b) Her Majesty's prison Maze have received (i) 30 days' home leave as part of the pre-release home leave scheme and (ii) five days' home leave; and what determines whether a prisoner should receive 30 or five days' home leave.

Mr. Cope: Statistics are not available in the form requested. The number of days pre-release home leave for which a prisoner may apply depends upon his classification and the length of his sentence. The maximum for fixed sentence prisoners is 23 days, for which prisoners in the "star" classification (generally those serving a first period in custody) with a sentence of four years or more are eligible.

PRIME MINISTER

Cabinet Ministers (Pay)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will publish in the Official Report a table showing the percentage increase in the pay of Cabinet Ministers since 1978-79, before and after tax, assuming allowances are restricted to the married person's allowance.

The Prime Minister: The information requested is contained in the following table.

Percentage increase in pay of a Cabinet Minister in 1988-89 compared with 1978-79

| | 1978-79 | 1988-89 |
|---|---|---|
| Cabinet Minister (Commons) | | |
| Gross Salary | £14,300 | £34,479 |
| Percentage increase | — | 141 |
| Net Salary | £9,386 | £25,220 |
| Percentage increase | — | 169 |
| Cabinet Minister (Lords) | | |
| Gross Salary | £14,300 | £41,997 |
| Percentage increase | — | 194 |
| Net Salary | £9,386 | £29,731 |
| Percentage increase | — | 217 |

Note: In 1983 Lords Ministers received a pay lead over their Commons counterparts.

Commons Ministers receive in addition a reduced parliamentary salary. In 1978-79 it was £3,529, in 1988-89 it was £18,148.

Underground Services

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister if, pursuant to her reply to the right hon. Member for Islwyn (Mr. Kinnock) on 8 June, Official Report, column 366, she will list those proposals received from London Underground Limited for the improvement of their services which Her Majesty's Government intend to approve; whether those improvements will be confined to peak hour travel; and if Her Majesty's Government will make any real increase in peak-hour travel fares conditional on their implementation.

The Prime Minister: Proposals recently approved include the modernisation of the Central line; the provision of 16 additional Underground trains; and improvements to Liverpool street and Angel underground stations. Other proposals will be considered as they come forward. In addition, London Underground Limited intends to invest £266 million over the years 1989-92 to implement the recommendations contained in the report by Mr. Desmond Fennell QC and to enhance safety. Improvements to the Underground system may benefit all passengers, not just those who travel at peak hours, although clearly, some works to enlarge capacity are needed only to cope with peak demand. The level and structure of fares are matters for London Regional Transport to decide.

Environment (Parliamentary Questions)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if, pursuant to her oral reply to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan), Official Report, 17 July, columns 34-35, she will now make it her policy that Ministers answer parliamentary questions based on the factual environmental record of previous Administrations.

The Prime Minister: It is a well-established practice that the Government of the day do not answer for the actions of previous Administrations. The factual environmental record of this Government is excellent.

Women's Issues

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Prime Minister what steps she takes to co-ordinate Government policy on women's issues.

The Prime Minister: The ministerial group on women's issues was established to provide a co-ordinated examination of policies of special concern to women, including the practical effect of legislation. Its membership crosses departmental divisions. It is chaired by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Home Office and has now met eight times, most recently on 20 July, when it agreed new initiatives on domestic violence.

House of Fraser

Mr. D. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Prime Minister whether her discussions on matters of state with representatives of overseas states have included matters relating to the takeover of House of Fraser by the El Fayeds.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 25 July at column 849.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the World Bank concerning the conditions on which loans are made to the Government of Indonesia, or any other body in that country, for schemes that directly or indirectly involve land resettlement; and if he will make a statement concerning Her Majesty's Government's policy on this matter.

Mrs. Chalker: My officials are in touch with the World Bank about a multi-purpose dam and irrigation project in central Java where difficulties have arisen over the resettlement of people displaced by the reservoir. Our understanding is that the bank is working closely with the Government of Indonesia on the formulation of a comprehensive resettlement plan. We shall continue to monitor the situation. The bank has recently produced guidelines for planning resettlement which we consider should be the standard against which to assess future bank projects.

TRANSPORT

British Rail (Accidents)

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents have occurred on British Rail (a) during the past five years and (b) during the five years before that; and how many fatalities occurred during the same periods.

Mr. Portillo: The information is not available in the form requested. The railway inspectorate maintains accident records for the preparation of the annual report on railway safety. These records show the number of casualties but not the precise number of accidents. The numbers of accidents to trains (collisions, derailments, fires and so on) are given in the following table, together with the numbers of fatalities, since 1979 (table B). These cover all railways: the numbers for BR cannot generally be isolated without a lot of research, although it has been possible to do so for the years since the records were computerised (table C).

Table A is a summary of accidents of all types for all railways during the 10 years ended 1988. Movement accidents are those which are caused to people by moving railway vehicles which are not train accidents, for example, an accident involving a carriage door of a moving train. Non-movement accidents are those which do not involve railway vehicles. The King's Cross fire is in this category.

Road Safety, Silver Hill

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department was consulted about the construction of a tarmac access road and erection of a 15 ft by 10 ft sign just south of the bend at the top of Silver Hill on the A21 south of Hurst Green (Ordnance Survey 1/25,000, sheet TQ72 MR 737258) advertising a theme park; and if his Department is satisfied that turning traffic would not constitute a hazard to traffic proceeding to Hastings.

Mr. Atkins: The Department has been consulted in the normal way by the local planning authority and is prepared to agree the access subject to the conditions. The recently installed access does not meet those conditions and does not comply with the Department's current design standards.

Departmental Staff (Dismissal)

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of his Department's employees have been sacked for incompetence since 1986.

Mr. Atkins: Since 1 January 1986, 26 employees of the Department have had their employment terminated on the ground of inefficiency, and 25 on the ground of limited efficiency. Seventy staff did not have their employment confirmed at the end of their probationary period.

Railways

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the information he has for the railways in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) France and (d) Italy on (i) the amount of profit/loss, (ii) the number of passengers, (iii) passenger-kilometres and (iv) tonne-kilometres carried in (1) 1959, (2) 1969, (3) 1979 and (4) in the latest available year, together with the number of employees and the total amount in terms of local currency of the total state contribution and of total investment.

Mr. Portillo: I do not have information for the years 1959 and 1969. The information readily available is as follows:

Information on profit/loss and subsidy is available for 1985 and 1981. Comparisons between countries are misleading as accounting policies vary across Europe. For example, since nationalisation the Government have written off approximately £1·5 billion (cash) of BR debt. If interest still had to be paid on this amount, the grant would have to be much higher to achieve the same effect. Other railways have been treated differently: in particular I understand that the West German railway has a large debt burden.

[1] Italian figures in billion lire.

The most recent investment comparisons my Department has are for 1989-90.

| £ | Great Britain (BR) | West Germany | France | Italy |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Investment (million) | 685 | 1,662 | 1,062 | n/a |
| Investment per route mile (thousand) | 66 | 97 | 49 | n/a |

Source: January 1989 International Railway Journal.

International comparisons of financial statistics must take account of the differences between the networks' geographical and operating conditions. A comparison of subsidy per route mile shows that the level of subsidy paid to British Rail, in relation to the size of the network, is marginally higher than for the French railways. This is despite British Rail's smaller network being more heavily used than those in France and West Germany. The current budget for British Rail investment is also higher than that planned by French railways when the size of the network is taken into account.

Hunts (Trespass)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will direct British Rail to prosecute in all cases where evidence is available of hunts trespassing on railway property, particularly where running rails are situated and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Decisions on prosecutions are matters for the police and prosecuting authorities.

Greenhouse Effect

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy at the next Council of European Transport Ministers to take steps to initiate a research programme to combat the effects on greenhouse global warming from the transport sector in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Atkins: Following the June Council of Environment Ministers, the European Commission is already committed to looking into methods of controlling carbon dioxide emissions from vehicles. There is also a wider intergovernmental panel on climatic change which is examining the greenhouse effect in a more global context.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to evaluate the recommendation made in the sixth report of the Energy Select Committee that a full study be made of the implications for the greenhouse effect of the present transport modes, and of increased road use by the year 2000.

Mr. Atkins: The Government will give a full response to the Select Committee's recommendations in due course.

London Assessment Studies

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many visits he has made to areas affected by the London assessment studies; whom he met; and on what dates the visits occurred.

Mr. Atkins: I have not yet had the opportunity to make any such visits.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total number of representations he has now received concerning the London assessment studies; what proportion of these are opposed to all road building; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Department has received many representations about all aspects of the studies. To identify the proportion opposed to all road building would involve disproportionate cost.

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will authorise his consultants for the west London assessment study to consider road pricing for London as a whole; and if he will make it his policy to ensure that account is taken of both generated and diverted traffic effects arising from other road schemes including the M25 and Westway in assessing new road options.

Mr. Atkins: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply he was given on 28 June at column 474. The traffic models already take into account diverted traffic and an allowance will be made for generated traffic.

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether information concerning rail freight over Barnes bridge is available to his consultants for the west London assessment study.

Mr. Atkins: The consultants for the west London assessment study have held numerous meetings with British Rail and have obtained information concerning use of the railway over Barnes bridge.

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have signed the petitions presented to him opposing options contained in the west London assessment study.

Mr. Atkins: I have received several petitions about the west London assessment study. It is not possible without disproportionate cost to identify how many individuals have signed one or more of them.

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements are being made to take account of current transport studies including the central London rail study, the Heathrow and south west quadrant study and the Heathrow surface access study in the preparation of the west London assessment study.

Mr. Atkins: Co-ordination of the various studies is arranged by the Department's officials.

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what general arrangements are being made for public participation on stage 2B of the west London assessment study; what period is planned for this consultation; which local organisations will be consulted; how the public will be involved; and under what terms the stage 2B report will be made available.

Mr. Atkins: An announcement on the arrangements for public participation on stage 2B of the study will be made in due course.

Road Accidents (Cyclists)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total number of road accidents involving cyclists in the past year; what are the comparable figures for the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The figures requested are as follows:

All accidents involving pedal cyclists: 1983-1987

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1983 | 31,236 |
| 1984 | 31,586 |
| 1985 | 27,482 |
| 1986 | 26,641 |
| 1987 | 26,616 |

Final figures are not yet available for 1988; provisional estimates show 25,800 pedal cycle casualties for the year. This compares with a figure of 30,600 for 1983, a decrease of 16 per cent.

While this fall is welcomed by the Department, we remain concerned at the high level of pedal cyclist casualties and are committed to reducing it further.

Driving Licences

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in how many instances, in each of the last five years, he has exercised his powers to investigate the health of applicants for and holders of driving licences who are over the age of 70 years.

Mr. Atkins: This information is not available.

Drivers aged 70 or over are required to renew their licences at least every three years. Like all drivers, they are required by law to notify the DVLC of any relevant health condition when they apply for a driving licence, or if a condition develops or worsens during the currency of a licence.

Rail Transport (East London)

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for improving rail transport in east London.

Mr. Portillo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Arbuthnot) on 26 July, Official Report, column 729.

Manchester Airport (Accident)

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he has received any recent report from the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority on progress being made to implement the air accident investigation branch recommendations following the Manchester airport tragedy that (a) mandatory provision for smoke hoods in all passenger aircraft, (b) the development and introduction of water spray/mist systems, (c) the improved rules to facilitate evacuation rates and (d) the development of toxicity tests in cabin material specifications.;

(2) if he will ask the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority to review methods by which passenger jets are approved for air worthiness certification in light of the conclusions drawn by an expert from the Federal Aviation Administration on the subject of aging jets at a conference on aviation safety held in London in June.

Mr. McLoughlin: The safety regulation of civil aviation is wholly the statutory responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority.

I understand that the expert referred to was explaining matters which have been for over a year the subject of discussion and action by, among others, the Civil Aviation Authority and the Federal Aviation Administration.

The most recent CAA report on the AAIB investigation is the "Follow-up Action on Accident Reports No. F. 5/89" issued on 13 March. This document covers all of the matters raised by my hon. Friend and I shall arrange for a copy to be sent to him.

Traffic Speed (London)

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his best estimate of the likely average traffic speed in 10, 20 and 30 years' time on the basis of the information and assumptions included in "Transport in London".

Mr. Atkins: I would not expect average traffic speeds in London as a whole to change substantially.

Fishing Vessels

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow on 26 July, he will set out the requirements of the 1988 Act which each of the 150 formerly registered vessels failed to satisfy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The 150 vessels did not meet any or all of the requirements of schedule 14 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1988 relating to the ownership, management and control of the vessel. Thirty-one of these vessels also could not have been registered because they did not have valid safety certificates.

M2 and A2

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the cost of widening the carriageway to three lanes of (a) the A2 between London and the commencement of the M2, (b) the M2, and (c) the A2 between the end of the M2 and Canterbury.

Mr. Atkins: The A2 already has dual three-lane carriageways from the London boundary to the start of the M2.

A scheme for widening the M2 to dual three-lanes between junctions 1 and 3 is programmed, at an estimated works cost of £28 million at November 1985 prices. Subject to detailed investigation, this scheme might also provide for the third southbound lane to continue some way beyond junction 3 as a crawler lane.

There are no present plans for widening the remainder of the M2, or the A2 between the motorway and Canterbury. Estimated costs are not, therefore available.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the improvement and maintenance programmes for the A2 and M2 roads were last reviewed at ministerial level; and when he will next carry out such a review.

Mr. Atkins: The recent White Paper "Roads for Prosperity" (Cm. 693) announced the addition to the programme of the A2/A282 Dartford improvements scheme, and also the intention to carry out a study into possible future need for improvement along the section of A2 between Bean and the M2. The needs of the national trunk road network as a whole are kept under constant review by Ministers, and new schemes added when justified. We shall continue to watch the position on the A2/M2 route in the light of traffic developments.

Ministers review the national road maintenance programme annually, usually early in the calendar year. This covers all motorway and all-purpose trunk roads.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial and other criteria were used in determining whether or not to carry out maintenance work on the M2 and A2 roads north of Canterbury in each year from 1985 to 1989; and if he will publish the criteria.

Mr. Atkins: Maintenance priorities on all trunk roads are determined using engineering judgment, based upon the results of road condition assessment surveys and the need for timely intervention to minimise costs. Much of the A2/M2 has exceeded its design life and its condition gave it a high maintenance priority.

The Department's methods for monitoring road condition and for assessing the needs for maintenance are already published. There can be no set criteria for the application of expert engineering judgment to survey results.

British Rail (Privatisation)

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effects of privatising British Rail (a) as one national private railway company and (b) as individual regional private railway companies.

Mr. Portillo: These are among the privatisation options being considered.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he has given to the proposal to privatise Network SouthEast, with its operational responsibilities to include the development and operation of a Channel tunnel rail link, as a separate railway company; and what representations he has received from private sector parties interested in such a proposal.

Mr. Portillo: A range of privatisation options for British Rail is being considered, including privatisation by business sectors, of which Network SouthEast is one. Privatisation options will need to take account of the Channel tunnel rail link proposals, but I have received no representations from the private sector concerning privatisation of Network SouthEast and the rail link together.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to announce his decision on the privatisation of British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: Not for some time.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations British Rail has made to him with regard to the progress of discussions with parties from the private sector interested in investing in a Channel tunnel rail link scheme; and when he expects to be able to announce the outcome of those discussions.

Mr. Portillo: The British Railways board keeps me informed of its progress in securing private sector involvement in the rail link scheme. An announcement will be made in due course.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from potential bidders from the private sector interested in the private financing and future operations of a Channel tunnel rail link scheme.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend and I have received some representations on this subject. British Rail is currently discussing its proposals for the high-speed rail link with several private sector interests.

Thames Link Station (Camberwell)

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what applications for funding for a projected new Thames link station in Camberwell he has received from British Rail and Southwark borough council; when applications were made; for what sum was the bid for a Government grant; and when he expects to be able to announce his decision on any such application.

Mr. Portillo: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Public Transport Grants

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what Government grants are available for public transport investment where there are non-user benefits; and if any such grants have been applied for, or awarded.

Mr. Portillo: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Provincial Railway Services

Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the British Railways board has responded to the report by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the board's provincial services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The British Railways board has made an initial response to the report and I have today placed copies of that response in the Library of the House. The Monopolies and Mergers Commission has generally endorsed the achievements and strategy of the provincial sector and the board has accepted nearly all the commission's recommendations. I am grateful for the commission's work and I welcome the board's positive response. The commission endorses the board's considerable progress in reducing the costs of provincial services and raising revenue through better marketing. I attach great importance to that. But these services still require considerable public subsidy and they must be cost effective. I shall monitor the board's progress in following up the commission's recommendations and a further statement will be made to the House about that, probably early next year.

The commission's report makes recommendations about quality of service targets. Having considered the advice of the commission together with that of the central transport consultative committee and of the board itself, we have now asked the board to aim for the revised quality targets for provincial services which are set out in the table. We are expecting the targets to be met by each of the express/longer rural and urban shorter rural categories of service as a whole. However, we have asked the board to advise on the cost implications of meeting the targets on each route.

The new targets are more in line with the provincial sector's customer-oriented approach. They are consistent with the existing quality targets set for InterCity and Network SouthEast services. They establish reasonable levels of service for the board to provide for customers using provincial services without imposing exessive costs or fares. I very much welcome the recent appointment by the board of a provincial quality manager.

I commend the new targets to the passenger transport executives for the services they support. But they may of course choose different targets if they judge that the extra benefits justify a higher level of local support.

The board's response records that discussions are also taking place with my Department about recommendations that involve wider policy issues. Further announcements on these matters will be made in due course.

Drink-Driving

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of crashes involving more than one vehicle resulting in death or serious injury to individuals without alcohol in their blood are caused by drivers with illegal blood alcohol levels in (a) England and Wales and (b) Scotland.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 26 July 1989]: That information is not available in the form requested. Approximately 8 per cent. of fatalities in road accidents are of non-drivers in accidents where at least one of the drivers involved had a blood alcohol level above the legal limit, but many of these would themselves have had alcohol in their blood. The corresponding figure for serious injuries is 3 per cent.

Lead-free Petrol

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has undertaken with the Petrol Retailers Association with a view to outlawing the practice of selling lead-free petrol through dual-purpose petrol pump nozzles.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 25 July 1989]: Petrol retailers have been given a temporary derogation by the weights and measures authorities to use dual-purpose nozzles. It expires on 1 April next year. The subject was discussed at the recent meeting of the unleaded petrol group, chaired by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment. The Petrol Retailers Association was represented at the meeting.

British Rail (Safety)

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list (a) the number of reports he has received from the railways inspectorate, (b) the number recommending prosecutions, (c) the number of prosecutions taken up and the outcome for each of the past 10 years.

(2) if he will list (a) the number of deaths on British Rail premises each year in the last 10 years and (b) the number of prosecutions for such deaths and the outcome of the prosecutions.

Mr. Portillo [pursuant to his reply, 29 June c. 522–23]: The figures given in table A were for accidental deaths on all railways. The numbers for BR cannot generally be isolated without a lot of research, although it has been possible to do so for the years since the records were computerised.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers (Turnover)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information as to the turnover of teachers he has available to him.

Mrs. Rumbold: Figures for teacher turnover for the three most recent available years are:

| | Leaving post | of which, moving to another post |
|---|---|---|
| | Per cent. | Per cent. |
| 1985 | 14·7 | 7·2 |
| 1986 | 16·1 | 8·5 |
| 1987 | 14·6 | 7·4 |

Teachers (London)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to improve the teacher supply in London.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Members for Tottenham (Mr. Grant) and Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 4 July at column 119.

Examinations

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will propose amendments to the existing system of the collection of examination fees from pupils to ensure that such fees are paid to the local education authority before those pupils enter the examination.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is for the independent examination boards to recover fees for examination entries. Under the existing arrangements, local education authorities meet the cost of pupil entries from maintained schools and, in the case of prescribed public examinations, may not levy a charge in respect of that cost where the pupil has been prepared for the examination in a maintained school.

Deaf-blind Children

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to give financial support to local education authorities setting up new educational services for deaf-blind children as recommended in his Department's policy document "Educational Provision for Deaf-Blind Children".

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department's policy statement encourages local education authorities to consider how to use more effectively existing special schools and units and support services to develop educational services for deaf-blind children.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to encourage the development of training for teachers of deaf-blind children.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department will shortly be laying before Parliament new Education (Teachers) Regulations to come into effect on 1 September 1989. These will extend the mandatory qualification requirement to cover teachers of pupils who are both visually and hearing impaired. Training leading to an approved qualification for teaching these children will have national priority status under the local education authorities training grants scheme 1990-91.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to ensure that local education authorities respond to the recommendations in his Department's policy document on educational provision for deaf-blind children, published in March.

Mr. Alan Howarth: During the coming year, the Department will be following up through regional conferences for special education what action local education authorities are taking on the policy statement.

Physical Education

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many physical education teachers there were in 1987, 1988 and on the latest available date.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest available data of the number of teachers in maintained schools in England with a post A-level qualification in physical education are as follows:

| | Full-time | Part-time |
|---|---|---|
| Primary schools (including nursery) | 12,800 | 2,100 |
| Secondary schools | 31,600 | 3,900 |

The figures refer to March 1987, for primary schools and March 1988 for secondary schools. Information for secondary schools in 1987 is not available.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the numbers entering training to become physical education teachers in 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mrs. Rumbold: The numbers of entrants to secondary initial training courses in physical education in 1986, 1987 and 1988, for England and Wales are as follows:

| | 1986 | 1987 | 1988 |
|---|---|---|---|
| PGCE | 249 | 293 | 262 |
| BEd | 537 | 604 | 643 |
| Total | 786 | 897 | 905 |

Source: DES annual ITT recruitment survey.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to carry out a survey of facilities available for school sports; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Religious Education (Ealing)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to have the proposed new religious education syllabus in Ealing scrutinised by Her Majesty's inspectorate of education.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department is currently considering representations made about this syllabus. I will let my hon. Friend know the outcome.

ILEA (Redundancy Arrangements)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received concerning the redundancy arrangements for female staff of the Inner London education authority; if they have been scrutinised by the Equal Opportunities Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State received two letters from the Trades Union Congress, dated 17 and 24 May, concerning the redundancy arrangements for female staff of the Inner London education authority. The second of these two letters enclosed a copy of a letter of 17 May from the Equal Opportunities Commission. The matter was also raised by the staff associations of the Inner London education authority.

The Department replied to the Trades Union Congress on 7 July, attaching a copy of the regulations on the redundancy compensation arrangements for staff of the Inner London education authority, which had been laid before Parliament that day. The Department made clear in that letter its view that the regulations did not discriminate against female employees. The entitlement to a redundancy payment in the regulations derives from the statutory framework set out in the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978. This provides that certain categories of part-time employee, regardless of their sex, are not eligible to receive redundancy compensation.

Student Loans

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has had about the withdrawal of social security benefits under the proposed student top-up loan scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: We have received a substantial number of representations about the Government's proposals on the introduction of top-up loans. Within that total of some 3,000 letters, no separate figure for representations about social security benefits is available.

A and AS-level

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number of A and AS-level entrants by subject for 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mrs. Rumbold: The number of school leavers attempting A-level by subject for 1987 and 1988 are shown in the table. Figures for 1989 are not yet available. The first AS examinations were taken in 1989 and figures are not yet available. I will write to the hon. Member about the numbers of students in further education colleges attempting A-levels.

Teachers

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate the number of qualified teachers available against the anticipated demand in each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: As at January 1989, there were 397,400 teachers employed by LEAs in England. Gross demand for teachers in maintained schools, in line with projected pupil numbers, will be approximately the same in 1992 as in 1989. There will be sufficient qualified teachers overall, including newly qualified teachers and out of service teachers, to meet this demand. My Department's action programme aims to help schools and LEAs in those regions where there are shortages to recruit the teachers they need.

Dyslexia

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement regarding the central monitoring of individual local education authorities' performance in fulfilling their statutory duty to identify pupils with dyslexia.

Mr. Alan Howarth: It is for individual local education authorities, in the exercise of their statutory duties under the 1981 Education Act, to make provision for the identification of children with special educational needs. My right hon. Friend has no plans for central monitoring of LEAs' performance concerning dyslexia.

Youth Arts Organisations

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the grants given by his Department in 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90, in 1989 prices to (a) the National Youth Orchestra, (b) the National Youth Theatre, (c) the National Youth Choir, (d) the National Youth Dance Trust and (e) any other national youth arts organisations; and what plans there are for the continued funding of these organisations.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The table shows the maximum level of funding, at 1989 prices, made available by the Department of Education and Science to seven national youth arts organisations 1984-88 to 1989-80.

| Organisation | [1] 1984-85 £ | [1] 1985-86 £ | [1] 1986-87 £ | [1] 1987-88 £ | [1] 1988-89 £ | 1989-90 £ |

These organisations are eligible to apply for grant for the 1990-91 financial year under the terms of the Department's current grant memorandum for grants to national voluntary youth organisations issued in April this year. I have placed a copy of this Memorandum in the Libraries of both Houses. The level of any grant to these bodies will depend on the Department's assessment of their programmes of work proposed for DES funding in 1990-91 within the overall funding available for the purpose.

Examinations (Fees)

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when pupils who sit for general certificate of secondary education examinations fail to complete the necessary entry requirements, what remedies are available to the local education authority to recover the fees from the parent or guardian.

Mrs. Rumbold: If a pupil fails without good reason to complete the requirements, including course work, for any public examination for which the LEA or school has paid the entry fee, it is open to the LEA to recover the fee from the parent or guardian.

WALES

Cambrian Coast Railway

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to have discussions with the chairman of British Rail concerning the future of the Cambrian coast railway line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend expects to meet the chairman of British Rail soon to discuss a range of issues affecting the rail network in Wales.

Broadleaved Woodland Grants

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions the Forestry Commission awarded grants under the broadleaved woodland grant scheme in Wales, between its inception in 1985 and closure in 1988; and on how many occasions was the grant of £100 for obtaining professional advice, in the preparation of a plan of operations under the scheme, awarded.

Mr. Peter Walker: To date, the Forestry Commission has approved 677 applications for grant under the broadleaved woodland grant scheme in Wales. The grant of £100 has been paid on 183 of those applications.

Welsh Water

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to encourage the ownership of shares in Welsh Water by the people of Wales.

Mr. Grist: Decisions have yet to be taken as to the best way of ensuring that customers apply for shares in their own water service companies. We are examining the precedents set in earlier privatisations.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy that shares in Welsh Water are marketed separately from any basket of shares in water companies in England.

Mr. Grist: The Government have already announced that individuals will be able to apply for shares in their own water service company and in any other water service company.

999 Calls

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to ensure that emergency services in mid-Wales and north Wales do not experience the problems of those in south Wales in relation to the introduction of new exchange arrangements for 999 calls.

Mr. Peter Walker: As my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs made clear in the House, there is already a high quality of 999 service across the country and the Government are concerned to see that standard of service maintained in the future. I know that the Director General of Telecommunications, whose office has the general duty of monitoring and enforcing the conditions of licences issued to public telecommunications operators, will be keeping the provision of 999 call services under review.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has investigated the recent problems with 999 services in Wales as a whole and the consequent effect on emergency services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have been kept fully informed of the recent problems with 999 services in Wales.

Hospital Staff

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy to protect the hours and wage rates for the lowest paid hospital staff.

Mr. Grist: It is the responsibility of employing authorities to determine hours of work in the light of local circumstances. A general Whitley council agreement provides for the short-term protection of earnings for staff who suffer a reduction in basic hours worked within the standard working week.

Sewage Discharges

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy to obtain and publish details of the schemes of work with starting and finishing dates, in respect of each derogation for sewage discharges in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The investment programme covering this work is still under discussion between the Department and Welsh Water Authority. Applications for time-limited consents are currently being advertised by the authority; consents which are granted will make clear the period for which they will apply and this information will be entered upon the public register maintained by the authority.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the activities of the Welsh Development Agency excluding property which have been privatised and the amounts of money estimated to have been raised from the privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: No area of the Welsh Development Agency's work has been privatised, although, as I told the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 17 July, at columns 4-5, a number have been contracted out.

Housing Allocations

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he is giving to housing allocation policies, particularly in respect of high-rise accommodation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Each local authority is responsible for making effective allocation arrangements for the high-rise or other accommodation it owns.

Practical guidance notes for the allocation of council houses, prepared by the Housing Management Advisory Panel for Wales, were issued in February 1988.

Infertility

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the infertility services provided by each district health authority;

(2) what is the prevalence of infertility in Wales.

Mr. Grist: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether plans for the provision of infertility services are required to be included in the strategic plans of each district health authority.

Mr. Grist: There is no such requirement, though in drawing up strategic plans district health authorities are expected to assess likely developments in, and the need for services of this kind, and to make provision for them as appropriate.

Mr. Tony Johnson

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the in-patient and out-patient treatment given to Mr. Tony Johnson in Cardiff and of information given by the health authority to the housing authority, in respect of Mr. Johnson's rehousing.

Mr. Grist: I cannot comment upon the details of the treatment given to any patient; these are a confidential matter solely for the patient and those concerned with that treatment. A plan for the care of an individual psychiatric patient after discharge is for the agencies concerned. My hon. Friend should write to the general manager of South Glamorgan health authority if he wishes to seek further information.

Drugs

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library the latest figures on the prevalence of drug misuse and service provision.

Mr. Grist: Drug misuse is generally an illegal and clandestine activity and it is not therefore possible to provide accurate information on prevalence. However, one of the aims of the Welsh Committee on Drug Misuse is to keep the incidence, character and variety of drug misuse under regular review. As part of that aim, the committee is currently considering the options for data collection from treatment and other agencies in an attempt to develop a database which, with other information might provide the basis on which to make a more realistic assessment of the extent of the problem.

As to service provision, in addition to the general services already provided by the statutory authorities, on 4 April this year I announced the availability of additional resources to combat drug misuse. A copy of the announcement is available in the Library of the House.

Salmonella

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will indicate the number of victims in the north Wales salmonella poisoning outbreak; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the outbreak of salmonella poisoning in north Wales;

(3) what consultations he has had with the Clwyd area health authority concerning the outbreak in Clwyd of salmonella poisoning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the cause and extent of the food poisoning outbreak in north Wales, and north Cheshire-Wirral area.

Mr. Peter Walker: On the latest available information, there have been 43 cases of food poisoning in north Wales caused by salmonella typhimurium. Thirteen patients have been admitted to hospital in Clywd and one has died. I understand, again on the latest available information, that 52 cases of food poisoning in England caused by salmonella typhimurium, relating to this outbreak, have been reported to the Department of Health. Ten patients have been admitted to hospital and one has died.

Infection was identified on 26 July in cold cooked meat produced by Joss Williams and Sons of Flint. Its production of cooked meat ceased on 26 July and previous supplies were withdrawn from sale.

On 26 and 27 July my chief medical officer issued details of the retail outlets in north Wales and the north-west of England, which reportedly were supplied with cold cooked meats from Joss Williams and Sons. The public have been advised not to eat any cold cooked meals purchased from sources supplied by this firm, and wholesalers and retailers have been advised to remove such products from sale.

Information is being conveyed to environmental health departments in England and Wales as it becomes available to enable them to take appropriate action.

The Department has been in close touch with the Clwyd health authority since being informed of the situation on 24 July.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of botulism, salmonella enteriditis, salmonella typhimurium, listeriosis and other types of food poisoning have been detected and reported in Wales since 1983 for each month of each year.

Mr. Peter Walker [holding answer 24 July 1989]: The information is not readily available in the detail requested. Annual figures for 1983 to 1988 are given in the tables. There are no separate figures on food-borne campylobacter infections.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Food (Country of Origin)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will ensure that the country of origin is indicated on all food products sold in the outlets of the Refreshment Department.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Such a proposal is not considered practicable.

CIVIL SERVICE

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what is the total number of places available in workplace nurseries for civil servants; and what is the comparable figures for each of the last five years.

Mr. Luce: None, but there are firm plans to open nurseries by early 1990 in Home Office (Croydon), Ministry of Defence (London) and in my own Department at the Civil Service college (Sunningdale). Discussions are under way in other Departments concerning other possible locations.

TSB Scotland

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he proposes to have with the TSB Group to ensure that the assurances given to him about TSB Scotland's continued autonomy are kept.

Mr. Ryder: None.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Lawson: Treasury Ministers received 1,277 letters from hon. Members in January and 9,159 letters in the whole of this Session up to 1 July. All have been acknowledged and in the vast majority of cases substantive replies have been sent. A small number are still outstanding.

Outward Investment

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will calculate and show outward investment from the United Kingdom in each year since 1975; and if he will indicate the recipient countries.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Estimates of outward investment (direct, portfolio and other, mainly short-term, investments) are published in United Kingdom balance of payments 1988 edition (Transactions in United Kingdom external assets, 1975 to 1987, in table 1.1) and in Economic Trends, June 1989 (latest data to 1988 in table A1).

Comprehensive estimates of the main recipient countries and areas are available only for direct investment (investment in overseas branches and subsidiary and associated companies), which are published in the Business Monitor series, M4, Overseas Transactions. Copies of these publications are in the Library.

North Sea Oil

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will show the value to the Treasury of revenue from North sea oilfields in each year since 1978; and if he will show what that represented in each year as a proportion of gross national product.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The value of North sea oil revenues is published by the Department of Energy in the annual Brown Book. Gross national product statistics are available in the Blue Book published by the Central Statistical Office.

Rateable Values, City of London

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the gross and net aggregate rateable value of those offices in the City of London referred to in his answer of 14 November 1988, Official Report, columns 525-26, the current poundage, and his Department's estimate of the current rental and capital value per square foot.

Mr. Lilley: The table below provides, with one exception, the details requested. An estimate of the current capital value per square foot could not be produced without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

| Building | Rateable value | | Rate in £ | Estimated rental value per square foot |

These figures reflect the rateable values of the buildings as shown in the valuation list as at 24 July 1989.

Taxation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each financial year since 1978-79 the amount of tax raised by (i) personal income taxes, (ii) national insurance contributions, (iii) capital taxes, (iv) corporate taxes, (v) indirect taxes and (vi) rates; and if he will give a forecast for the current financial year on a full-year basis.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest available data, using national income and expenditure account definitions, are:

| £ billion | Income Tax[2] | Corporation Tax[3], PRT and oil royalties[4] | Central Government Expenditure Taxes | Capital taxes on persons | Local authority rates[5] | National Insurance Contributions[6] | Total taxes and NICs |

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his reply dated 10 April, Official Report, column 348, concerning the number of tax units and tax liability by range of total income, he will publish the underlying assumption concerning the increase in incomes together with his present estimate of the increase in average and median earnings in 1989-90 compared to 1988-89 and 1987-88 for manual and non-manual workers respectively.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The information given in reply to the hon. Member on 10 April 1989 was based on a projection to 1989-90 levels of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes. The assumptions used in the projection are consistent with those underlying the economic forecast given in chapter 3 of the 1989-90 Financial Statement and Budget Report. It is not the practice to publish forecasts of personal incomes and average earnings.

Mr. Austin Michell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the change in the number of higher-rate taxpayers in the current financial year; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing his estimate of the distribution by range of total income and tax category together with the total tax liability.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The number of married couples and single people liable to the higher rate of income tax is estimated to be 1,330,000 in 1988-89, and 1,440,000 in 1989-90. The tables show the distribution of those liable to higher rate tax in 1989-90 and their income tax liability by income and tax category.

Estimates are based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes and are provisional.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing for women above and for those below pensionable age, the estimated number of tax units paying income tax in 1989-90 directly or indirectly and the estimated amount of tax payable in a full year at the marginal rate, dividing the figures to show the amounts by range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000 and distinguishing between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples; and if he will include tables showing his estimate of the amount of tax which would be payable by such tax units in 1989-90 on the basis of separate taxation for husbands and wives as proposed for 1990.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 25 July 1989]: Estimates for single women are given in the tables. They are based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes and are provisional.

Under the present tax system a married women's income is treated as her husband's and taxed as though it belonged to him. The estimates requested for the tax liability on the income of married women under the present tax system and under independent taxation could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for wives with earned income on Inland Revenue records the estimated distribution of the number of such wives in 1989-90 by wife's total income and the couples' joint total income together with the estimated revenue loss from wife's earnings elections and the estimated further loss on the 1990-91 basis of separate taxation of husbands and wives;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing for those above and for those below pensionable age, the estimated number of tax units paying income tax and their income tax liability as a proportion of their total income in a full year at 1989-90 rates, by range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000 distinguishing between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples, and if he will add figures showing what effect his proposals for the separate taxation of husbands and wives will have on the numbers of tax units and the proportion paid in tax by (a) one-earner and (b) two-earner married couples.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 25 July 1989]: I shall answer when resources permit.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing for those above and for those below pensionable age the estimated number of tax units in receipt of more than £200 gross in composite rate interest in 1987-88 and the average amount received, together with his estimates for 1989-90; and if he will divide the figures to show the amounts for those above and those below pensionable age by range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000 and distinguishing between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples.

Mr. Lilley: Estimates for the years requested are not available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing for those above and for those below pensionable age the estimated number of tax units in receipt of more than £200 gross in lettings and other incomes from property and the average amount received, together with his estimates for 1989-90; and if he will divide the figures to show the amounts for those above and those below pensionable age by range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000 and distinguishing between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples.

Mr. Lilley: For information in respect of 1985-86 I refer the hon. Member to the answers provided to him in October last year—Official Report, 19 October 1988, columns 935-38. Estimates for 1988-89 are not yet available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing for one-earner and two-earner married couples under 65 years and married couples over 65 years the number of tax units paying less and the number paying more tax in each income band up to a lower limit of £100,000 at 1989-90 rates of tax in the event of the proposed allowances for separate taxation of husbands and wives being replaced by a transferable allowance of £3,000 for each spouse; and if he will include figures of the consequential changes in tax yield.

Mr. Lilley: The estimates requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing for those above and for those below pensionable age, the estimated number of tax units in receipt of more than £200 gross in National Savings accounts and bonds and the average amount received, together with his estimates for 1989-90; and if he will divide the figures to show the amounts for those above and those below pensionable age by range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000 and distinguishing between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for direct tax allowances and reliefs listed in table 6.5 of Cm. 288-I, "The Government's Expenditure Plans", his estimate of the cost in a full year at current rates of incomes and tax for items which will cost the Exchequer £10 million or more.

Mr. Lilley: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report his estimate of the cost to the Exchequer of an increase of £100 in each of the allowances and reliefs for income tax at 1989-90 income and tax levels; and if he will provide corresponding figures on the basis of the 1990-91 regime for the independent taxation of husbands and wives.

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Member to table 4.5 of the Autumn Statement 1988.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing by range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000, for those above and those below pensionable age and distinguishing between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples, the estimated saving to the Exchequer of abolishing all allowances and reliefs other than the basic single and married allowances; and if he will provide similar tables on the 1990 basis of separate taxation of husbands and wives;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the estimated number and direct revenue cost of wife's earnings elections in a full year by range of incomes at 1989-90 income and tax levels, together with tables for (i) husbands and (ii) wives showing (a) the numbers separately assessed by range of total income of the relevant spouse and (b) the aggregate total income of each spouse and the aggregate investment income of each spouse; and if he will add a table showing the additional direct revenue cost on the basis of the 1990-91 proposals for the separate taxation of husbands and wives;

(3) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for those above and those below age 65 years the estimated number of tax units and their tax liability in the current financial year in each range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000 divided into single persons and one-earner and two-earner married couples together; and if he will include the number of females within each category and their tax liability;

(4) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing by range of income and tax status an estimate of the saving to the Exchequer in a full year from abolishing, respectively, the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions and higher rate relief on mortgage interest;

(5) whether he will publish in the Official Report his estimate of the yield from an increase of one penny in the standard rate of tax and in the employees' and employers' national insurance contribution, respectively, in 1989-90; and if he will divide the tax figure to show the yield from earned and unearned income.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for (a) two-earner families with a wife's earnings election and (b) other higher-rate taxpayers by tax category, his estimate of the number and distribution of incomes, together with the average unearned income and average amount of mortgage interest relief in each income band in each category in the current financial year; and if he will add a table showing the gains and losses to the Exchequer from the application of separate taxation of husbands and wives as proposed for 1990.

Mr. Lilley: Provisional estimates for 1989-90 based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes are given in the table. Estimates of the effects of the introduction of independent taxation in 1990-91 were given in the Inland Revenue press release on independent taxation issued on 15 March 1988.

Treasury Revenues

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total income to the Treasury since May 1979 from (a) North sea oil revenues and (b) privatisation of publicly owned assets.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The figures requested are given in the table below:

£ billion

CBI

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the chairman of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss management of the economy.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer meets representatives of the CBI from time to time, and a wide range of subjects is discussed.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of gross investment, including leasing, in plant and machinery in manufacturing industry in 1988 less capital consumption in terms of 1985 prices; and if he will provide comparable figures for 1964, 1969 and 1974 and 1979 in terms of 1985 prices.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Estimates of investment net of capital consumption by manufacturing industry in plant and machinery are not of publishable quality.

Manufactures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what part of the decline between 1977 and 1988 in the United Kingdom balance of trade in manufactures less erratics was due to overheating of the economy and what part to the increase in relative export prices for manufactures and in the terms of trade for finished manufactures between 1976 and 1987; what was the percentage increase in each case; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing, on the basis of information in the Treasury model of the economy, the reduction in the rate of economic growth and alternatively in the trade-weighted nominal exchange rate in 1990 and 1991 required to enable the deficit to be eliminated by the end of 1991, all other assumptions remaining unchanged.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what part of the improvement in the balance of trade in finished manufactures between the United Kingdom and the United States of America between 1980 and 1987 and the deterioration between 1977 and 1980 and since 1987 is due to overheating in one economy or the other and what part to the movement in relative prices of importable and exportable goods; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1970 the United Kingdom balance of trade with the United States of America (i) total trade less oil, (ii) manufactures less erratics and (iii) finished manufactures less erratics together with the ratio of the relative export prices for manufactures based on 1980 = 100.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested, with the exception of the data on trade with the United States of America, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I shall answer when resources permit.

Industrial Economies

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which countries have overtaken the United Kingdom in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's list of the leading industrial economies in the last three years.

Mr. Ryder: From June 1989, Italy has been placed before the United Kingdom in OECD publications where the leading industrial economies are given in order of size. The OECD ordering is based on GDP in an earlier year converted at market exchange rates. On the basis of GDP comparisons using OECD estimates of purchasing power parities, the United Kingdom comes before Italy in both 1987 and 1988.

Oil Prices

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out in detail the assumptions he made about the oil price in preparing the 1989 Budget.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The forecast published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1989-90 was prepared on the assumption that the North sea oil price would remain close to recent levels prevailing at that time.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether movements in oil prices since the 1989 Budget have caused any revision of the Budget forecasts and assumptions.

Mr. Norman Lamont: As usual, the oil price assumptions will be reconsidered when my right hon. Friend prepares his next forecast to be published as part of the Autumn Statement.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will bring up to date the estimate published in "The Challenge to Agriculture," published in February 1988, of the cost of the common agricultural policy to the average family; how the original figure was arrived at; what changes have occurred since; and for what reason.

Mr. Ryder: The estimate in "The Challenge to Agriculture" of February 1988 was quoted from "The Political Economy of International Agricultural Reform," Department of Primary Industry, Australia, 1986. It was intended as an example of one particular attempt to quantify the cost of agriculture support policies to European families. The estimate referred to the cost to each non-farm family in Europe of transfers by consumers and taxpayers to EC farmers, and included domestic agriculture programmes of member states as well as the CAP. A new estimate, based on changes that have occurred since, would involve taking account of agricultural policies in each member state and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Financial Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (a) the increase in cash terms in sterling M0 and sterling M3 (i) from May 1979 to the latest available date and (ii) between January 1974 and May 1979, (b) the annual rate of inflation on these three dates, (c) the increase in the amount lent by the banks to, respectively, the public sector and the private sector, (d) the increase in outstanding mortgages on residential property, (e) the increase in producer and retail prices and (f) the average annual rate of increase in each of the foregoing cases.

Mr. Ryder: Data for M0, M3 and bank lending are published in Financial Statistics; the Bank of England Quarterly Bulletin; and are available from the Bank of England on request.

Data on mortgages on residential property are published in Financial Statistics.

Data on prices are published in Economic Trends.

Income Tax

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what is the reduction in the United Kingdom contribution to the EEC budget and what was the forecast.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to chapter 3 of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1989-90 to 1991-92" (Cm 603).

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing his estimate of the number and amount of incomes subject to tax in the current financial year above a total of £100,000 by steps of £100,000 to the nearest 100 persons in each case and for 1978-79, the amount of tax collected in each case in 1978-79 and his estimate of the amount of tax payable in respect of the current financial year.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The available data do not permit the provision of information in the amount of detail requested. To the nearest thousand incomes (those of husband and wife being counted as one income), there were 1,000 incomes of £100,000 and above in 1978-79, upon which the liability to income tax was about £120 million. In 1986-87, the latest year for which information is available, there were 23,000 incomes of £100,000 but under £200,000, with tax liability of £1,400 million, and 5,000 incomes of £200,000 and above with tax liability of £850 million.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the earned and unearned income of the top 1 per cent. of tax payers in the current financial year and of the amount they are expected to pay in national insurance contributions;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of tax units and amount of earned income in each tax band by range of total income and tax status for those (a) above and (b) below pensionable age;

(3) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of tax units in each tax band by range of total income and tax status for those below pensionable age, his estimate of the cost to the Revenue of the substitution of a single allowance of £3,000 and a married allowance of £6,000 for the present personal income tax allowances, the married woman's earnings allowance and the wife's earnings election together with an increase in the rate of income tax for from 25 per cent. to 35 per cent. on total incomes between £5,500 and £13,000 for single persons and £11,000 and £18,500 for married persons;

(4) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for (a) one-earner and (b) two-earner married couples the number of tax units in each tax band by range of total income and tax status for those (i) above and (ii) below pensionable age and his estimate of the yield to the revenue in the current financial year from abolishing wife's earnings election and raising the higher rate of tax to 40 per cent. on incomes of married couples with total incomes between £18,500 and £27,000, 45 per cent. between £27,000 and £37,000, 50 per cent. between £37,000 and £50,000, 55 per cent. between £50,000 and £250,000 and 60 per cent. above £250,000;

(5) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of tax units in each tax band by range of total income and tax status for those (a) above and (b) below pensionable age and his estimate of the yield from making investment income chargeable to national insurance contributions on the same basis as earned income; and if he will include the number of tax units and total investment income in each case;

(6) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for single persons the number of tax units in each tax band by the range of total income and tax status for those above and below pensionable age, his estimate of the yield to the Revenue in the current financial year from an increase in higher rate tax for single persons to 40 per cent. on total incomes between £13,000 and £19,000, 45 per cent. between £19,000 and £26,000, 50 per cent. between £26,000 and £34,000, 55 per cent. between £34,000 and £125,000 and 60 per cent. above £125,000.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Personal Taxation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, further to his reply of 14 November 1988, Official Report, column 517, concerning annex C of "Inland Revenue Statistics", whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1959 the tax plus national insurance contribution threshold and break-even points for a married man on (i) average manual earnings and (ii) average earnings of all occupations; and if he will include (a) an estimate for 1989-90 based on the comparable earnings figures for April 1989 and (b) figures for the lowest decile of manual earnings in 1978-79 and 1988-89.

Mr. Lilley: Available information is given in the tables. The "tax and national insurance contribution threshold" is the level of earnings above which the married man first pays income tax or class 1 national insurance contributions.

The "break-even point" is the value of earnings at which the amount of income tax and national insurance contributions paid is equal to the money received through child benefit or family allowance. It therefore gives the level of earnings above which the family pays more income tax plus national insurance contributions than it obtains in benefits for children.

Estimates in table 1 for 1989-90 are based on the projected figures for average manual earnings and average earnings of all occupations, assuming 7·5 per cent. growth on 1988-89.

Corresponding figures for the "tax and national insurance contribution threshold" and the "break-even point" as a percentage of the lowest decile of male manual earnings in April 1978 and April 1988 are given in table 2.

[5] In 1958-59 employees paid a flat rate on all their weekly earnings.

[6] In 1968-69 employees paid a flat rate on all their weekly earnings and a graduated element on earnings above £9 per week.

[7] The break-even point is zero because National Insurance Contributions were charged at a flat-rate, regardless of weekly earnings, which was in excess of the family allowance for two children.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the estimated direct revenue cost in income tax at the standard and higher rates in the full year at current rates of (a) mortgage interest relief, (b) life assurance pensions relief, (c) retirement annuity premium relief and (d) investment income relief of occupational pension funds.

Mr. Lilley: Available estimates for 1988-89 are given below.

Estimated direct revenue cost 1988-89

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| Mortgage interest relief | 5,500 |
| —of which relief at the excess over the basic rate | 340 |
| Life assurance premium relief | 470 |
| Employees' contributions to occupational pension schemes allowed as a deduction for income tax purposes | 1,700 |
| Employees' contributions to occupational pension schemes not treated as taxable benefits in kind in the hands of the employees | 2,600 |
| Retirement annuity premium relief | 450 |
| —of which relief at the excess over the basic rate | 100 |
| Relief on investment income of occupational pension funds (assuming relief at the basic rate) | 4,400 |

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the saving to the revenue in the current financial year if (a) mortgage interest relief and (b) other non-personal allowances were progressively clawed back at the rate of 50 per cent. of income in excess of the higher rate threshold.

Mr. Lilley: It is estimated that the direct revenue yield in a full year at 1989-90 levels of income of withdrawing (a) mortgage interest relief and (b) other main reliefs from higher rate taxpayers at the rate of 50 per cent. on income in excess of the higher rate threshold is:

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| (a) Mortgage interest relief | 700 |
| (b) Retirement annuity relief (including payments by employees), relief for Class IV National Insurance contributions, employees' superannuation contributions, charitable covenants and business expansion scheme relief | 650 |

Estimates are based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes and are provisional; they assume that relief is withdrawn against liability to the higher rate of tax of 40 per cent. not just against liability to the excess of the higher rate over the basic rate.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the saving to the revenue in the current financial year if personal allowances were clawed back for the purpose of higher tax at the rate of 50 per cent. on income in excess of the higher rate threshold.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for those with and those without investment income in 1988-89 the numbers in each income band up to a lower limit of £100,000 benefiting from mortgage interest relief; and if he will provide an estimate for 1989-90;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report tables showing the estimated number of tax units under age 65 years in each income band up to a lower limit of £100,000 in receipt of mortgage interest relief in the current financial year and the percentage with investment income; and if he will also distinguish between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples.

Mr. Lilley: The available information is in the tables. It is not possible to provide reliable estimates in all the detail requested not to provide separate figures for those under 65. Estimates are subject to revision.

Life Policies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his forecast of the value in the current financial year of (a) investment-linked, (b) other surrendered life policies, excluding pension refunds, (c) the profit on these policies, and (d) the liability to tax on those profits.

Mr. Lilley: In 1986, on the basis of a sample of companies, surrenders—broadly life policies "cashed in", in whole or in part, other than on maturity or death—amounted to some £3 billion. The information necessary to update this figure is not yet available, and no discrete estimates can be made of the value of investment-linked or other policies wholly surrendered. Tax on life assurance, in respect of all policies, is paid at the level of the life office on income and gains, and policy holders, in a minority of cases, may have further liability to tax at the marginal rate: no estimate can accordingly be made of profits or tax liabilities for a particular class and generation of policies.

Junk Bonds

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what economic and financial effects have arisen in the United Kingdom economy due to the growth in the use of junk bonds.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 20 July at column 263.

IMF (Quota Increase)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Government's response to the International Monetary Fund's proposals by Mr. Michael Camdessus for a quota increase.

Mr. Ryder: The size of any increase which may be made in IMF quotas is still under review.

Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the estimated saving to the Treasury of the relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east since 1979.

Mr. Ryder: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, since no records are kept centrally of savings achieved through relocation of central Government Departments. However, the Scottish Office report published in June 1988 evaluating the dispersal of part of the Overseas Development Administration from London to East Kilbride in 1981 offers evidence of the significant financial and other advantages which can be obtained through relocation.

Inflation

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for the rate of inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The all-items RPI inflation rate in the year to June 1989 was 8·3 per cent., the same as in May. Underlying inflation is much better depicted by the increase in the RPI excluding mortgage interest payments; it rose 5·9 per cent. in the year to June 1989, down slightly from the 6 per cent. figure in May. Inflation may now have peaked and monetary policy will remain as tight as is necessary for as long as is necessary to ensure that it declines.

Interest Rates

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet representatives of the Building Societies Association to discuss the level of United Kingdom interest rates.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet representatives of the Building Societies Association.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Barron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the outcome of the recent annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank will take place between 26 and 28 September 1989.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many meetings he has had with the International Monetary Fund since 29 September 1988; whether the United Kingdom's interest rates, inflation rate, level of public investment or trade deficit were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend attended the spring meetings of the IMF in April. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, North (Mr. Burt) on 4 May 1989, Official Report, columns 347-48.

Domestic Credit

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will include in the Official Report a table showing the components of domestic credit, together with the increase in each year since 1980 and the current year to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: Data on the components of domestic credit are published in Financial Statistics table 11.7.

Clearing Banks

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will include in the Official Report a table showing for the years 1959, 1969, 1979 and 1988 the assets and liabilities of the clearing banks set out in cash, call money and so on form together with the percentage in each category and the reserves held with the Bank of England in reserve ratios and special deposits.

Mr. Ryder: Figures for the assets and liabilities of United Kingdom banks, and banks' balances with the Bank of England are published in the Bank of England Quarterly Bulletin.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will include in the Official Report a table showing for the big four clearing banks the profit before and after tax, excluding exceptional provisions in 1959, 1969, 1979 and 1988, together with his forecast for the current financial year.

Mr. Ryder: The information requested is as follows:

| | Pre-tax profits £ million | Post-tax profits £ million |
|---|---|---|
| 1969 | 212 | 112 |
| 1979 | 1,571 | 1,081 |
| 1988 | 4,443 | 2,875 |

These figures aggregate relevant figures in the annual reports of Barclays, Lloyds, Midland and National Westminster. Comparable figures for 1959 and forecasts for the current financial year are not available.

VAT (Free Ports)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 19 July, Official Report, column 182, to the hon. Member for Mossley Hill, whether he will now review the operation of existing Customs roles in freeport areas; and what consideration he has given to the representations of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Ryder: As the hon. Member will be aware, free ports were established in the United Kingdom in 1984 for an experimental period of seven years. The experiment is being reviewed this year by independent consultants. There will be a full examination of the rules administered by Customs and Excise which will take into account, among other matters, the representations of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company.

EC Budgets

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will set out in tabular form the total net payments or total net receipts of each of the other member states for the European Economic Community budgets since 1979.

Mr. Ryder: As my right hon. Friend the former Paymaster General indicated in his reply of 5 July 1989, Official Report, column 176, the information requested for other member states is not available.

Bank Lending

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase in bank lending since May 1979; where the additional funds have come from; what effect he expects the increase in interest rates since the beginning of the year to have on banking profits; and what is his forecast of the increase in revenue to the Exchequer therefrom.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 29 July 1988 at columns 735-36.

Overseas Assets

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will bring up to date the information provided in the written reply dated 16 March 1983, Official Report, column 164, concerning the amount of tax collected on income earning and other assets held overseas; and if he will include in the table an estimate for each year of the total value of such assets, whether or not they have been assessed to tax.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Mortgages

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1979 the increase in mortgage funds for housing together with the increase in the value of the houses sold by reference to stamp duty or otherwise.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1979 the estimated number of mortgages for domestic premises, the value of mortgages outstanding, and the cost of servicing the debt as a percentage of gross domestic product to one place of decimals.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to statistics published by the Department of the Environment in "Housing and Construction Statistics" and by the Building Societies Association in "Housing Finance".

Investment Income

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing by range of income and tax status an estimate of the saving to the Exchequer in a full year by setting off investment income against mortgage interest qualifying for relief under the MIRAS scheme.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for those above and for those below pensionable age, the estimated number of tax units with an investment income in 1989-90 by range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000, distinguishing between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples, together with the average investment income in each case; and if he will provide separate figures for those with an investment income of more than £200;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for women above and for those below pensionable age, the estimated number of tax units with an investment income in 1989-90 by range of total income up to a lower limit of £100,000, distinguishing between single persons, one-earner and two-earner married couples, together with the average investment income in each case; and if he will provide separate figures for those with an investment income of more than £200;

Mr. Lilley: Available estimates are in the tables. All estimates are provisional and subject to a wide margin of error because they are based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes and the coverage of investment income in the survey is incomplete. In some cases, investment income on which basic rate liability is satisfied by deduction at source is not reported. No reliable estimates can be given for single people and married couples with total income of less than £5,000.

Financial Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for manufacturing, other industrial and commercial companies, and the financial sector the same information as given in table 14.3 of the "Annual Abstract of Statistics 1989" for 1979 and 1987; and if he will add a forecast for 1988.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Separate figures for manufacturing companies are not available. A subdivision of the corporate sector between financial and industrial and commercial (including manufacturing) for the years 1979 and 1987 is given in the tables. Definitive figures for 1988 are in the course of preparation and will be available in September 1989.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing his estimate of the number of cases in which higher rate relief will be given on mortgage interest payments in the current financial year together with (a) the gross amount of interest qualifying for relief, (b) the amount of higher rate relief and (c) the number of recipients of working age and their distribution by personal tax category and by range of total income together with the average amount of relief given at the standard and higher rate of tax; and if he will add his forecast of the additional cost to the Revenue on the basis of this year's figures and rate of tax of mortgage relief as a result of the separate taxation of married couples.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will provide a further breakdown of the numbers below £15,000 given in his answer of 29 July 1988, Official Report, columns 729-30, concerning the distribution of mortgage interest relief and the percentage with investment income in the form of his answer of 27 March 1987, Official Report, column 310; and if he will provide a forecast for 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: It is not clear to which answer the hon. Member is referring.

Pensions

Mr. Austin Mitchell To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report (i) his estimate of the employers notional contribution to notionally funded and unfunded schemes, (ii) figures for the Civil Service showing the percentage contribution made by the Government and its employees and (iii) his best estimate of the proportionate split between sources of pension income in the cases quoted in sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) of paragraph 22 of the Inland Revenue paper, using as a basis the information given in his answer of 11 November 1988, Official Report, column 235.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the payment of a lump sum pension is subject to the maximum pension rules; whether the estimated cost of the lump sum referred to in the table given in his answer of 11 November 1988, Official Report, columns 357-58, include (i) those who commute their pensions for a lump sum and (ii) provision for the beneficiary to replace the lump sum by an increase in pension; and at what cost to the Exchequer.

Mr. Lilley: Part of the benefits from a tax-approved pension scheme may be paid as a tax-free lump sum. The normal maximum lump sum benefit is 1·5 times final salary from an occupational scheme or 25 per cent. of the accumulated fund under a personal pension scheme. The estimated cost of the tax exemption for lump sum payments is derived from a survey of amounts paid out in lump sums on retirement in a given year.

National Debt

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total amount of national debt repaid by the Government over the last five years.

Mr. Ryder: Over the last five years as a whole, there has been a small net public sector borrowing requirement (PSBR) of about £1 billion. However, in the last two years, there has been a public sector debt repayment (PSBR) totalling £18·3 billion and a further substantial net repayment is forecast for the current year.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the rate of growth in gross domestic product, in manufacturing output, and in employment and unemployment in the United Kingdom and other European monetary system countries since 1979; and to what he ascribes the difference.

Mr. Ryder: I shall answer when resources permit.

House Purchase

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has for (i) West Germany, (ii) France, (iii) Italy, (iv) Holland and (v) Belgium on the amount in terms of local currency of lending to purchase dwellings, the current rate of interest and the cost of servicing such loans as a percentage of (a) real disposable incomes and (b) consumers' expenditure.

Mr. Ryder: I shall answer when resources permit.

Privatisation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment of the effect of privatisation on the United Kingdom figures for (i) company profits and (ii) private and public sector investment since 1979.

Mr. Lilley: I shall answer when resources permit.

Charitable Donations

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of one-off company donations to (a) charities and (b) professional arts organisations with charitable status in every year from 1986-87 to 1988-89, inclusive.

Mr. Lilley: Estimates of single donations to charities by companies are given in the table:

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 4 |
| 1987-88 | 9 |
| 1988-89 | 19 |

Separate figures for donations to professional arts organisations with charitable status are not available.

Capital Allowances

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his forecast for capital allowances other than first year allowances for plant and machinery and vehicles for 1987; whether he will gross up for each year since 1976 the implied value of corporate investment in company cars together with the loss to the revenue; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the annual increase in gross and net investment in plant, machinery and vehicles less the estimated figure for company cars.

Mr. Lilley: Capital allowances for plant, machinery and vehicles are estimated at £15 billion in 1987, excluding public corporations. The available data on capital allowances for companies' cars are very limited and not sufficiently detailed to serve as the basis for estimates of annual expenditure.

Returnable Bottles

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to offer tax incentives to manufacturers and retailers who sell drinks in returnable bottles.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to introduce such tax incentives.

Farming Partnerships

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide statistics on the taxation of farming partnerships on the same basis as that given in his answer of 14 November 1988, Official Report, columns 515-16; and what is his estimate of the saving to the Revenue from aggregating the incomes of spouses in such partnerships for income tax purposes.

Mr. Lilley: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate expense.

Life Assurance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the gain to the Revenue in the current financial year if the anomalies described in the discussion paper in the taxation of life assurance, including pension and annuity business, were to be corrected in favour of a neutral regime.

Mr. Lilley: The discussion paper "The Taxation of Life Assurance" set out the difficulties involved in making direct comparisons between life assurance and other media, and went far beyond a simple listing of anomalies. No perfectly neutral regime was identified in the document, and no estimate of tax yield from such a regime can be made. The discussion paper outlined three broad options for reform, but I have nothing to add about extra yield to the answer given to the hon. Member on 24 July at column 544.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the loss to the Revenue in 1988-89 and the forecast loss in the current financial year of single premium life assurance policies; and how much of the cost of writing such policies is offset against current profits.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The value of single premium policies effected in 1988-89 is not known, and no forecast of figures for the current year can be made. Nor are figures available for the value of single premium policies in force in 1988-89; and it is therefore not possible to give any meaningful estimate of the difference in tax yield which could have resulted had moneys invested in such policies been placed elsewhere. The costs of writing single premium policies are currently deductible immediately and in full under the income less expenses system, but from 1 January 1990 they will be deductible on the deferred basis prescribed in section 86 of the current Finance Act.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing which of the three key features of the wider tax regime applicable to investments listed in paragraph 3·3 of the 1988 consultative document on the taxation of life assurance apply to each of the options listed in paragraph 18 of the 1983 discussion document on the taxtion of pension funds; and what would be the consequential saving to the Revenue in the current financial year of (i) each option and (ii) taxing pension schemes on the same basis as unit trusts.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Taxable Benefits

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the real and the taxable value of benefits subject to (i) special and (ii) general rules, together with the estimated revenue therefrom;

(2) whether he will bring up to date his reply dated 6 April 1987, Official Report, column 78, concerning taxable benefits together with an estimate of (i) the amount by which the scale charges for company cars fall short of the true value of the benefit and (ii) the yield from taxing the full value.

Mr. Lilley: The available information, based on projections from data relating to 1985-86, on the taxable value of benefits and the tax yield arising is as follows:

| Benefit provided by the employer— 1989-90 | Taxable value £ million | Tax yield £ million |
|---|---|---|
| Cars and free fuel for private use | 2,840 | 880 |
| Private medical insurance | 290 | 90 |
| Other expense payments and benefits | 470 | 150 |
| Total | 3,600 | 1,120 |

The Government's view is that the typical value to employees of being able to use their company cars privately exceeds the present scale charges. But the value to particular employees depends on a wide range of factors. It is not possible, therefore, to provide an estimate of the aggregate extent to which the private use of company cars is undertaxed, or of the additional revenue which would arise if the full value was used in computing income.

Rent Income

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will include in the Official Report his forecast of the increase in rent income in 1989-90 as a result of the relaxation of rent controls, the amount which will be subject to tax and the expected yield and the extra amount which the Exchequer will have to pay out to tenants by way of rent relief.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has made no such forecast.

Child Benefit

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the amount by which child benefit could be increased on a revenue neutral basis if it was made taxable, the gross and net cost to the Exchequer of raising the benefit to £20 for the first child and £15 for subsequent children, the estimated saving to public authorities as a result of the consequential reduction in other benefits, the tax saving from the abolition of the additional allowance for income tax purposes and the estimated distribution of individual child benefits by range of income and tax status of their parents/guardians.

Mr. Lilley: The estimates requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Age Allowances

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (i) the gain to the Exchequer in the current financial year at present rates of tax of abolishing the age allowances and (ii) the cost of retaining them without the income limit.

Mr. Lilley: The yield in a full year at 1989-90 levels of income of abolishing the age allowances for taxpayers aged 65 and over is estimated to be about £420 million. If the age allowances were retained and the income limit abolished, the cost to the Exchequer would be £220 million.

The estimates are based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes and are provisional.

Wife's Earning Exemption

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing how many names were excluded from the 190,000 households referred to in the footnote to his answer of 29 July 1988, Official Report, columns 729-30, concerning households kept out of higher rate tax by wife's earnings exemption, and the distribution of the 190,000 plus any excluded wives on the same basis as in the table; and if he will provide an estimate of the saving to the revenue if (i) mortgage interest and (ii) other allowances were not deducted from total income in assessing liability to higher rate tax.

Mr. Lilley: The estimates requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report his forecast of the yield in revenue from corporation tax and advance corporation tax in the current financial year and in 1990-91 net of double taxation relief; and if he will include figures showing the amount of tax collected as a percentage of gross trading profit and as a percentage of the amount paid out in dividends.

Mr. Lilley: The forecast yield of corporation tax in 1989-90 is £22·4 billion of which advance corporation tax is £6·8 billion. A forecast for 1990-91 will be published in the next Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Mainstream corporation tax collected in 1988-89 was 19 per cent. of the gross trading profit in 1987. Advance corporation tax collected in 1988-89 was 32 per cent. of the amount of dividends paid out in 1988.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report his estimate of the yield to the Revenue from an increase in the rate of (a) corporation tax and (b) advance corporation tax to 50 per cent. in the current financial year, and his forecast for next year.

Mr. Lilley: The yield in a full year from increasing the main rate of corporation tax to 50 per cent. would be about £11 billion at 1988 levels of company profits and dividends. The additional yield from increasing the advance corporation tax and small companies rate to 50 per cent. would be about £2½ billion. These estimates take no account of possible behavioural effects following such a change.

Graduate Tax

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received asking him to impose a graduate tax; what is his estimate of the likely yield from such a tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: I have received no representations asking me to impose a graduate tax and made no estimate of the possible yield.

Life Assurance (Taxation)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the effect the restriction referred to in paragraph 26(a) of the Inland Revenue paper of June 1983, on the cost of tax reliefs for pensions schemes, would have on the amount of tax payable by life office-administered funds in the current financial year; and what would be the implications for the wider tax regime applicable to investments described in paragraph 3.3 and other considerations raised in the recent consultative document on the taxation of life assurance.

Mr. Lilley: There was no Inland Revenue paper of June 1983 on this subject.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the saving to the revenue in the current financial year if the tax on the incomings of life assurance offices had been as great as shown for 1968 in charts 11 and 12 of annex B to the recent consultation paper on the taxation of life assurance; and if he will provide similar figures on a 1959 percentage basis.

Mr. Lilley: The information necessary to support such an estimate is not yet available. It is not clear what the hon. Member's reference to a 1959 percentage basis means.

EC Institutions (Payments)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the net payment of £1·97 billion to European Economic Community institutions forecast for this year (Cm. 603) is higher or lower than expected when he agreed the present budgetary arrangements; and what is the basis upon which this amount was decided.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to chapter 3 of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1989-90 to 1991-92" (Cm. 603), and to paragraph 11 in particular.

Customs and Excise Building, Dartmouth

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the building at Baynards Cove, Dartmouth, currently used by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The accommodation at Baynards Cove, Dartmouth, is too large for Her Majesty's Customs and Excise operational needs. The department is therefore seeking alternative smaller accommodation in the Dartmouth area and then to surrender the present building to the Property Services Agency.

Suzanne Allen and Yvonne Knight

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what basis information held at Swindon 2 tax office on Suzanne Allen and Yvonne Knight was communicated to Swindon police.

Mr. Lilley: It is a strict rule that Revenue officials are not permitted to disclose personal and private information about the affairs of individual taxpayers except in certain very limited circumstances. Each Revenue official signs a statutory declaration to that effect on taking up duty in the Department. Disclosures are made to the police only in connection with the very serious crimes of murder and treason and then only with the express authority of the board.

No information about Suzanne Allen or Yvonne Knight has been communicated to the Swindon police.

Customs Officers

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total number of Customs officers in 1979-80 and each succeeding year.

Mr. Ryder: The total numbers of Customs officers deployed at ports, airports and inland clearance premises for each of the fiscal years 1979-80 to 1988-89 were:

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| 1979-80 | 7,231 |
| 1980-81 | 7,088 |
| 1981-82 | 6,861 |
| 1982-83 | 6,717 |
| 1983-84 | 6,552 |
| 1984-85 | 6,715 |
| 1985-86 | 6,880 |
| 1986-87 | 7,307 |
| 1987-88 | 7,684 |
| 1988-89 | 8,010 |

Value Added Tax

Mr. Rost: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amount of value added tax was raised in 1988-89 from the installation of energy conservation investments in the home, as defined in the home energy fact file, published by the Department of Energy.

Mr. Ryder: I regret that information requested is not available.

Selective Investment Brokers Limited

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether negotiations have taken place between the Inland Revenue and Selective Investment Brokers Ltd. since January 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lawson: Such information is confidential.

Delors Report

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement setting out the nature of his obligations to consult European Community institutions or bodies on financial and monetary policy inherent in his budget strategy; what additional requirements are set out in the report of Mr. Jacques Delors which was presented to the Madrid meeting of the European Council; and if he will make a further statement setting out Her Majesty's Government's policy on such consultations.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has regular discussions with his EC Finance Minister colleagues, on a wide range of economic and monetary matters, at meetings of the Economic and Finance Council. The Prime Minister set out the Government's views on the proposals made in the report of Mr. Delors in her statement to the House on 29 June on the outcome of the European Council in Madrid on 26 and 27 June—Official Report, columns 1107-22.

EC (Contribution)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the net contribution to be made by the United Kingdom to the EEC in the current calendar year; and what was the comparable total in 1979.

Mr. Ryder: The information requested is as follows:

Net contribution to European Community budget (£ million)

| Year | Current prices | Constant [1]1989 prices |
|---|---|---|
| [2]1989 | 1,966 | 1,966 |

[1] GDP deflator at market prices.

[2] Estimate.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the net amount paid for each year since 1979 to the EEC; what is the estimated amount the Government are likely to pay in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The information requested is set out in the table. Details of the Government's latest estimate for 1989-90 are contained in the public expenditure White Paper, Cm. 603.

Net payments to European Community institutions[1]

| Year | £ million |

Government Borrowing

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the total amount of borrowings by the Government from the banking system for each year since 1985.

Mr. Ryder: The table shows the total indebtedness of the public sector to the United Kingdom monetary sector.

Public sector borrowing from United Kingdom monetary sector: amounts outstanding end-period

| Q11989 | 7,567 | 3,779 | 11,346 | 270 | 11,616 |

Indebtedness has fallen each year since 1985 and recently at an accelerating rate.

Ken Dodd

Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the cost to public funds of the recent trial of Ken Dodd.

Mr. Lilley: The total cost to public funds, including legal expenses and the estimated administrative expenses of the court, was £220,000.

Laser Printers (Inland Revenue)

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Inland Revenue department is currently using any Siemens ND3, Siemens ND2, ICL LPS20, UNISYS 0777 or Storage Technology 6/100 laser printers.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue is currently using 18 LPS20 laser printers.

Recycled Publications

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether unused official publications including Bills, Hansards and Order Papers are recycled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: All unused official publications including those returned from the House to HMSO's publications centre are sold as waste paper for recycling.

Post-tax Income

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the share of total national post-tax income taken by the richest 1 per cent., the next 9 per cent., the middle 60 per cent., and the poorest 30 per cent. in 1959, 1963, 1967, 1970, 1974, 1979, 1983 and 1988, or the latest available date.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. Therefore, I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Exports and Imports

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the rate of growth of exports over the last 10 years; and what has been the rate of growth of imports.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Manufacturing Deficit

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the deficit in manufacturing trade in the first and second quarters of 1989.

Mr. Redwood: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Company Finances

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to how many United Kingdom companies hold £1 billion or more in bank accounts or outside equities.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Real Disposable Incomes

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing in terms of 1985 prices the increase in real disposable incomes between 1959 and 1973, 1973 and 1979, and 1979 to date together with (a) the contribution made by (i) the overseas trade surplus/deficit on current account and (ii) the revenue from North sea oil and gas and (b) the annual percentage increase in real disposable incomes in each period less the contribution from (a).

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 27 July 1989]: Estimates for real national disposable income (RNDI) at constant 1985 prices for the years 1966 to 1987 are given in table 1.1 of "United Kingdom National Accounts", 1988 edition.

The same table gives estimates, over the same period, for the "terms of trade effect". This is the contribution to RNDI made by changes in export prices relative to import prices. Estimates of the value added by the extraction of mineral oil and natural gas appear for the years 1977 to 1987 and in current prices in table 2.2 of the same publication; in volume terms expressed as an index with 1985=100 they appear in table 2.4.

Longer-run estimates for real national disposable income and for the index number version of value added by the extraction of mineral oil and natural gas are available via the Library of the House which has access to the CSO's computer-readable database.

Current Account Deficit

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government have taken to sterilise the inflow of capital to finance the deficit on current account; and if he will publish in the Official Report details of the debt instruments sold for this purpose.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The Government's funding policy ensures that any underlying change in the level of official foreign exchange reserves is sterilised over time. Since the balance of payments by definition must balance there are no further net inflows of capital to sterilise.

Department for National Savings

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what consideration is being given to the privatisation of the Department for National Savings;

(2) what consideration is being given to the privatisation of the National Savings bank in Scotland;

(3) which companies have expressed an interest in buying the National Savings bank in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 26 July 1989]: The Government have no plans to privatise any part of the Department for National Savings.

Company Cars

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence he has on the extent to which employers offer a company car instead of higher pay as an aid to recruitment; and by how much the chargeable addition to income for tax purposes for the use of a company car would have to be increased to make it uneconomic for the employer to provide and the employee to accept the use of a company car instead of an increase in pay.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The decision to provide a car instead of higher cash pay is a matter for employers. About 1·4 million employees have cars available for private use provided by their employers. The Government's policy is that there should as far as possible be neutrality between the tax treatment of remuneration in cash and kind. But the value of company cars to particular employees varies widely depending on a range of factors. It is not possible, therefore, to give a fixed point at which a chargeable addition to income for tax purposes would make company cars an uneconomic proposition for either employers or employees.

United Kingdom Manufacturing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the percentage gross and net operating surplus in 1988 and in 1973 of firms not less than 90 per cent. of whose business is in United Kingdom manufacturing; and what improvement in the rate of return he expects in 1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 27 July 1989]: I will reply to the hon. Member when resources permit.

Double Taxation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the net loss to the United Kingdom in tax revenue under double taxation agreements.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: This information is not available.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to his reply of 6 June, Official Report, column 118, he will report on the latest situation in respect of the five consignments of raw ivory held at Heathrow airport on 12 April.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my predecessor gave on 6 June Official Report, column 118.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he proposes to take to implement the declared policy of his predecessor to ensure that as wide a range as possible of people serve as justices of the peace within the Duchy, what measures he proposes to guard against political imbalance across the numbers of people so appointed; and what steps are taken to ensure the separation of his ministerial and non-ministerial functions in this respect.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I fully support the answers given by my predecessor to the hon. Member on 13 March. With regard to the final part of the question, the offices and advisers for my different functions are completely separate.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Nitrates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make it his policy to ensure that any compensation paid to individual farmers for restrictions imposed on the use of nitrogenous chemical fertilisers is financed by a levy on the sale of those fertilisers.

Mr. Curry: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his estimate of the tonnage of nitrogenous fertilisers used in United Kingdom agriculture in each year since 1959;

(2) whether Her Majesty's Government have any plans to impose a tax on the nitrogenous content of bulk fertilisers of £200 per tonne of the nitrate content; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the tonnage of nitrate consumed on British farms in each of the past 20 years.

Mr. Curry: The Government have no such plans. Figures on total nitrogen consumption on British farms are not available in the form requested. Information on applications of inorganic fertilisers containing nitrogen is published annually on a hectarage basis in the survey of fertiliser practice. In addition, nitrogen is also present in variable quantities in farmyard manure and sewage sludge. Total amounts involved are not available on a national basis, but are estimated to be about one fifth of total nitrogen application.

Food Transport

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is now being taken to ensure that food is transported in the most hygienic conditions possible.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

The transport of food is already covered by the Food Hygiene (Markets, Stalls and Delivery Vehicles) Regulations 1966.

On 4 July 1989 we began consultation on proposed amending regulations to apply temperature controls to certain foods carried in delivery vehicles.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many letters were received from, and sent to, hon. Members by his Department in (a) January and (b) the whole of this Session up to 1 July.

Mr. Gummer: In January 1989 the Ministry received 721 letters which were designated for ministerial reply and 603 replies were issued. In the whole of the last Session to 1 July 1989 the figures were 6,123 and 5,289 respectively. The large majority of this correspondence was from right hon. and hon. Members.

Civil Service Dispersal

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made in his Department's review, in line with Treasury guidelines, of the potential for the further relocation of Civil Service posts outside London and the south-east; and when he expects the review to be completed.

Mr. Curry: Officials of my Department are currently carrying out a detailed study of the potential for further relocation of headquarters work outside London and the south-east. I expect the results of this study to be available to me towards the end of this year.

Food Act 1984

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has had concerning the amendment of sections 1 and 2 of the Food Act 1984; and how many of these have indicated a wish that they remain unaltered.

Mr. Maclean: The Government have received many representations in response to our proposals for re-enacting and updating the powers in sections 1 and 2. There has been general support for what we are proposing.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the causes of the cyclical occurrence of outbreaks of salmonella enteriditis over the last five years.

Mr. Curry: It has not been possible to identify any single cause for the increase in the number of incidents of salmonella enteriditis in poultry and animals reported under the Zoonoses Orders (1975) (1989) in the past five years.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether there is scientific evidence available to his Department that salmonella enteriditis can reproduce inside an intact egg.

Mr. Curry: Evidence is available to show that salmonella enteriditis will multiply inside an intact egg if the egg is incubated at 37 deg. C.

Nutrition Claims

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the result of the consultation exercise on the recommendations by the Food Advisory Committee for controls on the new generation of nutrition claims on food labels and in advertisements.

Mr. Gummer: I am grateful to the committee for its further advice following consideration of the responses to the consultation exercise.

Nutrition claims can provide a useful source of information for consumers seeking a healthy, balanced diet but consumers must be fully protected from misleading claims. I therefore welcome, and accept, the Food Advisory Committee's recommendations and in due course I shall be issuing, for consultation, proposed legislation which would implement the committee's advice. This is part of our general policy to ensure that consumers are properly informed about the foods they buy and eat.

I have arranged for a copy of the revised Food Advisory Committee's advice to be placed in the Library of the House.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the capital value of milk quotas to British farmers.

Mr. Curry: I have made no such estimate.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost of higher milk prices as a result of quotas; and what was the cost of buying up and disposing of surplus milk and milk products before the quotas were imposed.

Mr. Curry: Since 1983-84, the year before quotas were introduced, the intervention price of butter (82 per cent. fat) has been reduced from 357·86 ecu/100 kg to the present level of 300·80 ecu/kg. The intervention price for skimmed milk powder has moved from 149·64 ecu/100 kg to 174·04 ecu/100 kg but intervention buying for both skimmed milk powder and butter has virtually been brought to an end. Despite the existence of quotas a substantial surplus still exists in the dairy sector; the Government have been urging the Commission to make further cuts in the level of export refunds and other disposal subsidies in order to ease the supply situation—and hence prices—on the open market.

Expenditure on surplus disposal measures for milk and milk products under the FEOGA guarantee section in 1983 amounted to 4,923 million ecu, not counting the offsetting effects of coresponsibility levy receipts.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the size of the United Kingdom milk quota in litres; how many million litres of quota have been sold in each of the past three years; and if he will provide an estimate of the average price paid for quotas in the first month of each quota year together with the implied cost per litre of output amortised over a period of three, five and 10 years, respectively, at current rates of interest.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 27 July 1989]: United Kingdom milk quotas on 1 April 1989 were as follows:

| | Litres |
|---|---|
| Wholesale quota | 14,503,970,784 |
| Direct sales quota (of which 5½ per cent. was temporarily suspended | 372,501,084 |

European Community regulations do not allow the sale of quota as such, but quota is transferred in proportion to the areas used for milk production when all or part of a dairy holding is sold, leased, or transferred by inheritance. The total volume of quota transferred in the United Kingdom in each of the last three quota years was as follows:

| Year ending | Million litres |
|---|---|
| 31 March 1987 | 646 |
| 31 March 1988 | 750 |
| 31 March 1989 | 546 |

My Department does not collect price data on transactions involving quotas. Information available from published sources suggests that typical values attributed to quota in England and Wales were as follows:

| | Pence per litre |
|---|---|
| April 1986 | 12½ to 14 |
| April 1987 | 25 to 27 |
| April 1988 | 27 to 30 |

Amortised costs over a number of years at various interest rates can be calculated by applying appropriate equivalent annual cost factors. These can be obtained from "Investment Appraisal in the Public Sector, Her Majesty's Treasury 1982" (page 40). A copy is in the Library of the House.

Farm Costs and Incomes

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision is made by his Department for the cost of land in calculating farm production costs and farm incomes.

Mr. Maclean: There are various ways of allowing for the costs of land, which may be either tenanted or owner-occupied, in the calculation of farm costs and incomes.

In the calculation of measures of aggregate farming incomes, allowance is made for the rent paid on tenanted land. In respect of owner-occupied land, allowance is made for the cost of land maintenance and improvement but not for the purchase of land, the return to use of which is thus included within the resulting measures of farm income.

The treatment of land costs in the farm business surveys, which provide data by farm type, is described in pages 111-112 of the 1989 edition of farm incomes in the United Kingdom, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

EC (Production Figures)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will bring up to date the EEC production figures for (a) rapeseed, (b) sunflowerseed and (c) soya beans on the basis given in his written reply dated 18 February 1988.

Mr. Curry: The information requested, which updates that contained in the Prime Minister's reply to the hon. Member on 22 February 1988, is as follows:

| | Rapeseed | Sunflowerseed | Soya |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1987[1] | | | |

Agricultural Wages

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will bring up to date the figures shown in appendices VI and VII of Government economic service working paper No. 52 on wages and employment in agriculture.

Mr. Maclean: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Agricultural Holdings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will bring up to date the number of agricultural holdings and tenanted holdings on the same basis as that given in his written reply of 9 May 1985, Official Report, column 502.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is as follows. The definitions are the same as those given in the reply of 9 May 1985.

Main Agricultural holdings in England and Wales

Thousands

Partnerships

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report (a) the number of whole-time partnerships and the number of partners, (b) the number of part-time partnerships and part-time partners, and (c) the number of mixed partnerships and number of whole-time and part-time partners

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing farm holdings by size in terms of ownership by (a) companies, (b) partnerships and (c) individuals at the latest census.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available.

White Sugar

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the ~~Minister of~~ Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the years since 1983-84 (a) the United Kingdom price for white sugar and (b) the world price, on the same basis as that given in his written answer of 9 May 1985, Official Report, column 497.

Mr. Curry: The information requested is given in the table:

Sugar prices

| | United Kingdom price £/t[1] | | World price £/t[2] |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1983-84 | 364·57 | 1983 | 141·14 |

[1] The price given is the effective United Kingdom support price for white sugar, ie the intervention price plus the storage levy. The storage levy changed in July 1986, 1988 and 1989.

[2] The heading to this table in the reply dated 9 May 1985 should have indicated it gave the London daily price for raw sugar rather than white sugar. There is no single world price for white sugar. The raw sugar prices were obtained, as previously, from the International Sugar Organisation.

[3] Indicates changes in green rates.

Wine

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1983-84 the (a) guide, (b) intervention, (c) threshold and (d) other prices for wine, and the amount spent by way of price support and other data on the same basis as that provided in his written reply of 2 May 1985, Official Report, column 201.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is provided in the tables.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for all common agricultural policy products for each year since 1973 (a) public storage costs, (b) export refunds and (c) the quantities in both cases.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 July 1989]: Information on the main components of expenditure under the common agricultural policy is set out in the financial aspects section of the Commission's annual publication, "The Agricultural Situation in the Community". Copies of this publication, for the years 1973 to 1988, are in the Library of the House.

These reports set out for each product the quantities held in public storage on a given date and total exports from the Community. Details of expenditure given in the same reports reflect budget costs in the year in question but do not relate directly to the quantities held in store, or exported, in those years.

Dredging Vessels (Recording Equipment)

Mr. Carttiss: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has decided to limit the provision of marine position recording equipment for dredging vessels to one authorised supplier; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: No decisions have yet been made on application of marine position recorders to dredging vessels.

Chernobyl

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the total amount of compensation paid to farmers as a result of the losses arising from the radioactive fallout from the Chernobyl accident.

Mr. Maclean: Expenditure authorised to 30 June 1989 under the sheep compensation scheme 1986 has amounted to £6,284,286.

Anthrax

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of anthrax have been reported during the last seven years.

Mr. Curry: The number of cases of anthrax reported and confirmed in each year since 1982 is as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1982 | 20 |
| 1983 | 14 |
| 1984 | 9 |
| 1985 | 6 |
| 1986 | 14 |
| 1987 | 6 |
| 1988 | 3 |
| [1]1989 | 18 |

[1] To date.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what deficiencies of resources and materials were revealed during the recent outbreak of anthrax; and what steps are being taken to remedy them.

Mr. Curry: As was already known, the outbreak demonstrated that commercial supplies of anthrax vaccine had ceased to be available. We were already investigating the possibility of alternative sources and are continuing to do so.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the restrictions on public access to land suspected of being infected by anthrax were lifted.

Mr. Curry: Public entry to premises under restriction because of anthrax is at the discretion of the owner.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of animals by type that have left the Singret farm, Clwyd in each week since 19 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The following animals have left Singret farm since 19 April:

| | Pigs |
|---|---|
| 20 April | 19 |
| Thereafter, week commencing: | |
| 24 April | 185 |
| 1 May | 183 |
| 8 May | 249 |
| 15 May | 220 |
| 22 May | 269 |
| 29 May | 245 |
| 5 June | 205 |
| 12 June | 219 |
| 19 June | 150 |
| 26 June | 70 |
| 3 July | 210 |
| 10 July | 113 |

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food where the slurry from the pigs recently destroyed during an anthrax outbreak in north Wales is being dumped; what steps are being taken to eliminate the risk of contamination; and what is being done with the rest of the waste from the slaughtered animals.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 27 July 1989]: All slurry on the farm is being treated with formalin on site by the local authority, to inactivate any anthrax organisms that may be present. After treatment it is being disposed of on a licensed waste disposal site at Warrington in Cheshire.

The carcases of slaughtered animals are being incinerated on site and the ashes disposed of in an approved manner.

Straw and Stubble Burning

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking with regard to the recommendations of the straw and stubble burning report recently produced by the National Society for Clean Air and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The views of the National Society for Clean Air have been carefully noted along with those of other interested organisations.

Poultry (Monitoring)

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the results of monitoring of poultry stocks pursuant to the Testing of Poultry Flocks Order 1989 and in particular the related costs of sampling borne by the poultry industry.

Mr. Curry: The Testing of Poultry Flocks Order 1989 requires the owners of all laying, breeding and rearing flocks comprising more than 25 birds and flocks of less than 25 birds which sell eggs for human consumption, to monitor their flocks for evidence of salmonella. To date there have been 562 reports of isolations of invasive salmonella. With regard to the cost of sampling I would refer the hon. Member to my recent reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) on 27 July.

Fishermen (Taw/Torridge Estuary)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why he proposes to restrict the rights of people fishing with rod and line only from small boats in the tidal waters of the Taw/Torridge estuary; and what representations he has received on the effect of the proposals upon the amateur private fishermen unable to cross the Bideford bar in a small boat.

Mr. Curry: Proposals to establish a series of nursery areas in the coastal waters of England and Wales for the protection of juvenile bass were published on 8 June. These included a prohibition on fishing for bass in the River Taw, east of a line from the western end of Braunton Pill to the site of the former power station at Yelland, and the River Torridge, south of a line from Zeta berth to the opposite shore. Fishing for bass and other sea fish would be allowed between these points and the Bideford bar under permit. These restrictions would operate only from May to October. Representations have been received from a number of local interests including the Braunton Small Boat and Angling Association.

National Consumer Council

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the National Consumer Council and what was discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I last met the chairman of the National Consumer Council, Baroness Oppenheim-Barnes, earlier today when we discussed food safety and other consumer topics for which this Ministry has responsibility.

Edible Crabs

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to amend the regional minimum landing sizes for edible crabs as proposed by his Department in November 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Following careful consideration of the comments received from the fishing industry and other interests on the consultative proposals published in November 1988, the Fisheries Ministers have decided that a number of changes should be made to the provisions of the Undersized Crabs Order 1986.

From 1 January 1990 the minimum landing size of 115 mm for edible crabs (Cancer pagurus) will be revoked except for those crabs landed in Lincolnshire, Norfolk, Suffolk and Cumbrian sea fisheries district.The minimum landing size for edible crabs landed in Kent, Essex, north-east England, Wales north of Caemas Head, north-east England and Scotland will be increased to 125 mm. That for crabs landed in Somerset, Avon and Gloucestershire will be increased to 130 mm. In the Isles of Scilly the minimum landing size for female crabs will become 140 mm and that for male crabs 160 mm. At the same time British vessels will be prohibited from carrying edible crabs under 125 mm except in the Cumbrian sea fisheries district and the coastal waters adjacent to Lincolnshire, Norfolk and Suffolk.

Amending regulations will be laid before Parliament in the autumn. Further changes in the provisions of the Undersized Crabs Order 1986 will be considered once the Ministry's directorate of fisheries research has completed a detailed investigation into the state of crab stocks in the English Channel fishery.

Marine Mammals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has held discussions recently with fishermen's organisations concerning the reporting and monitoring of the incidental capture of marine mammals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 25 July 1989]: The fisheries department will be liaising with fishermen's organisations about proposals for a monitoring scheme on incidental capture, once the details for this have been finalised. To date it has not been apparent that this phenomenon presents anything like a significant problem in our waters, but we will keep the situation under general review.

Badgers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list for each year from 1970 to 1989 all the parishes in which tuberculosis has been found in badgers and the years for each of these in which tuberculosis positive were found; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list for each year from 1970 to 1989, the parishes in which tuberculosis was found in cattle and the years for each of these in which cattle reactors to the tuberculosis test were found; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list for each year from 1970 to 1989, parishes in which badger removal operations have taken place, and the years for each parish in which these operations have taken place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 26 July 1989]: Only part of the data requested is readily available. I made arrangements for a summary table to be deposited in the Libraries of the House. Further information on the interim badger control strategy, adopted following Professor Dunnet's independent review is published annually. The 13th report on bovine tuberculosis in badgers will be published later this year.

Shell Fish

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any proposals concerning the introduction of a quota system for prawn fisheries in United Kingdom waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 26 July 1989]: I have no plans. Fishing for prawns of the pandulus species is already subject to a minimum mesh size of 30mm except for pandulus montagui for which a minimum mesh size of 20 mm is permitted.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he takes to ensure that shellfish farming of (a) alien species or (b) native species is compatible with the designation of special protection areas under the European Community rivers directive or designation as a site of special scientific interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 26 July 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given yesterday to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark).

Potato Marketing Board

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Potato Marketing Board.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 26 July 1989]: I have not met the chairman but intend to do so at the earliest mutual date.

Dairy Quota

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the gross income from the sale of dairy quotas in each of the past three years, the amount of the capital gain, and the amount of capital gains tax payable thereon; and what is his forecast for the current financial year.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 27 July 1989]: I have made no such estimate.

Regional Panels

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer of 21 July, which of his regional panel members are organic farmers; and whether he intends to appoint more organic farmers to his regional panels.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 July 1989]: No member of regional panels in England currently farms to a recognised standard of organic production. In considering future appointments to regional panels, regard is given amongst other factors, to the principal types of farming activities undertaken in the region concerned.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will consider appointing representatives of environmental or consumer organisations on his regional panels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The membership of regional panels is undertaken in a personal capacity; panel members do not represent organisations to which they may belong.

Tenderisers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is planning to issue any new restrictions, control or advice on the use of papain or other tenderisers.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 27 July 1989]: We propose to issue guidance on the administration by injection of the enzyme papain to cattle before slaughter in the codes of practice which the Government propose to issue in response to the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on the welfare of livestock (red meat animals) at slaughter.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether recent research by the Farm Animal Welfare Council has proved that no traces of tenderisers administered to cattle shortly before slaughter remain as residues in the meat;

(2) whether the recent research by the Farm Animal Welfare Council on the effects of tenderisers on cattle has been considered by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 27 July 1989]: I am not aware of any research by the council on the effects of tenderisers. Research was carried out by veterinary officials into the effects of the injection of the vegetable enzyme papain on the live animal. This indicates that traces of it remain in the meat after slaughter but that it will evaporate during cooking. Papain is a natural vegetable protein which in any case would be destroyed by the normal digestive juices. The results of the research were taken into account in reaching a decision on its use.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for naturalisation as British dependent territories citizens on the basis of a connection with Hong Kong have been (a) received, (b) granted and (c) refused for each year since 1985 and to the nearest available date.

Mr. Maude: The figures for applications for naturalisation as British dependent territories citizens on the basis of a connection with Hong Kong are as follows:

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British dependent territories citizens from Hong Kong have (a) applied for and (b) been granted the status of British national (overseas).

Mr. Maude: A total of 70,268 applications for British national (overseas) passports have been received, of which 68,909 have been granted. The remainder are still being processed.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many explanatory statements related to entry clearance appeals were awaiting typing at (i) each post in the Indian sub-continent, (ii) in Manila, (iii) Lagos and (iv) Accra, on the latest available date; how many staff are employed, both full-time and part-time, to type statements; and when he expects any backlogs to be cleared.

[1] Numbers of explanatory statements awaiting typing.
[2] Staff whose duties include typing explanatory statements (staff employed on other typing work shown in brackets).

The backlog in Dhaka is due to recruitment problems and will be cleared as soon as the typing establishment is at full strength.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the present waiting times to first interview for all categories of applicant in each country and at each post in the Indian sub-continent.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 17 July at column, 4-5.

Subsidiarity

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state the treaty or other basis on which the European Council at Madrid adopted the principle of subsidiarity; for what purposes European Community legislation is to take precedence over that of members states; and what body of persons are to make the initial and financial decisions on whether or not national legislation is sufficient to achieve those purposes.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development explained the concept of subsidiarity in the Adjournment debate on EC institutions on 4 July. This is a general policy concept rather than a specific legislative proposal. It therefore has no specific treaty base although an example of the principle can be found in article 130r. It is for the Commission to take subsidiarity into account when proposing legislation, and the Council to do so when taking decisions.

Mr. Gulbuddin Hekmatyar

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when and by whom Mr. Kikmatyar was invited to the United Kingdom; with whom he had discussions during his visit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Mr. Gulbuddin Hekmatyar last visited the United Kingdom in November 1988 on a private visit at his own initiative. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials met him informally as part of their established practice of keeping in touch with a wide range of Afghan opinion.

Israel

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the agreements under which Israel has privileged access to the European market.

Mr. Maude: EC/Israel trade relations are covered by the 1975 co-operation agreement and subsequent protocols to take account of the accession of Greece, Spain and Portugal to the Community. As a result, free trade in industrial goods between the EC and Israel came into effect on 1 January 1989. There are also specific concessions for some Israeli agricultural products.

Israeli-occupied Territories

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government have taken to enforce the provisions of the Geneva Conventions Act 1957 in relation to breaches occurring in the Israeli-occupied territories.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have frequently exercised our right as a contracting party to the fourth Geneva convention to raise with the Israeli Government breaches of the convention in the occupied territories. Questions of prosecuting under the 1957 Geneva Conventions Act are a matter for the prosecuting authorities.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make it his policy that no produce originating from the settlements in the Israeli-occupied territories is given access to the British market.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are no arrangements for produce originating from Israeli settlements in the occupied territories to enjoy preferential access to the British market.

"Twenty Questions on Defence"

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many copies of the leaflet "Twenty Questions on Defence" (second edition, published November 1988) prepared by the Central Office of Information for his Department and the Ministry of Defence, have been printed; how many have been distributed; to what outlets; what has been the cost to date; and if there are any plans to produce and distribute an updated and revised version.

Mr. Waldegrave: A total of 15,000 copies of the leaflet "Twenty Questions on Defence" (second edition) were printed when the publication was first issued in November 1988. These cost £3,035 and were distributed as follows:

Foreign and Commonwealth Office:

5,000 copies for distribution to members of the public in the United Kingdom and abroad in response to requests for information.

Ministry of Defence:

5,000 copies distributed as with FCO.

Central Office of Information:

5,000 copies for distribution to addressees on the FCO Arms Control and Disarmament Department's United Kingdom, overseas and United Kingdom diplomatic posts' mailing list.

A further 60,000 copies were printed earlier this year at the Ministry of Defence's request for distribution during the Ministry's "Britain in NATO" exhibition tour of the United Kingdom. This further print-run brought the total cost of the current edition of this publication to £5,965, shared equally between the FCO and MOD.

A third edition of the leaflet is planned for the end of this calendar year.

Emmanuel and Judith Lurie

Dr. Blackburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will press the Soviet authorities for a speedy resolution of the case of the refuseniks, Emmanuel and Judith Lurie of Moscow.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are continuing to press the Soviet authorities to resolve the case of the Lurie family once and for all in line with their international commitments. I raised their case with the Soviet ambassador on 25 July. We will not let up until the family is allowed to emigrate.

Vladimir Raiz

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise with the Soviet authorities the case of Vladimir Raiz of Vilnius who is still awaiting an exit visa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have pressed the Soviet authorities about this case on a number of occasions—most recently when I saw the Soviet ambassador on 25 July. We will not let up until the Soviet Government have resolved it satisfactorily in line with their international commitments.

Human Rights Conference (Moscow)

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it remains Her Majesty's Government's policy to attend the 1991 human rights conference in Moscow provided that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics conforms to certain conditions; and to what extent those conditions are being fulfilled.

Mr. Waldegrave: We shall attend the proposed Moscow human rights conference in 1991 only if there is a further sustained improvement in the human rights situation in the Soviet Union. While there has been progress in the past six months, significant problems remain—in particular the plight of long-term refuseniks who are still not allowed to emigrate.

Human Rights

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further representations he has made to the Government of the People's Republic of China concerning human rights abuses in Tibet; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: We have made it clear to the Chinese authorities on many occasions the real concern in this country about human rights in Tibet. While we shall continue to seek suitable opportunities to make our views known, our main aim in recent weeks has been to bring home to the Chinese authorities our sense of shock and outrage at the brutality with which they suppressed those who were demonstrating for democracy in Peking.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings Her Majesty's ambassador has had with representatives of human rights organisations in El Salvador; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: In the course of their normal duties, Her Majesty's diplomatic representatives in El Salvador maintain regular and close contact with the various Salvadorean human rights organisations.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Turkey concerning abuses of human rights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend, the Minister for Overseas Development raised the subject of human rights during her recent visit to Turkey and made clear the concern felt in this country about Turkey's human rights record and the need for Turkey to comply with the international human rights conventions to which she is a party. We shall continue to monitor the situation closely.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's ambassador has made to the Government of El Salvador concerning abuse of human rights.

Mr. Sainsbury: We raise our human rights concerns with the Salvadorean authorities, both in El Salvador and elsewhere, whenever it is appropriate to do so.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to meet President Cristioni of El Salvador.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to do so.

Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many prosecutions were initiated by the Hong Kong authorities in the first six months of 1989 arising from illegal imports, exports and possession of endangered species.

Mr. Maude: In the first six months of 1989, 155 prosecutions were initiated against illegal imports, exports and possession of endangered species.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many restaurant inspections were carried out by the Hong Kong authorities in the first six months period of 1989 to ensure that no rare and endangered species of animals and plants were offered for sale as food; and if any seizures were made.

Mr. Maude: To prevent rare and endangered species of animals and plants being sold and consumed in restaurants, 139 inspections were conducted during the first six months of 1989. 0·4 kg of whale meat and three giant salamanders were seized.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many seizures of illegally imported endangered species were made by the Hong Kong authorities in the first six months of 1989; how many seizures were made of similar categories intended for export; and if he will give details of all seizures made including country of origin.

Mr. Maude: In the first six months of 1989, 149 seizures were made of illegally imported endangered species. Three seizures were made of similar categories intended for export. Details of all seizures are listed.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the sale by tender by the Hong Kong authorities of confiscated items permitted for commercial trade under CITES; what items were sold; to whom they were sold; and what amount was raised in each case.

Mr. Maude: The information requested is not immediately available. A further reply will be given as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of the Hong Kong authorities on implementation of CITES resolution conference 5.11.

Mr. Maude: The Hong Kong Government fully implement CITES conference resolution 5.11.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made by the Hong Kong Government in introducing new measures designed to enforce their responsibilities under the convention on international trade in endangered species; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: New legislation was passed on 28 June 1989 which provides for significantly increasing maximum fines for contravention of the law on protection of endangered species; tightening up transit controls; banning the import, export and possession of medical products purporting to contain rhinoceros ingredients; penalising persons who give false information in applying for endangered species licences; facilitating identifications; extending the power of search; and empowering the Government to release or dispose of endangered species.

George Samoilovich

Rev. Martyn Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise with the Soviet authorities the case of George Samoilovich, currently undergoing medical treatment in the United Kingdom, whose wife and son are being refused exit visas to join him.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have underlined to the Soviet authorities on numerous occasions the urgent need to grant exit visas to the wife and son of George Samoilovich —most recently when I saw the Soviet ambassador on 25 July. We will not let up until the family is reunited outside the Soviet Union.

Turkey

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent visit of the right hon. Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker) to Turkey.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend paid a very successful visit to Turkey from 23 to 26 July. She held talks with the Turkish Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister and, at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, with the permanent under-secretary and the political director. Later she travelled to Istanbul and Edirne where she visited the Bulgarian border and a refugee camp, and donated £300,000 to the Turkish Red Crescent for its work among refugees from Bulgaria and Iraq. The visit enabled my right hon. Friend to exchange views on a number of bilateral and regional issues.

Vietnamese Boat People

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution the United Kingdom is making towards the costs of the repatriation of Vietnamese boat people from Hong Kong to Vietnam.

Mr. Maude: We plan to contribute around £1,300,000 in this financial year.

Parliamentary approval for this expenditure will be sought in a winter supplementary estimate for the "Foreign and Commonwealth Office: Other External Relations" vote. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £850,000 will be met by a repayable advance from the contingencies fund.

Southern Africa

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will financially assist British business organisations such as chambers of commerce to attend the hearings in Geneva from 4 to 6 September held by the panel appointed by the Secretary-General of the United Nations to examine the role of transnational companies in South Africa and Namibia.

Mr. Redwood: I have been asked to reply.

No. The Government believe that it is for companies and British business organisations themselves to decide on the basis of their own priorities and commercial interests whether to attend the hearings.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will send observers to the public hearings, on the role of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia, to be held by the panel appointed by the Secretary-General of the United Nations which meets in Geneva from 4 to 6 September; and if the European Community will be represented in any capacity.

Mr. Redwood: I have been asked to reply.

The United Kingdom mission to the office of the United Nations and other international organisations in Geneva will follow the proceedings of these public hearings as part of its normal coverage of United Nations meetings.

The EC has observer status within the United Nations system and will therefore be entitled to send an observer to the public hearing.

Arms (Standardisation and Interoperability)

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which area of arms co-operation in the Atlantic Alliance notable progress has been registered in the last five years in efforts to increase the degree of standardisation and interoperability of military material; and what progress can be attributed to Western European Union initiatives.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have been asked to reply.

Much effort continues to be put into extending and improving international arrangements for defence equipment co-operation, within both NATO, under the auspices of the conference of national armaments directors, and the Independent European Programme Group. In the latter, for example, 15 harmonised European staff targets have been agreed; a research and technology programme is being established; and the European defence market is being opened up. Collaboration on specific programmes is widespread; table 6 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989" shows the considerable number of projects in which the United Kingdom participates. The Western European Union has taken an interest in these and other areas, but progress on these issues within Europe as a whole is, and will remain, the responsibility of the IEPG.

Military Aid

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the reasons for the increase in the budget for military aid to overseas countries from 1988-89 to 1989-90, set out in table 2.1 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989," volume two.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The funds in question are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. The reasons for the increase in the budget for military aid to overseas countries from 1988-89 to 1989-90 are:

a. the uplift of the 1988-89 provision to cover the effect of inflation; and

b. an increase in the assistance provided by Her Majesty's Government to the front line states in Africa for the purchase of non-lethal military equipment in support of agreed military training programmes.

Peru

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what circumstances John Boxhall and Brian Tristram could be extradited from Peru and charged with offences in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to the reply, 20 July 1989, c. 335]: I have been asked to reply.

Persons may be extradited from Peru if they are accused or convicted of offences committed within the jurisdiction of the United Kingdom which are deemed to be extraditable under the terms of the Extradition Act 1870 and the bilateral treaty of 1907 between the United Kingdom and Peru.

International Coffee Agreement

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current state of negotiations on a new international coffee agreement.

Mr. Maude [pursuant to the reply, 30 June 1989, c. 578]: The International Coffee Council on 3 July resolved (resolution number 347) to extend the international coffee agreement (1983) without quotas and virtually all its other economic provisions for a period of two years from 1 October 1989. The council also resolved to suspend the quota system with effect from 4 July. I regret that it has not been possible to publish resolution 347 of the council as a Command Paper before the parliamentary recess. I have therefore placed a copy of the text of the resolution in the Library of the House. I shall publish the resolution in the Command Paper series as soon as possible.

Hong Kong

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonweath Affairs what discussions he has had and what action is being taken, in secondary education in Hong Kong to lay the foundations for informed participation of youth in a democratic elective system in Hong Kong.

Mr. Maude [pursuant to the reply, 25 July 1989, c.600]: It is the Hong Kong government's policy to promote an awareness in schools of the developing system of government in Hong Kong, and thereby to encourage informed participation of young people in the system. The Hong Kong Government seek to achieve this by featuring the subject in the civic education curriculum, and in seminars, training courses and workshops for teachers: and by the distribution of teaching kits and videos to schools on elections and representative government.

ENVIRONMENT

Government Drivers

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many Government drivers have passed either the Institute of Advanced Drivers test or the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents driving tests; if he will express this as a percentage of the whole; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Right to buy, Cannock Chase

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will initiate inquiries with the Cannock Chase district council as to the reasons for the alleged delay encountered by Mr. S. A. McConville of 27 John Till close, Rugeley, Staffordshire, since he first submitted his right-to-buy application on 8 June 1988; and if he will use his powers to bring the matter to a speedy conclusion.

Mr. Howard: I will write to my hon. Friend.

UN Environment Programme

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to meet with Dr. Mostafa Tolba director of the United Nations Environment Programme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Minister for Environment and Countryside will next see Dr. Mostafa Tolba in London, at the conference on 3 October organised by the advisory committee on pollution in the sea.

Hertfordshire Groundwork Trust

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Countryside Commission regarding the activities of the Hertfordshire Groundwork Trust, and the proposed dumping of 700,000 cu m of waste material in an area of natural beauty in Hertfordshire.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None. The tipping of waste material is a matter for Hertfordshire county council as the local waste disposal authority.

Land Sales

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the sites referred to in his answer of 20 July, Official Report, column 344, and indicate for each the local authority in which it is located, the price obtained and new owner.

Mr. Moynihan: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times his Department has issued instructions to local authorities to sell land after approaches by members of the public to his Department; and if he will list these authorities for each year since 1979 and list for each authority how many times his Department has refused.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 20 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Conservation

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much money the Nature Conservancy Council has spent on (a) grant-aiding voluntary conservation bodies land purchases, (b) Nature Conservancy Council's own land purchases, in each of the last five years at 1989 prices; and if he will also express this as a percentage of Nature Conservancy Council total budget;

(2) if he will report on progress in meeting the Government's obligations under the Ramsar convention and article 4 of the EC birds directive 79/409; how these international obligations will be administered in future; which proposed new SPAs he is considering; and when these will be declared.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Bathing Water

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to have produced from all the relevant services a full co-ordinated list of those bathing beaches around England, Wales, Northern Ireland and Scotland which (a) reach and (b) do not reach the standards of water quality of directive 76/160/EEC; and if he will list the forecast dates by which those failing to reach this standard will attain it.

Mr. Moynihan: Details of the identified bathing waters and their compliance in the 1988 bathing season were given in the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) on 21 February and the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment at the Scottish Office to my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) on 13 April. The water authorities are currently drawing up investment programmes with the aim of bringing all bathing waters into compliance with the directive by the mid-1990s.

Rents

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1970 the number of council dwellings, the amount of rent collected and the average amount of rent collected per dwelling, the total amount of rent rebates, rate rebates, housing allowances and so on to (a) tenants of local authorities and (b) tenants of private landlords and housing associations, together with the number of beneficiaries in each cases.

Mr. Chope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what communications he has received from the Housing Corporation concerning the assessment of the percentage of income that constitutes an affordable rent.

Mr. Chope: Our exchanges with the corporation on rent issues are many and various. It is for individual housing associations to set rents at levels within the reach of people in low-paid employment.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he possesses concerning the future level of rents, including those where they are defined as affordable; and what level of inflation he expects in such rents in the next three years.

Mr. Chope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Lettings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of dwellings available for letting in each year since 1970 in the private and public sectors, respectively, in total and as a proportion of the housing stock; if he will give a regional breakdown; and what is his estimate of the proportion in France, Germany and Italy.

Mr. Chope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Caravan Sites

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the number of sites and pitches at each site provided for travelling people under the Caravan Sites Act 1968 by the local authorities at (a) Bradford, (b) Leeds, (c) Kirklees, (d) Calderdale and (e) Craven; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to take into account the sites available in neighbouring local authorities when considering any application by Bradford for designation under the Caravan Sites Act 1968; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what discussions have taken place between officials of his Department and representatives at Leeds, Kirklees and Craven local authorities regarding implementation of the Caravan Sites Act 1968; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Caravan sites for travelling people have been provided by the relevant local authorities as follows:

| Local Authority | Site | Number of pitches |
|---|---|---|
| Bradford | Bowling Back Lane/Mary Street | 24 |
| | Esholt | 16 |
| Leeds | Cottingley Springs (2 adjacent sites) | 36 |
| Kirklees | — | — |
| Calderdale | — | — |
| Craven | — | — |

The Secretary of State takes full account of all the relevant circumstances affecting applications for designated status under the Caravan Site Act 1968. These include the level of site provision in neighbouring authorities.

Officials of my Department have meetings and discussions with local authorities as required. Meetings have been held this year with all the authorities in West Yorkshire to discuss the need for gipsy sites and to encourage the formulation and implementation of appropriate programmes of site provision.

Green Belt

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in general on whether to refuse or allow planning consents for industrial purposes in green belt land; what criteria he adopts in considering any exceptions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Planning policy guidance note 2 indicates and describes that very special circumstances are necessary to justify development for industrial or other purposes that are normally inappropriate in the green belt.

Derelict Land

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list by regions the allocations received for derelict land purposes for 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 in real terms and constant value terms;

(2) if he will list by region the derelict land grant allocations for 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 in real terms and constant value terms.

Mr. Moynihan: Derelict land grant allocations for the years requested are as follows:

£ million

| DOE region | 1987-88 (outturn) cash prices £ million | constant prices[1] £ million | 1988-89 (forecast outturns) cash prices £ million | constant prices[1] £ million | 1989-90 £ million |

Comparable information for other grant regimes dealing with derelict land is not available. Urban development corporations, city grant and the urban programme all make a significant contribution towards the reclamation of derelict land. It is estimated that in the period 1987-88 to 1989-90 some £170 million (£180 million in 1989-90 prices) will have been made available for reclamation projects through these regimes.

Parliamentary Questions

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of replies held over to October for substantive answers for questions tabled for written reply in the final week of parliamentary business before the summer Adjournment in each year since 1986.

Mr. Christopher Patten: None; it is my policy to answer all questions tabled for written reply in the final week of parliamentary business before the summer Adjournment.

Sea Pollution

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the Paris commission on sea pollution recently held in Dublin.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The latest meeting of the Paris commission was held in Dublin between 19 and 22 June 1989. Progress was achieved across a wide range of topics relating to pollution of the seas from riverine inputs, atmospheric inputs and direct discharges. In particular, progress was reported on defining suitable control technologies for a number of industrial sectors.

The Paris commission has also carried forward work on pollution control arising from the second North sea conference and endorsed the agreements on the use of best available technology and the precautionary principle: the results of this work will be discussed by Ministers at the forthcoming North sea conference in the Hague next March.

The Paris commission continues to provide a valuable forum for developing measures for the protection of the north-east Atlantic waters.

Seals (Deaths)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a table listing the monthly recorded details of deaths of seals, since June 1988, in United Kingdom coastal waters and beaches, broken down by areas covered by the water authorities.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will write to the hon. Member.

World Clean Air Congress

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations at, and papers for, the World Clean Air Congress to be held in the Hague on 11 to 15 September will be prepared by his Department.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Water Byelaws

Dr. Blackburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, following his recent meeting with the president and vice-president of the British Bathroom Council, he will make a statement on the water byelaws.

Mr. Howard: European Community procedures to harmonise product standards are not intended to change traditional practices which do not present barriers to trade. New European standards will specify different levels of performance for water fittings to suit the requirements of individual member states. In these circumstances, the United Kingdom water byelaws will continue in operation.

Housing Improvements

Mr. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) general improvement areas and (b) housing action areas have been declared, per year, in each of the last 10 years; how many dwellings there have been in general improvement areas and housing action areas, per year, in each of the last 10 years; how many grants have been approved in general improvement areas and housing action areas, per year, in each of the last 10 years; and how many works have been completed in general improvement areas and housing action areas, per year, in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Chope: Information on numbers of dwellings for which grants have been paid and total numbers of dwellings on which work has been completed inside general improvement areas and housing action areas in the 11 years up to 1986-87 is published in table 7.6 of "Housing and Construction Statistics 1977-1987". A copy is available in the Library.

It is estimated that in 1987-88, 4,300 dwellings in housing action areas benefited from grants, and work was completed on 5,700 dwellings in such areas. The equivalent figures for general improvement areas are 15,600 and 22,900 respectively.

The other information requested is as follows:

| | Housing action areas | | General improvement areas | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Number of areas declared | Number of dwellings in areas | Number of areas declared | Number of dwellings in areas |
| 1979-80 | 109 | 28,413 | 89 | 16,550 |

Pollution Inspectorate

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many people employed by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution have (a) resigned, (b) taken early retirement, (c) taken voluntary redundancy and (d) left for other reasons since January 1988;

(2) if he will publish the headquarters address and telephone number of each regional office of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution; on what date each will become operational; if he will give full details of all full and part-time posts for each office; if he will itemise each post on the current establishment which has been vacant or unfilled in each of the proceeding 12 months; and which posts in each region were vacant on 25 July or unfilled.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Paper (Phosphates)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will in future print Government publications on paper which does not require environmentally hazardous phosphates for its production; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Government publications generally are handled by Her Majesty's Stationery Office, for which responsibility rests with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The environmental impact of phosphates depends on the circumstances in which they are discharged. There is no widespread problem of environmental pollution by phosphates in this country.

Football Membership Scheme

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he intends giving guidelines to the proposed Football Membership Authority about what would lead to a disqualification from the national membership scheme for football for a supporter, other than a relevant conviction; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what consultations he has had, or proposes to have with police and emergency services concerning whether, under the proposals of the proposed Football Spectators Bill and associated national membership scheme, clubs should be able to open exit gates before the end of a football match; and as to the siting of neutral supporters and if he will make a statement;

(3) what consultations he is having concerning what guidance might be given to football clubs and to the proposed Football Membership Authority as to what constitutes a disabled person under clause 5(2)(c) of the Football Spectators Bill and as to how football clubs should check if a child is under or over the age of 10 years in order to grant exemption from membership under clause 5(2)(c) of the Bill;

(4) what consultations he proposes to undertake concerning by what means the identity of a cardholder, under the proposed national membership scheme for football will be checked against the card on entry to the ground; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what discussions he has had with (i) the football clubs and (ii) any other organisation concerning financial assistance to those who cannot afford the price of a card under the proposed national membership scheme for football; and if he will make a statement;

(6) what guidance he proposes to issue to clubs at the commencement of the proposed national membership scheme for football registration as to what grounds for denial of membership there would be; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Subject to parliamentary approval of the Football Spectators Bill and the commencement orders for which it provides, it will be for the Football Membership Authority to prepare the national membership scheme required by the Bill. It is the Government's hope that a body set up by the Football Association and the Football League will be appointed as the Football Membership Authority. The football authorities have established a joint working party to prepare the development of the scheme, in consultation with my Department and the police and other bodies as necessary.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) on what occasions he met representatives of football supporters before publishing the Football Spectators Bill; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he proposes to consult the Police Federation and Association of Chief Police Officers concerning the proposed national football membership scheme; if he will also consult the Football Supporters Association; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The Association of Chief Police Officers was represented on the working party which I chaired last summer on the national membership scheme. I and my officials discussed the scheme with representatives of the Police Federation in December 1988 and February this year and I shall be meeting the chairman of the federation again next week. The Government and the football authorities will continue to consult the police on the development of the scheme.

I met the Football Supporters Association and the National Federation of Football Supporters Clubs twice last year, before the publication of the Bill, and I made it clear to the Standing Committee considering the Bill that I would consider the possibility of involving representatives of the football supporters organisations directly in the running of the Football Membership Authority.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he is conducting concerning the legal structure of the proposed Football Membership Authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: I told the Standing Committee considering the Football Spectators Bill that I would consider further the question of the constitution of the Football Membership Authority and would bring forward appropriate amendments to the Bill at its Report stage.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received seeking restriction on the numbers of temporary identity cards issued by football clubs under the proposed national membership scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Moynihan: None.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department undertook which led him to state on 27 June Official Report, column 848, that the number of clubs likely to be put out of business by the proposed national membership scheme for football will be zero; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: There is no reason why the national membership scheme should put any football club out of business. Even without commercial exploitation of the scheme, the cost of high technology membership cards to individual supporters need be no more than £3·30 a year at current costs. There are few grounds in the country where spectators would pay less than that to watch one match. Indeed, if football clubs take a positive attitude to the potential of the national membership scheme, it can provide a commercial benefit to both them and their supporters.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department undertook which caused him to reject the advice of the Football League, the Association of Chief Police Officers, the Football Association, the Professional Footballers Association and the Football Supporters Association as to the impractical nature of a comprehensive national membership scheme for football.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The Association of Chief Police Officers, the Football League and the Football Association were all members of my working party on the national membership scheme which met last summer. They agreed a number of recommendations on the practical nature of a national membership scheme. I have also discussed the scheme with representatives of the Football Supporters Association, the National Federation of Football Supporters Clubs and the Professional Footballers Association.

Resource Reallocation (Bedfordshire)

Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of money being transferred from Bedfordshire county council, Mid-Bedfordshire district council and South Bedfordshire district council by way of resource reallocation in the current financial year; what are the estimated figures for those three authorities in the years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Resource equalisation is one of the factors affecting the distribution of block grant. In order to estimate the effect of this factor alone, I have assumed that each local authority in England is spending at the level of its grant-related expenditure assessment. On that basis, I estimate that in 1989-90 there would have been an implicit transfer of £7·2 million from domestic ratepayers in Mid Bedfordshire (£2·1 million) and South Bedfordshire (£5·1 million) to ratepayers in other parts of the country.

Resource equalisation based on rateable values will end with the introduction of the new grant system in April 1990. There will, however, be a temporary safety net to phase in these arrangements.

Youth Sport (Advisory Committees)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to encourage local authorities to establish advisory committees for youth sport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The School Sport Forum, which was established at the request of my right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Education and Science, recommended that county and metropolitan district councils should appoint advisory committees for youth sport. My right hon. Friends are considering this and the other recommendations of the forum.

Regent's Park

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) from whom the Crown Estate Commissioners received a request to extend the gardens of St. John's Lodge in Regent's park as set out by John Nash;

(2) if he will list the organisations which occupy property in Regent's park on lease from the Crown Estate Commissioners together with the locations and acreage of the property concerned.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: These are matters for the Crown Estate Commissioners.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what proposals have been made to London Zoo concerning the management of the running track in Regent's park;

(2) whether there have been any consultations with the Bengali Sports Council about the proposal to include the running track in Regent's park in the land taken over by London Zoo;

(3) whether the staff of Regent's Park or his Department have consulted any of the users of sports facilities in Regent's Park about its future management.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We await the Zoological Society of London's detailed proposals for the further 10 acres of Regent's park that it would like to lease under the terms of the Crown Estate Act 1961. Any impact on sports facilities will be considered very carefully and kept as far as possible to a minimum.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Crown Estate Commissioners made an informal inquiry to his Department in relation to the reinstatement of the original garden of St. John's Lodge, Regent's Park; and when they were told the formal request would not be looked on favourably.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The informal inquiry was made in February this year and the response by the Department in July.

Land (Licences)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many licences for the use of land under his responsibility have been granted in 1989-90 before the terms were agreed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I shall write to the hon. Member.

New Parliamentary Building

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a progress report on phase I of the new parliamentary building now being constructed in Parliament street.

Mr. Chope: Under the terms of the contract let to Fairclough Building Ltd. in May 1987, construction of the building was required to be completed in May 1990. Although the work was already behind schedule, until January 1989 the contractor assured the Department that it saw no reason why the contract should not be completed on time, though it would be in a better position to report following a review in April 1989. Following that review the contractor has now reported that, unfortunately, the work will not be completed until October 1990, a delay of five and a half months. On the assumption that Fairclough Building Ltd. achieve its revised forecast the building will not now be ready for occupation until the Easter recess, 1991.

I have provided the New Building Sub-Committee with a detailed report on how this situation has developed and the action that has been taken. I understand that the Sub-Committee will be taking evidence after the House returns from the summer adjournment.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he hopes to answer the letter from the hon. Member for South Hams of 3 March to the Under-Secretary, enclosing one from Major E. G. M. Pearce, dated 27 February; and if he will make a statement as to the reasons for the delay.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 13 June 1989]: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Pedestrians (Accident Compensation)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many claims were made against local authorities in each of the years, 1988, 1987, 1986 and 1985 after accidents to pedestrians as a result of defects in roads and pavements; what proportion were accepted by the local authorities and their insurers; how much was paid out in compensation; and what advice his Department gives local authorities about dealing with such claims.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 26 June 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Northamptonshire County Council (Committees)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when a reply will be sent to the letter of 22 May from Councillor J. G. Vane to the Minister for Local Government concerning the committee structure of Northamptonshire county council.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 7 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Protected Species

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he has any proposals to issue licences for traditional pearl fishing in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has considered proposals to place the freshwater mussel (Margaritisera margaritisera) on the schedule of the Wildlife and Countryside Act, 1981 as a protected species; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 11 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Gipsy Sites

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any representations from Leicester city council about proposals to designate gipsy and travellers' sites in Leicester.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 21 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Drinking Water

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what information he has as to the maximum permitted level of Atrazine in drinking water in (a) France, (b) the Federal Republic of Germany and (c) Italy; and what is the comparable figure for the United Kingdom;

(2) what information he has as to the maximum permitted levels of (a) trichlorethylene, (b) chloroform and (c) tetrachlorcarbon, in drinking water in (i) France and (ii) the Federal Republic of Germany; and what are the comparable figures for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 24 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Special Waste (Dumping)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has ordered a full investigation into the circumstances in which special waste from a disused gas works in Woking, Surrey, have to be dumped in a field outside Chobham; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 24 July 1989]: No. This is a matter for the local waste disposal authority to investigate under the Control of Pollution Act 1974.

Loud Music

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with local authorities to encourage them to use the existing laws under the Control of Pollution Act to stop the playing of loud music in residential areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 24 July 1989]: This issue has not been discussed with local authorities recently. Noise nuisance in whatever form can be a most unwelcome intrusion into people's lives and a great source of annoyance. Local authorities have extensive powers under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 to control noise when necessary.

Retail Developments (West Midlands)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding retail development on industrial land in the west midlands; whether he will meet a delegation from the West Midlands council's planning and transportation subcommittee to discuss the variations to the regional strategic guidance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 24 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Clyde Submarine Base

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the contracts signed with the names of the successful contractors and the value of each of the contracts for those elements of the construction of the new facilities at the Clyde submarine base and the number and location of the jobs created by these contracts.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 25 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Water Supply

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the dates and occasions when there has been a major breakdown in public water supply in each of the regional water authorities since their inception, together with a note concerning each relevant cause.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 26 July 1989]: This information is not held centrally at present. However, I expect the drinking water inspectorate, when established, to keep a record of major breakdowns in public water supply.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment under what powers Her Majesty's Government will require suppliers of water to retain a given proportion of storage, filtration and other machinery and plant as standby capacity for occasional use in the event of human, mechanical, or biological failures or accidents.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 25 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Hampton Water Treatment Works

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a schedule of plant or equipment, sometime in the ownership of Thames water authority, which, if in commission, could have ameliorated or prevented, the recent failures arising from difficulties at the Hampton treatment works, for what reasons such plant was made redundant; and what steps that authority is now taking to reactivate such facilities or to install stand-by capacity.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 26 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Midge Fly Infestation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state each of the occasions when midge fly infestation, or similar cause, has interrupted public water supplies and the remedial or preventative action subsequently taken; and what future capital expenditure is contemplated by any regional water authoritiy to reduce risk of failures due to this cause.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 26 July 1989]: Midge fly infestation was a major cause of the failure of water supplies in south-east London recently, but I am not aware that such infestation has interrupted public water supplies previously.

Thames Water will be making a report to me on the recent incident and the report will be studied to see what lessons can be learnt for the future.

Environmental Assessments

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his answer of 20 June, Official Report, column 70, he will make copies of the decision letters available in the Library when he directs that environmental assessment is, or is not, required.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 27 July 1989]: Letters containing directions on whether or not environmental assessment is required for particular projects are placed on the appropriate local planning register where they are available for public inspection. My Department is making arrangements under which information about decisions on the need for environmental assessment will be made more widely available by being published in the Journal of Planning and Environment Law. If the hon. Member wishes to see any particular decision letter I would be happy to send it to her.

Street Cleaning and Litter (Halton)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has ever received any applications from Halton borough council under the urban programme for assistance for street cleaning and anti-litter operations.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 27 July 1989]: An application for urban programme support for an anti-litter campaign in Halton was approved in March 1983.

Leaflets

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his answer on leaflets on 19 June, Official Report, column 51, he will publish an update of the letters he sent to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East on 23 June.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 27 July 1989]: Most of the information remains as set out in the letter of 23 June from my right hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Coastal (Mr. Gummer). In order to meet high demand, however, certain leaflets have subsequently been reprinted. The new figures for these are set out below.

| Title | Print run | Production costs[1] £ |
|---|---|---|
| You and the Community Charge: Your Step-by-Step Guide | 1,950,000 | 136,200 |
| The Business Rate leaflet | 235,000 | 23,800 |
| Exemptions leaflet | 581,000 | 34,000 |
| Second Homes leaflet | 240,000 | 14,900 |
| Rebates leaflet | 550,000 | 39,600 |

[1] All figures are rounded.

The final cost of the distribution of the short leaflet to all households is now likely to be approximately £565,000 rather than the estimated £560,000 quoted in the letter.

The cost of hiring display units in Crown post offices for the same leaflet has increased from £26,000 to £28,500 largely because of the extra costs incurred by the Post Office in temporarily withdrawing the leaflet during the court case initiated by Greenwich borough council.

African Elephants

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement regarding Her Majesty's Government's response to the outcome of the second meeting of the CITES African elephant working group held in Botswana from 4 to 8 July.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The Government support the group's decision to seek a consensus of the African range states on a proposal to be made at the next conference.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have taken place with the Hong Kong authorities in respect of CITES conference resolution 5.11; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to my recent answer—Official Report, Volume 156, column 477. Our discussions are continuing and will cover the full implications of appendix I listing.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to commission studies into the feasibility of transferring African elephants from countries with a surplus to those where elephants are endangered.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: We would consider assisting with such research only if asked to do so by the African countries concerned. We have received no such requests.

Football Matches (Attendance)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to what he attributes the rises in attendance at football matches over the last three seasons.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 27 July 1989]: A number of measures to counter football hooliganism have been taken over the past few years as a result of Government and public pressure. These include stronger police co-ordination both nationally and internationally, more co-operation between the police and football clubs, effective segregation of rival groups of supporters inside grounds and the introduction of closed-circuit television. The Government have also legislated to restrict the sale of alcohol at football grounds and to empower the courts to impose exclusion orders on convicted hooligans.

These measures have clearly contributed to the small rise in attendances at football matches over the last three seasons.

The further anti-hooliganism measures proposed by the Football Spectators Bill offer the prospect of attracting back to football many more of the millions of spectators who have been deterred from attending matches since the 1960s.

Nile Crocodiles

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all applicants for licences under CITES regulations to import products made from the Nile crocodile in the period 1 March to 30 April 1989; and if he will state the country of origin and port of entry in each case.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: Details of individual import applications are confidential and cannot be released.

Energy Control (House of Commons)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he applied to veto investment by the Property Services Agency in an energy control system for the House of Commons as described in the recent report from the Energy Select Committee on the spending plans of the Department of Energy.

Mr. Chope: I will write to the hon. Member.

GLC Playing Fields (Sale)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the proposed sale of former Greater London council playing fields at South Oxley, Hertfordshire; and what action he is taking to ensure continued public access and use.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has received two representations expressing concern about the future of the playing fields, which lie within the green belt. The London residuary body is discussing their future with Three Rivers district council. No action by my right hon. Friend is contemplated.

Housing Policies (Camden)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the London borough of Camden's housing policies, with particular reference to its rent arrears and its right-to-buy progress.

Mr. Howard: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Planning

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to improve the efficiency of the planning system in dealing with planning applications and appeals.

Mr. Howard: The Government want the planning system to be effective in its function of regulating the use of land in the public interest, and efficient in its operation so that it does not impose unwarranted delays on development. Many planning authorities are failing to deliver an efficient service. There is a clear need for reform of some aspects of the system, to ensure that it is better focused to deal with the more significant development proposals and that adequate resources are available to do a proper job.

My right hon. Friend has published today a consultation paper "Efficient Planning" setting out a range of proposals which would improve the operation of the planning system.

The Government believe that it is a sound principle that those who seek planning permission should meet the cost of considering their development proposals. The paper therefore sets out proposals for the introduction of fees for planning appeals, and for increased levels of planning application fees.

The paper also contains proposals for local planning authorities to be able to give general permissions for specified types of development, which could remove the requirement for planning applications; and for planning permission to be granted automatically for development by householders if the local planning authority had not issued its decision in eight weeks.

Other proposals include a power enabling local planning authorities to turn away repetitious planning applications for developments substantially the same as schemes already rejected on appeal. There are also a number of proposals for minor changes to planning legislation which would improve its operation.

Most of the measures proposed would require primary legislation. The overall effect of the proposals would be to reduce the burden of development control procedures, and increase the resources available to operate the system effectively.

I am inviting views on these proposals by 29 September. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales will be consulting about the introduction of similar measures.

Cryptosporidium

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received the report of the group of experts on cryptosporidium in water supplies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Sir John Badenoch, chairman of the group of experts, wrote to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 25 July 1989 to present the group's interim report. Copies of the letter have been placed in the Library. The establishment of the group was announced on 2 March 1989, at column 286, and an interim report was requested by the end of July.

The interim report says that the organism cryptosporidium has a worldwide distribution. Although it has long been recognised as a parasite of animals, it was not until 1976—a little over a decade ago—that it was shown to be capable of producing illness in man. Infected animals including man excrete the organism in their faeces in the form of minute oocysts which may cause infection if they are ingested.

In man, cryptosporidiosis is usually characterised by a self-limiting illness with diarrhoea, abdominal cramps, vomiting and sometimes fever that resolves in one to three weeks. It can affect persons of any age but is most common in children between the ages of one and five years. In patients with AIDS, and others whose resistance to infection is impaired, it is much more serious and may lead to severe and lasting disability.

Because of the organism's widespread distribution, the group indicates that it must be assumed that, from time to time, oocysts will be present in all surface waters including springs and shallow wells. Current methods of water treatment and disinfection properly carried out cannot eliminate entirely the risk of cryptosporidium passing into the water supply.

However, though the group recognises the potential that exists for giving rise to a very large number of cases through public water supplies it points out that an individual is much more likely to contract the infection if he comes into direct contact with the faeces of an infected person or animal.

The letter points to the need for high standards of maintenance and repair of water distribution systems, for extra monitoring at water treatment works in certain circumstances and for some modification of operating procedures should the organism be detected in significant numbers. Close collaboration between water undertakers, local authorities and health authorities is advocated. A co-ordinated programme of research is proposed for gathering information on the occurrence of cryptosporidium and the capacity of water treatment works to remove it.

I am advised that the expert group has spent considerable time examining the more general public health aspects of cryptosporidiosis and will make a fuller report in due course. In its interim report it identifies those most as risk from contracting the disease and puts forward simple precautions for prevention.

My right hon. Friends welcome the interim report and are grateful to Sir John and his colleagues for the considerable effort they have made so far in undertaking this study. The Departments will draw the attention of water undertakers, local authorities, health authorities and other organisations to the interim conclusions and recommendations. Ways of undertaking the proposed research are already under consideration.

London Zoo (Car Park)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the licence to London Zoo for Gloucester Slips park;

(2) what is the term of the licence of Gloucester Slips car park to London Zoo.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A copy will be placed in the Library. The licence will follow the standard form used for all licences in the royal parks. Licences are normally renewed from year to year and I would expect that to be the case for this licence, but my right hon. Friend has no power to grant licences in perpetuity.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment under what statutory authority his Department has granted a licence to London Zoo to use the Gloucester Slips car park.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The licence to manage the Gloucester Slips coach and car park will be given under my right hon. Friend's powers of management and control of the royal parks under the Crown Lands Acts 1829 and 1851.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the acreage of the Gloucester Slips car park to be covered in the licence to London Zoo.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Six and a half acres.

District Heating

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Building Research Establishment applied its own guidance which it gives to local authorities on the upgrading of district heating systems to itself in deciding to remove its own district heating system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Homelessness

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ealing, North of 19 July, Official Report, column 210, on homelessness legislation, by what date he expects to publish his conclusions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has nothing to add to the earlier answer.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people by London borough are described as homeless; and what plans he has to deal with this problem.

Mr. Chope: Latest estimates of households accepted as homeless in each London borough appear in table 7 of "Local Authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England", compiled by the Department. A copy is in the Library.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is reviewing the legislation and hopes to announce conclusions soon.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by London borough the number of people in bed-and-breakfast accommodation for each of the past five years.

Mr. Chope: The numbers of households temporarily resident in bed and breakfast accommodation as reported by each London borough at the end of the five years 1984 to 1988 appear in respectively: table 7 of "Homeless Households Reported by Local Authorities in England: Results for Second Half 1984: Supplementary Tables"; the corresponding publication for the fourth quarter 1985; "Local Authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the fourth quarter 1986. Supplementary Tables"; and the corresponding publications for the fourth quarters of 1987 and 1988.

Latest reported numbers of households in bed and breakfast accommodation appear in table 7 of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the first quarter 1989. Supplementary Tables".

Copies of all these publications are in the Library.

Thames Water Authority (Land)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about (a) total land holdings, (b) annual land sales and (c) income generated from it for the Thames water authority in each of the last five years.

Mr. Howard: At the end of 1988, the Thames water authority's estimated land holding was approximately 19,000 acres. Figures for proceeds from the sale of fixed assets are included in the published accounts of all water authorities, for years up to and including 1987-88. The unaudited accounts of the Thames water authority recently placed on public deposit included a figure for proceeds from sale of fixed assets in 1988-89 of £19·9 million. Figures for acreage of land sold in past years by Thames water authority are available from annual reports.

Housing Investment

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much each local authority has spent in capital expenditure on housing investment for each year since 1979.

Mr. Chope: I have today placed a table giving the relevant information as reported by authorities on their annual HIP returns, in the Library.

Vacant Properties

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much of the special housing investment programme enhancements to local authorities to use for bringing empty properties into accommodation units for the homeless has been taken up by local authorities (a) in total and (b) by each local authority; and how many units have been brought into use by the homeless as a result.

Mr. Chope: The additional resources, totalling £74·9 million, were fully taken up, and local authorities advise that as a result some 7,700 units have been brought back into use for homeless people.

For details of individual authorities' allocations, I refer the hon. Member to the announcements made on 20 January, 23 June and 18 July 1988.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the expected outcome of the additional housing investment programme enhancement in 1987-88 for bringing empty property into use by the homeless; what are the revised figures for how many will be made available under the housing investment programme enhancements in the current year; and if there are any plans for additional enhancements in the next financial year.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the announcement made on 20 January, 1988 which gives details of the numbers of units made available under this initiative in 1987-88. No additional allocations have been made in the current year, and no decisions have yet been taken for the next financial year.

HAT Tenants (Ballots)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the ballots for tenants in housing action trust areas will be held.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Norwood (Mr. Fraser) by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 24 May, Official Report, column 592.

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which tenants, in addition to secure tenants already provided for in the Housing Act 1988, will be able to vote in a housing action trust ballot.

Mr. Chope: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms. Harman).

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he intends to consult interested associations about the draft formulation of the formula rating for combined heat and power plant designed to ensure equal rating treatment with the electricity supply industry;

(2) when he intends to set out the new arrangements for the equal rating treatment of combined heat and power with district heating as against the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Chope: My officials are in discussion with the interested associations about a formula that will ensure the comparable rating assessment of all generators of electricity, including combined heat and power schemes from 1990, and we expect to announce our proposals for the new arrangements shortly.

Council House Sales

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider extending the Housing Act right to buy provisions to council-owned property let to the elderly on the basis that it must be sold back to the local authority at the current value when it is no longer required by the named occupant or their spouse.

Mr. Chope: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Evictions

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many eviction orders there have been in the private rented sector among those tenancies with restricted landlord-tenant contracts since the introduction of the Housing Act 1980.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is not available.

Approved Landlords

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many organisations have been granted approved landlord status under the Housing Act 1980 to the latest available date; how many had provided tenancies; and of these how many were in sheltered housing-for-sale schemes.

Mr. Chope: A total of 370 organisations were approved under section 56 of the Housing Act 1980 before it was repealed. The Department carried out a monitoring exercise on the assured tenancy scheme last year, the results of which were placed in the Library. That exercise identified 76 approved bodies which were actually letting under assured tenancies. A substantial proportion of the accommodation provided is sheltered housing for the elderly—the Department does not have precise figures.

Demolition

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average number of dwellings demolished per year in England and Wales since 1979; and what proportion of these were private rented dwellings.

Mr. Chope: The available information for England is as follows:

| | Number of dwellings/Percentage | |
|---|---|---|
| | Net total demolished or closed (including slum clearance) | Percentage of which in private sector (including owner occupied) |
| 1979-80 | [1]37,300 | [2]— |
| 1980-81 | 38,900 | 62 |
| 1981-82 | 35,200 | 56 |
| 1982-83 | 24,800 | 54 |
| 1983-84 | 20,300 | 46 |
| 1984-85 | 26,600 | 38 |
| 1985-86 | 17,900 | 50 |
| 1986-87 | 16,000 | 45 |
| 1987-88[3] | 16,000 | 40 |
| Average over period 1980-81 to 1987-88 | 24,500 | 51 |

[1] Estimate.

[2] Not available.

[3] Provisional.

Note: Information for the private rented sector is not available.

For information on Wales, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Magnox Reactors

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ask the chairman of United Kingdom Nirex Ltd. to re-evaluate the benefits of the Bradwell nuclear reactor site for the construction of a repository for bulk radioactive wastes such as boiler, heat-exchangers and pipework from decommissioned Magnox reactors; and reactor components from submarines.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. The Government have accepted Nirex's recommendation that further exploratory work at Sellafield and Dounreay is necessary before any particular site for a disposal facility for low and intermediate-level radioactive waste can be decided upon. The facility is intended to accommodate both operational and decommissioning wastes. The Government intend to keep open the sea disposal option for low-level large items arising from decommissioning operations. Reactor components from submarines are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the current whereabouts and plans for future disposal of the 1,025 kilos of ivory exported from Zaire without a licence in June 1986 by Mr. Shivaz Virji of Ealing.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has no information about a consignment in June 1986.

Hazardous Wastes

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what initiatives he has taken at meetings of the European Council of Environment Ministers to ensure that proper border checks can be made on rail and road cargos of hazardous wastes at the joint borders of European Economic Community states following the creation of the European single market.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: National borders will still be relevant after the creation of the European single market in the control of shipments of waste. We have asked the Council of Environment Ministers to examine transborder shipments of all waste, not only of hazardous waste.

Uranium

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulatory regime covers the environmental protection of uranium wastes and depleted uranium stored at BNFL Springfields, Chapelcross, Capenhurst and Sellafield, United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority sites at Harwell, Windscale, Winfrith and Dounreay and each of the Central Electricity Generating Board's nuclear plant sites, and the Central Electricity Generating Board's research laboratories at Berkeley and Barnwood.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Regulatory control is exercised in respect of radioactive waste discharges and disposals from nuclear site operators by HMIP.

Radioactive wastes from nuclear sites are disposed of under the conditions and limitations of site specific authorisations issued under section 6 of the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 by the authorising Departments (DOE and MAFF). These authorisations, which are kept under regular review, require the operator to meet strict disposal limits and to use the best practicable means to further limit discharges. They are given only if the Secretary of State is satisfied about the effect of the discharges on the environment.

Radioactive Waste

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what volumes of low and intermediate-level radioactive wastes arising from reprocessed spent Magnox nuclear fuel from (a) the Latina reactor in Italy and (b) the Tokai Nura reactor in Japan are currently in store at (i) Harwell, (ii) Drigg, (iii) Sellafield, (iv) Chapelcross and (v) Aldermaston.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not kept by the Department. I have asked the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc to write to the hon. Member.

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what volumes of radioactive toxic and special wastes for which his Department has responsibility are located at Springfields and Capenhurst.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The volumes of radioactive waste located at Springfields and Capenhurst are contained in the United Kingdom radioactive waste inventory, a copy of which is held in the Library of the House. Details of toxic and special wastes are held by the appropriate waste disposal authority.

Environmental Protection

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many written questions on environmental protection and pollution issues he has declined to answer since May 1979 on the grounds that replies could be given only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No record is kept of the number of questions which are answered in this way.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will set out the investments made between 1974-79, and 1979 to the present respectively, by Her Majesty's Government in (a) energy conservation and efficiency, (b) detoxification of rivers and estuaries, (c) research into acid rain pollution, (d) radioactive waste management and disposal, (e) controlling air and aqueous radioactive discharges and (f) the reprocessing of nuclear fuel from foreign contracts;

(2) what percentage of United Kingdom gross national product has been devoted to environmental protection in each year since 1979; if he has comparable figures for each year from 1975 to 1979; and what information he has for the gross national product/environmental protection expenditure ratio in other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries for the same time period.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Water Pollution

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if water companies will be open to prosecution for events such as outbreaks of cryptosporidium in drinking water and cessation of water supplies due to midge larvae infestation after privatisation.

Mr. Howard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Sunderland Enterprise Zone

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, following the statement by the right hon. Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton) on 13 July, Official Report, columns 1148-57, he intends to proceed with the designation of the Sunderland enterprise zone.

Mr. Hunt: A fresh invitation to the Tyne and Wear development corporation to prepare an enterprise zone scheme has been issued today. This replaces the earlier invitation referred to in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Mr. Trippier) to my hon. Friend the Member for Sheffield, Hallam (Mr. Patnick) on 10 April, and incorporates revisions to the boundary of zone No. 1 covering land at Hylton riverside and Soundwick shipyard which were requested by the corporation. The effect of these is to replace a 10-acre site requiring much preparation with one that is ready for development. I am arranging for copies of the present invitation and map showing the land specified to be placed in the Library of the House. Meanwhile I understand that Sunderland borough council is continuing with steps towards the designation of those areas for which it is the enterprise zone authority (zone 2 at Castletown and zone 3 at Doxford park).

Water Bill

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will reply to the points raised in the debate on the Water Bill on 3 July by the hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes as promised by the Under-Secretary of State, Official Report, column 85.

Mr. Moynihan: I wrote to my hon. Friend yesterday.

Strategic Planning (London)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now make a statement on strategic planning guidance for London.

Mr. Moynihan: I have placed copies of the strategic guidance for London in the Library today and will send my hon. Friend a copy.

I announced in the House that the guidance takes account of the comments received in consultation on the draft which the Secretary of State published on 6 March.

The purpose of the guidance is to help the local planning authorities in London to prepare their unitary development plans. It is not intended as a comprehensive "master plan" for London, but as a statement of the Government's policies on those matters relating to the development and use of land which need to be dealt with on a Londonwide basis. Within this framework, the guidance allows each borough wide freedom to draw up with the local community the unitary development plan for its area.

The guidance includes policies on business, industrial, retail and tourist development; road and rail infrastructure and the relationship between transport and land use; provision for additional housing for the next decade; protection of the green belt, metropolitan open land and other open spaces; conservation of the natural and the built environment; and preservation of the character of the River Thames.

The guidance marks an important further step away from the cumbersome, centralised planning of the 1960s and 1970s towards the effective and well-focused development plans London will need as it faces the opportunities of the 1990s.

Copies of the guidance are being sent to all London Members of Parliament.

Green Belt

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what circumstances the controls embodied in green belt policy can apply to uses of land as distinct from building development on it.

Mr. Moynihan: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any further plans to regulate the sale of products containing chlorofluorocarbons; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Production and supply of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) are already limited by the Montreal protocol, which should be amended next year so as to require their complete elimination by the year 2000. We will legislate against specific products only if industry fails to maintain its rapid reduction in CFC consumption.

Tropical Hardwoods

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the policy of the Property Services Agency in respect of the use of tropical hardwoods.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 20 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the 65 applications by the London residuary body to his Department for consent to dispose of properties by means of voluntary sales to licensee occupiers at discounted prices.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 27 July 1989]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Sea Levels

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been carried out by or on behalf of Her Majesty's Government to ascertain whether and to what extent sea levels can be expected to rise in the next 60 years as a result of the greenhouse effect; and what areas of the present United Kingdom coastline would be under water at the lowest and highest projections for sea levels.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 July 1989]: The Meteorological Office has made a major international contribution to modelling climate change including its impact on sea level. This work has contributed to the current consensus that the sea level rise which would follow a doubling of effective greenhouse gas concentrations could lie between 20 cm and about 1·5 m. Costs of defending the coastline increase with sea level rise.

The actual sea level rise over the next 60 years, and therefore the land area threatened, depends on the actual rate of increase in greenhouse gas concentrations. Providing the best available scientific advice on this and all other aspects of the greenhouse effect is the task of the intergovernmental panel on climate change, for which the science review panel is chaired by the Meteorological Office and funded by the Department of the Environment and the Department of Energy.

Beaches, South Wales

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which beaches along the South Wales coastline between Cardiff and the Gower peninsula conform to the water quality standards of Economic Community bathing water directive 76/160/EEC; and what consideration he has given to the merits of existing and proposed screened sewage outfalls along this coastline;

(2) which beaches on the south Wales coastline within 10 miles of Swansea attain the standards required under Economic Community bathing water directive 76/160/EEC.

Mr. Howard: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Director General of Water Services

Mr. Bevan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment where the office of the Director General of Water Services will be located.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to the reply, 23 March 1989, c. 782]: The Water Act creates a greatly improved system of regulating the water industry which will benefit the customer and the environment.

The appointment of the Director General of Water Services is a key component. As director, Ian Byatt will ensure that customers are protected against unnecessary price increases. At the same time he will ensure that the company have sufficient income to carry out their functions properly and to meet quality standards. He will encourage water companies to be more efficient. He will monitor standards of service. He will establish customer service committees which will investigate complaints and provide a forum for customers to put forward their views.

Financial provision is being made for the Office of Water Services in vote X.10 from 1 August. As previously announced, the office will begin operations in Birmingham on vesting day, 1 September.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number of single and married persons over and under pensionable age who are likely to qualify for a rebate of poll tax; and how many of these are likely to be worse off under the new arrangements than at present.

Mr. David Hunt: Estimates of numbers expected to receive community charge benefit are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

My Department placed in the Library detailed estimates of the impact of the new system on household finances on 15 December 1988.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table illustrating the estimated levels of the community charge in England and Wales in the current financial year if the cost of education were to be borne entirely by the Exchequer.

Mr. David Hunt: If the cost of education were to be funded by the Exchequer and in consequence an equal amount were deducted from the level of grant available to local authorities, the average community charge in England would be £274, as shown in the illustrative community charge levels placed in the Library on 19 July 1989. The level of community charge in each area would depend on the previous arrangements used to distribute the remaining Government grant and the proceeds of the uniform business rate.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what liability to poll tax young people over 18 years of age in recognised apprenticeship schemes will face; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what liability to poll tax those over 18 years of age who are placed with employment training and other training schemes will face; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The people to whom the hon. Member refers will be liable to pay the personal community charge at the address of their sole or main residence unless they are exempt under the terms of schedule 1 to the Local Government Finance Act 1988. Depending on their income, resources and personal circumstances they may be eligible for rebates of up to 80 per cent. of the charge; if they are full-time students as defined by the Personal Community Charge (Students) Regulations 1989 they would pay only 20 per cent. of the personal charge for the area.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of (a) the maximum and (b) the minimum initial standard community charge for each of the London boroughs.

Mr. David Hunt: I have made no estimate of the level of the community charge on introduction. Illustrative figures based on 1989-90 local government responsibilities and expenditure levels were placed in the Library on 19 July. The level of each class of standard community charge payable in each area will depend on the multiplier set by each charging authority.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update the answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East, 2 May, Official Report, column 50, listing all recent sources of legislation and official guidance on the operation of the community charge, and any further orders and regulations (a) laid before and agreed to by the House, (b) laid before, but not yet agreed to by the House or (c) yet to be laid before the House giving in each case an outline of the area of implementation affected.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each region the number of rated domestic premises in 1988-89, the estimated rate yield based on a charge of 1 per cent. of the capital value and the estimated cost of a rate-free deduction of, respectively, £10,000 per dwelling, £5,000 for each resident member as defined for electoral purposes, and £5,000 for each dependent resident.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 27 July 1989]: The table provides the information requested. Column 1 shows the number of domestic hereditaments as at 1 April 1988. Column 2 shows the yield from a 1 per cent. capital value tax, where the capital value is estimated by multiplying the average price for each region by the number of domestic hereditament properties. The average house price in each region was taken from the survey of building society mortgages. The costs of the three types of rate deduction are given in the following three columns. They are calculated by taking 1 per cent. of the products of:

(1) The number of hereditaments over £10,000.
(2) The 18-year-old and over population in each area and £5,000.
(3) The under 18-year-old population in each area and £5,000.

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to announce a minimum threshold percentage of eligible residents registered for the community charge prior to exercising his powers of central control.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Coastal (Mr. Gummer) explained in his answer of 25 July to my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) that where there is doubt as to whether community charge register data give a realistic estimate of an area's adult population, we propose to adopt an alternative for the purpose of calculating the relevant population to be used for distributing grant and business rates. We will be discussing with the local authority associations the criteria which might be used to identify doubtful cases.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will indicate the detailed components used in calculating the expenditure needs of each local authority in England and Wales, and the method then used in establishing supposed overspending, in arriving at the indicative community charge figures given to the House on 19 July.

Mr. David Hunt: The method used to calculate the overspending figures contained in the table showing illustrative 1989-90 community charges is detailed in the explanatory notes accompanying that table.

Overspending was measured by comparison with grant related expenditure (GRE) assessment. The components used in calculating GRE's are set out in the Department's publication "The Technical Handbook of Grant-Related Expenditure 1989-90" which is available in the Library.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the assumed contributions, in cash terms, to local expenditure for each authority from (a) Government sources and (b) business rates in the tables contained in the document, "1989-90 Illustrative Capital Value Rates and Local Income Tax", published on 19 July.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given to him and to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 25 July.

Since data are not available for each local authority on either the capital value of domestic properties or on the taxable income of residents, I cannot provide the information requested.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the total cost, in cash terms, of producing, printing and distributing the document, "1989-90 Illustrative Capital Value Rates and Local Income Tax" which was published on 19 July;

(2) what was the total cost, in cash terms, of producing, printing and distributing the 22-sheet document, "Department of the Environment 1989-90 Illustrative Community Charges."

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Cirencester and Tewkesbury (Mr. Ridley) to the hon. Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Grocott) on 24 July.

The cost of providing sufficient copies for the Vote Office, the local authority associations and others is estimated to have been about £600. The 22-page document headed "Department of the Environment 1989-90 Illustrative Community Charges" included details of the impact of capital value rates combined with a local income tax. The document was distributed through the Department's normal channels.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to announce details of the rebate of up to 80 per cent. of the community charge to be made available to persons on low incomes; and when information on how to apply for such rebates will be sent to local authorities.

Mr. David Hunt: I will write to my hon. Friend.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES

VOLUME 157

SESSION 1988–89

18th July–28th July 1989

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
